12 Police Cars Used For Road Blocks

Police Seal Off Bush Seeking To Trap Bandits

Robbers Abandon Two Stolen Luxury Cars

HAVELOCK (CP) — Police searched the bush country 25 miles north of here today, seeking to trap four bandits who robbed a Havelock bank of more than $185,000 in cash and securities.

Sixty provincial and community policemen in nearly 20 cruisers were being used to block every possible escape route from dense, damp bush at Coe Hill.

Shotguns were issued to the officers and residents at farms and cottages in the sparsely populated area were warned to lock their doors and report all strangers.

Police said they believe at least three of the bandits were from the hookup-plagued Montreal area. Two of them were described as French-speaking.

The men abandoned their stolen luxury cars, wrecked or badly damaged, in their flight after the Thursday holdup, and a provincial police car was wrecked chasing them.

WORE HOODS

The men entered the Toronto-Dominion Bank branch by a side door at 9:15 a.m. All were woollen hoods over their faces and plans carried details while the fourth had an automatic. 22-calibre rifle of the type used as an RCAF survival gun.

They picked the best time to hit the bank. It was pay day for CPR employees and other large firms in the area in the 2 miles east of Peterborough.

Herring manager George Mitchell and six others lined one corner of the bank, they forced teller William Lindup to open the safe and jammed all cash bag with $85,000 in cash and more than $100,000 in securities.

Speeding north along a winding secondary road, they were spotted by provincial police Constable Jack McKendry as police converged on Havelock from half-dozen communities.

McKendry overtook the car and attempted to sideswipe it

Provincial police from headquarters districts at Belleville and Peterborough today have cordoned off the dense Ridge Road bush area south of Coe Hill where they believe the four bank robbers who yesterday held up the Havelock branch of the Toronto-Dominion bank are hiding out.

Police at Belleville said more than two dozen police officers armed with shotguns and rifles, are guarding roads leading out of the area.

Twelve police cars are being used in the search — eight on road block duty and four patrolling the Ridge Road south of Coe Hill, where the bank robbers fled their 1961 model car after ripping off the tires on the rough back country road.

The Havelock bank was robbed at opening time Thursday morning when the four armed men — at least two of them females — walked in and held up the bank staff and escaped with the record $185,000.

TWO CARS WRECKED

The car and a pursuing police cruiser were wrecked on the country road 25 miles north of Havelock, the bank robbers taking to the bush.

A second car used by the bank robbers, a 1961 Chrysler stolen in Montreal, but bearing Ontario licence plates was found abandoned along the Ridge Road southwest of Coe Hill, Bob Gray, on No. 62 Highway, as well as along No. 620 and 620A between Coe Hill and on the Old Hastings Road.

$14,000 Taken By Three Masked Gunmen

MONTREAL (CP) — Three masked gunmen Thursday held up a Bank of Montreal branch in suburban Pointe Claire and escaped with $14,000 in paper shopping bags.

The three, armed with pistol and a sawed-off shotgun, herded only three minutes to complete the robbery. They fired a shot into the wall to show they meant business then ordered the customers and staff to lie on the floor.

One man then stood guard while the other two cleaned out cash drawers.

The three had been spotted by radio announcer Stu Morrison, who walked across a parking lot towards the studios of radio station CFOJ above the bank.

As he entered the bank to warn the staff, the three were right behind him. They shoved a pistol into Morrison's back and forced him to lie on the floor with the staff during the robbery.

Two Security Agents Aboard

MIAMI (AP)—A National Airlines plane arrived here from New York today with two federal security agents aboard after a tip it would be pirated.

The plane was delayed in takeoff while its 119 passengers were searched for arms but the flight finally arrived here without incident.

TITO DECLARES DANGER OF WAR REACHES CLIMAX

Urges Neutral Lands Act Through UN

By JOHN EARLE

BELGRADE (Reuters)—Host President Tito told the opening of a Yugoslav conference of 24 non-aligned countries today that the cold war has assumed proportions "liable to lead to the greatest tragedy at any moment."

Tito urged co-ordinated action by the non-aligned states, primarily through the United Nations, "to find a way out of the present situation and to prevent a world war — even military conflict."

East and West looked on with interest as the delegates met here amid an atmosphere of apprehension over Russia's decision to resume testing nuclear weapons.

Tito referred only in passing to the Russian decision in his 4,000-word opening speech. The keynote of the Yugoslav president's address was his warning of the danger of war breaking out at any time.

NEARS CLIMAX

He said that the preparations now being made clearly showed that the danger of military conflict "has reached the climax."

"Overt preparations for war are being made; mobilization is taking place, the manufacture of the most up-to-date weapons is being intensified, hunger and atomic weapons tests are again being commenced. . . ."

Tito called for the gradual dismantling of existing military blocs and the settlement of outstanding international issues through the UN.

He said the countries attending this conference represented "the conscience of mankind."

The purpose of the conference was to demonstrate "to the protagonists of force that the majority of the world does not rest in their hands alone.

Habib Bourguiba, Master of the United Arab Republic expressed "deep regret" at the decision of Russia to resume nuclear testing and said it was "a shock to me and to world public opinion."

CONSIDER NUCLEAR

Russia's decision to resume nuclear tests was expected to loom large over the discussions here.

The opinion of most of them was believed to have been expressed by Prime Minister Nehru of India, who told reporters Thursday he was a "frightened" leader at any time in any place."

Monty Is 'Not in Least' Alarmed, Certain There Will Be No War

LONDON (AP)—Field Marshal Viscount Montgomery today dismissed the possibility of another global conflict.

Asked by reporters if the British military chief was alarmed, the British wartime commander replied:

"Not in the least, because I do not think the East has any intention of starting the West and I do not think the West has any intention of attacking the East."

Montgomery talked to reporters before flying to Communist China for a meeting with the leaders. He called on the West to "stop talking about Communist regime and said he "would like to see the political leaders of the West have the courage to make a completely new start" to solve the armaments problem."

He said it was like to see the armed forces of all countries get back into their own countries." (Reuters).

Asked his reaction to the Soviet Union's announcement it will resume nuclear testing, the field marshal replied:

"I don't bother about it. It's part of the suspicion and mistrust. If you could get an agreement about going home, you could get an agreement about everything.

"We have been occupying other countries for 17 years. I think it's time for us to be able to come back."

Brazilian Armies Massing Hundreds of Miles Apart

SAO PAULO (AP) — Vice-President Joao Goulart today reached the fringe of the Brazilian border for a decision on whether to claim the presidency that could plunge South America's biggest country into civil war.

The 42-year-old vice-president landed in Montevideo, Uruguay—only about an hour's flying time from the border—as rival military forces jockeyed cautiously for position still hundreds of miles apart.

Brazil's three military chiefs, headed by War Minister Marshal Odylio Denys, announced Thursday a combined operation had been launched to subdue the pro-Goulart 3rd Army in the south—an area of Rio Grande do Sul, the vice-president's home.

There were reports of small-scale landings at several points but no fighting was reported.

Goulart, blackballed by the presidency by the military chiefs as Communist-oriented, told reporters in the Uruguayan capital his position is "shaping up good" as the nation's leadership created by the sudden resignation of President Janio Quadros seemed to near a showdown.

Quadros quit after seven months in office. He said there were too many obstacles in the way of his reform program.

Goulart has proclaimed in every step of his slow journey back from a Far Eastern tour that he is loyal to the Brazilian constitution, was returning to Brazil to assume the presidency.

The leftist Labor party leader emphasized he favors a constitutional government founded on Christian principles and said:

"I am not a Communist."

Marshal Denys, the army strongman masterminding the Brazilian government, was reported to have ordered the air force to patrol the Brazilian-Uruguayan border and later—except the vice-president's plane—to shoot down any flights. There was some speculation Goulart would travel overland.

He has assumed Goulart would go to Rio Grande do Sul, across the Uruguay River, Uruguayan where state Governor Leonel Brizola, Goulart's brother-in-law, and Gen. Jose Machado Lopes, commander of the 80,000-man 3rd Army, both back Denys and sided with the vice-president.

The newspaper Folha de Sao Paulo said 3rd Army forces had taken Passo Fundo, a rail and rail terminal less than 200 miles south of Sao Paulo, and

Ontario Retail Prices Up As New Tax Takes Effect

TORONTO (CP) — Retail prices in Ontario took a three-per-cent jump today — the amount the provincial government is expected to pour $150,000,000 a year into provincial government coffers.

Ontario stores, having experienced one of the biggest surpluses in their history before the new retail sales tax went into effect at midnight Thursday night, now have to finish training clerks to account for the tax.

The sales tax was a long time coming. Ontario is the last province—Alberta and Manitoba—to have resisted the trend to such taxes.

"Personally, I don't like any tax," Premier Frost told his annual conference Thursday, "but the logic of the situation demands that we get it."

With few exceptions, everything that costs money becomes more than 17 cents is taxable. Trying to figure out the taxable content is a job for mathematicians.

A sugar-coated doughnut (taxed) from candy (taxed). Plain or salted peanuts, for example, are tax-free. Chocolate-candy- or sugar-coated peanuts are taxable as confections.

Children's clothes are exempt with specific sizes mentioned in the tax regulations. But one store manager pointed out that a single pair of stretchy socks ranges from a child's size 7 to an adult's size 13.

The biggest headaches are likely to be in the supermarkets which carry a vast range of taxable and untaxable food. Cash register companies are working overtime to convert many machines to handle the extra total, separately the two types of sales.

Premier Frost blamed the tax on the "modern demands for education and welfare." The education department's budget has leaped to $250,000,000 this year from $8,000,000 in 1943.

District offices of the treasury department's taxation branch have been opened in nearly 20 cities throughout the province to handle queries and troubleshoot returns.

E. H. van Slyke, general manager of the Ontario Retail Merchants Association, estimated

School Superintendents Like New Education Plan

TORONTO (CP) — A random sampling of Ontario secondary school superintendents Thursday endorsed federal support for the province's newly - announced education plan for the secondary school system.

They agreed it will open new vistas for students of all capacities and lend prestige to courses where in some cases it has been lacking in the past.

The superintendents were questioned here during their annual three-day conference, much of which was devoted to working out details of the plan announced Monday by Education Minister Davis.

"One of the plan's big achievements," said Gordon Pallett, director of education for Fort William, "is to give technical and commercial courses the prestige and meaning that the academic course has enjoyed up to now."

Under the new plan, an arts and technical will replace the previous general or academic collegiate course. An engineering, technology and trades division will replace the present technical course, while the business and commerce course will be substituted for the commercial course.

Each of the divisions will have a four-year course for students going directly into business and industry and a five-year course for those going to university. The plan starts in Grade 9 in 1962 and continues one grade at a time for the next five years.

Cy Pleh, Kitchener-Waterloo superintendent, said parents often had insisted on an academic course for their children "because of the greater prestige involved."

"Then," said Windsor Superintendent Hugh Ord, "parents whose youngsters just couldn't make the grade academic course moved them into technical and commercial courses under the impression they'd be in for easier studies. This held back the quality commercial and technical students."

The result was frustration all around, with students dropping out of all classifications, Mr. Pleh said.

The expected shift into other divisions of some of the 90 to 76 per cent of students now generally in academic courses will increase the "holding power" of these courses on those who stay, said Dr. Harry Pollen, assistant superintendent of secondary schools in Ottawa. Another Ottawa superintendent, E. L. Crossley,

FIVE TIMMINS PEOPLE DROWN IN HOME, CAR

Torrential Rain Causes Flash Flood

TIMMINS (CP) — A young mother and four children were drowned early today when a torrential rain sent a creek over the ramparts through this town, flooding at least 100 homes.

Four of the dead were trapped in their water-filled basement apartment as they slept. The fifth, a month-old girl, was taken from the apartment to the basement early of a nearby car. The car soon became submerged and the infant died.

Police said Dwight Timmins by surprise, washed out many roads, secondary rail lines and highways. The entire southeast end of Timmins was flooded as nearly five inches of rain fell in 18 hours.

At least 30 families fled their dwellings. Others were able to remain on upper floors and to save some belongings from the rising water. One frame house was washed away and hydro facilities were disrupted.

WARD DIES

The dead: Mrs. Paul Girard, 31, three of her daughters, Mary Ann, one month, Lisa, 7, and Diane, 12, and a four-year-old boy named Donald Ward, son-in-ward of the Children's Aid Society and was living with the Girards.

Although the storm started Thursday morning, there was no hint that the creek, normally a shallow stream only a few feet wide which cuts through the southwest section of Timmins, would be unable to handle the runoff.

However, the rain began falling heavily about 8 p.m. A total of 2.26 inches fell before the rain stopped shortly after dawn.

Hardest hit was a six-block area near the creek in the Porcupine Town Creek by local residents.

The creek flows under a main avenue which backs on to the creek. About five nearby homes were overwhelmed as a crest of water rolled down the waterway after midnight and rose above water about four feet over its banks.

STREET 'SHAMBLES'

Police Chief Gordon Peacock said "it was a very grim thing to see. There was no warning at all. It just started to rain like mad around 11 o'clock and didn't stop until eight hours later."

Usual Exodus From Cities Begins For Summer's Last Holiday Fling

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Canadians began their usual exodus from cities and towns today for a fling at summer's last three-day holiday of 1961.

The Labor Day holiday, Another high fatality day is anticipated.

The Canadian Highway Safety Council estimates violent deaths will occur every 90 minutes. Most deaths likely will be on highways with persons heading for cottages and resorts.

A record 90 persons died accidentally during the three-day Victoria Day holiday in May on highways. In an effort to reduce the toll, police from Newfoundland to British Columbia have warned motorists they will crack down hard on erring motorists.

Thousands are leaving their cars at home and are lining up rail ticket offices across the country to purchase tickets.

Weather prospects seem generally favorable. Canadians should enjoy warm temperatures. The weekend outlook in Ontario:

Police will be out in force to help and halt the rising tide of death toll. Labor Day parades will be held but in Toronto Mayor Nathan Phillips has not been invited because he crossed the picket line of striking New York hotel to attend a dinner.

It is expected some 15,000 people will take an active part in the largest parade, in Toronto. Canada Jodoin, president of the Canadian Labor Congress, will be guest speaker at a banquet Monday evening.

In Ottawa, the city's top summer attraction, the changing of the guard ceremony on Parliament Hill, will end its nine-week run with a dismounting-of-the-guard ceremony Labor Day morning.

All Aboard Die In Fiery Wreck; Bomb Suspected

Big Airliner Explodes Minutes After Takeoff

CHICAGO (AP)—A TWA tourist-class airliner with several family groups aboard crashed and burned in a muddy corn-field today minutes after taking off for Los Angeles. All 78 persons aboard were killed.

The big four-engined Constellation exploded and caught fire as it plowed into the rain-soaked ground 10 miles west of Chicago's Midway airport.

It was the third worst U.S. commercial plane accident.

In Washington the FBI said it had started an investigation of the possibility that a bomb may have caused the crash. But several witnesses said they doubted that a bomb had been involved.

Most of the 73 passengers were embarking on Labor Day holiday visits. Seven were members of one Los Angeles family.

The plane left here at 7:45 p.m. Thursday. It was en route to Los Angeles with two made stops at New York, Pittsburgh and Chicago. It left Chicago at 8:30 p.m. and crashed about 10 minutes later.

STARTS TURN

Farmer Jerry Brox, whose house south of Hinsdale is only 150 yards from the wreckage, said he heard the plane roar overhead, then apparently start in a turn.

The big plane was heading almost due north when it struck. "I think it was trying to go land," Brox said. "It might have been done successfully with all the space here. But something was wrong."

The big jet's big explosion caused residents of the area to look first southward toward Argonne National Laboratories. The big Atomic Energy Commission installation is five miles southwest of the crash scene.

First reports indicating that the plane had exploded in the air were confirmed when belonged by several residents of the area.

Charles C. George said he heard the big ship's engines roar. "Then I looked through my bedroom window, and saw the plane's silhouette against the sky a number of times.

"There was a tremendous roar from the plane's engines," George said. "The next thing I knew was a big flash of flames as the plane hit the ground."

A spokesman said "We're not in any position to say anything, one way or the other. We're making a full investigation to determine whether there was any Federal law violation."

The dead included Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Maloney and their daughter Joyce, 16, of Los Angeles.

Another family group of five was that named Chamberlain from Palos Park, Calif.

Another family group of five was that of Mrs. Gordon Jodoin, Toronto, and her four young children.

TRANSPORT HITS HYDRO POLE

A tractor trailer owned by Canal Cartage of Hamilton, being driven by Douglas Bearfoot of Hamilton, was proceeding south on North Front St. last night when the driver attempted to make a right hand turn onto west Mohs St.

Police said the right rear corner of the trailer struck a hydro pole located on the north-west corner of the intersection, breaking it off and damaging the standard.

The damage was estimated at $250.

SUSPEND SENTENCE ON TWO YOUTHS FOR ONE YEAR

John Howard Fox and Kirk Downey, both of Belleville, were given alone-year suspended sentence in city magistrate's court this morning by Magistrate T. Y. Wills when they pleaded guilty to a charge of attempted breaking and entering of the Howard Kinnear Catering service on Bleecker Avenue. Evidence in the case was heard last week.

Magistrate Wills said he wasn't going to impose any conditions except neither of the two boys was to leave the Belleville area without first obtaining permission from their probation officer.

Mrs. Girard and the three children apparently made a frantic attempt to escape. Their bodies were found huddled at a rear door to the apartment, indicating the mother tried to guide the children to safety. A fire had penetrated the murky water to recover the bodies.

Roderique Lafreye, a roomer in the Girard house, said he was awakened at 12:30 a.m. by the father's screams. Lafreye ran downstairs and snatched Suzanne to safety.

When both men returned to the house, there was too much water in the basement for them to attempt further rescue. The house, located on a slope, acted as a sort of catch basin for the flood waters.

CALL TO MOTHER

Police chief Lafrance said that Mrs. Girard managed to get the baby out the door but was cut off by a wall of water.

Lightning accompanying the storm struck several homes, setting them ablaze. The fires were put out fairly quickly.

There was no immediate estimate of property damage, but officials said it will be heavy. In addition to hydro lines being knocked down, gas services were disrupted.

"This is the worst storm we have ever had in this town," said Chief Peacock. "Emergency firemen and policemen were on duty all night."

The creek is about eight miles long and runs into the Mattagami River, which flooded in the spring of 1960. At that time most of Mountjoy Township was inundated but no lives were lost.

The homeless were taken early Sunday to private homes and the Salvation Army depot.

Members of Press Go Along For Ride As RCAF Makes Practice Run for CNE Show

Preparations for a mass air show such as scheduled for the Canadian National Exhibition for today and Saturday is almost as detailed as that required for an intricate wartime manoeuvre.

Indication of this was seen yesterday as RCAF aircrew personnel taking part in the big Ex air extravaganza were briefed at Trenton for the part being taken by the Royal Canadian Air Force.

In conjunction with the practice run of RCAF aircraft, it was "press day" for the Exhibition air show and press representatives invited to go along for the ride.

Press representatives from the Toronto area were picked up at the Toronto Island airport and flown to Trenton for the briefing.

WATCHES SET

Then in the afternoon the press invited to sit on the aircrew briefing at the operations air terminal building where the plane formations were outlined, and watches were synchronized for the split second timing required to make passes along the Exhibition waterfront.

Following the aircrew briefing press representatives were assigned to aircraft for the practice run.

The Exhibition air show actually commences at four o'clock but the RCAF participation, lasting about forty five minutes, does not commence until 4:42.

Opener for the RCAF segment is eight T33 silver star trainers emitting colored smoke trails performing in the Prince of Wales feather. These are followed by 38 T-birds from Training Command spelling out the letters R.C.A.F.

Air Transport Command is next in view with a two plane formation consisting of the Comet jetliner, a North Star transport and a C 119 Flying Box Car.

SHOW NEW TRANSPORT

Tiny Chipmunk trainers contrast with speeding jets in spectacular aerobatic displays. Air Transport Command will also show its new turboprop Yukon Transport, soon to go into service, followed by a display with Neptune and Argus anti-submarine flying in formation with Sabre jet fighters.

It was there yesterday that aircraft from Air Transport Command at Trenton did a rendezvous until the time for their pass along the Exhibition waterfront.

The planes "orbited" at 3,000 feet over Claremont, then with the Comet Jetliner North Star and C119 Flying Boxcar leading the way in echelon formation swept past across the Exhibition waterfront.

Junior Sailors Awarded Cups At Shore Dinner

The 1961 junior sailing program of the Bay of Quinte Yacht Club concluded Wednesday evening with a shore dinner for the group as the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Robert McCulloch. Following the dinner the various trophies for the class were presented by instructor Bill Sprague.

Kirk Reid was presented with the first place trophy with Brian Veitland and John Watt receiving second and third place trophies respectively. The most proficient skipper award was won by Holly McMurray.

Janet Veitland received the George Haggis Cup whilst shawn Doyle received the first place girls' trophy. Best boy skipperlette award went to Bill Hickson and Joanne Nelson received the best girl skipperlette award.

The course instructor, Bill Sprague and his assistants, Malcolm Gibson and Stewart Sprague, were presented with momento cups by the class, to conclude the final event of one the most successful seasons of junior sailing held by the yacht club.

Assisting with the evening's program was Mrs. Mary Sprague.

'Yukon' Makes Ocean Flight In Record Time

One of the 12 new giant RCAF air transports, the Yukon completed the 3,500 mile journey from Trenton in 11 hours and five minutes. The aircraft was piloted by Squadron Leader W. R. "Roly" Lloyd of Ottawa.

Group Captain D. J. Williams, Commanding Officer of RCAF Station Trenton, remarked, "We didn't break any records but the aircraft performed remarkably well in its primary role of a freighter - passenger transport aircraft."

The aircraft left Trenton with 40 service people plus thirteen tons of personal effects and air force stores and equipment. The Yukon's weight on take off was 195,000 lbs.

Four 20 - year - old Concord, N.H., girls were aboard off to Europe on a new adventure, intending to find jobs in a Lot Angeles film production.

The flaming four-engined plane plowed across a path between the two runways of the field, and burned furiously after the fuel tanks in the mid-section of the fuselage burst into a mass of flame.

Wreckage of the plane smouldered between the four runways after the crash, which occurred at 10:40 a.m. CDT. Midway Airport at 3 a.m. EDT.

Policeman Ted Treiber of Burbank said the only part of the plane that was not afire was the tail section.

Witnesses said there was one baby and some children among the passengers.

A spokesman for TWA said: "The plane appeared to be coming from the north" . . . that is an unusual flight pattern" for a plane coming from Chicago to Los Angeles.

The plane, leaving Midway, normally would fly west. The crash scene is about 12 miles directly west of Midway airport and about 1½ miles southwest of Hinsdale, a western suburb which is about 20 miles due west of downtown Chicago.

CUTS SWATH

Reporter William Payne, 43-year-old plastics worker, said the plane came down in the path of the Eola railroad yards.

"I saw about six black bodies. God, it was awful."

"The plane just missed five automobiles," he said. "It came within about 150 feet of my house."

He heard one man at the scene say: "I live about two blocks from here. I saw a body and a suitcase came down in my backyard."

Payne added: "All I could see at the crash place was just pieces of the plane. The engines, the wings, the tail — the whole wrecked plane, said, "It was a roar, loosen a wind storm, and it went right over our heads. Then there was a crash and a muffled boom. When I looked out the window, all I could see was flames."

Dan Heidenreich, who lives about three blocks from the crash scene, said he saw a big ball of flames. When I got to the crash, I saw a hole in it and a big fire and blackened bodies. They were all over."

A TWA official said Super-Constellation was involved in aviation's worst disaster last Dec. 16 when it and a United Airlines DC-8 jet collided over New York City, killing 134 persons.

A TWA Super - Constvisation and a United Airlines DC-8 collided on June, 1956, over Arizona's Grand Canyon, killing 128 persons. It was the worst commercial plane accident.

Mohawks to Open Breeding Marsh for Ducks Unlimited And Sell Blinds to Hunters

DESERONTO (Special)—The Mohawk Indians of Tyendinaga Reserve here are going to "sell guns" to the white man in the fall of 1962.

Although they do not expect sportsmen to stack greenbacks in the tops of the gun barrels in the traditional method of colonial barter, the Indians will profit indirect by renting them duck shooting blinds.

Chief Melville Hill of the Mohawks recently came up with the idea and asked wildlife management men of the Department of Lands and Forests to assess a creek-mouth marsh on the reserve, two miles west of Deseronto, for a potential duck breeding area.

Presently choked with cat tails, the vegetation can be controlled by regulating the water levels after much of the current growth is cut down and burned, Chief Hill learned.

Ducks unlimited, a non-profit organization devoted to continuing supplies of wildfowl to sportsmen throughout North America, was also approached on the idea.

Last week an official pledged the necessary funds to build an earthen control dam and a 30-foot concrete control bridge, that will flood the marsh area.

It is to be ideal breeding ground for all of the puddler ducks, including the mallard, black and green teal; blacks; mallards; wood ducks and pintails. Ducks unlimited and Mohawks and department men will be custodians.

The Indian revenue from the project will be an ample supply of ducks for their own tables, guiding fees for non-Indian sportsmen and rental to them of duck shooting blinds based on shotgun fees.

Pleads Guilty To Six Charges Of Entering

Robert Ernest Clapp, 19, of this city, remanded last week on a charge of consuming liquor while under the age of 21, was further charged on five counts of breaking and entering with theft in city magistrate's court this morning.

He was charged with entering Harper's Service Station, the Club Canara, the D. and D. Ice Cream stand, Roper's Service Station, two residences, and Colonial Motor Sales.

The detective said on August 20, he received information from one of the executives of the Club Canara that the place had been entered by a window some time during the night and that a ticket booth inside the window was broken into. He further stated a number of keys were missing, the keys were which were used to open various places in the area. One of the keys was used to open a cabinet in the basement where cigarettes were found to be missing, containing approximately $225.

SOME LIQUOR TAKEN

A number of bottles of various kinds of liquor had been taken from a liquor cabinet, also buntcher knives, table knives, and a can opener which was taken from the kitchen.

He said that $100 of the money had been recovered plus four butcher knives, three table cloths, two towels, a dozen pieces of silverware consisting of knives, forks and spoons, a blanket and a flashlight.

While the accused lad was in the Club Canara, accompanied by an adult, ice cream was splattered against the walls, ice was thrown over the floor, two dance floors and sugar cubes were strewn around the floor.

In the 2 Roper beark-ins, entry was gained through a rear window which had been covered with masking tape to keep the glass from shattering when it was broken. Ballpoint pens, cigarets, cigars and sweaters were taken on both instances totalling $116.76.

The detective said the Harper service station on Cannifton road was entered in the same manner, through a window and a quantity of tools were taken, valued at $125. Detective Reid said everything had been recovered except for $8.50 worth of tools. At D. and D. ice-cream stand was entered by a window after the screen had been cut and a bolt removed from the inside of the window. Steaks, wieners, ice cream, soft drinks and an alarm clock were taken, estimated at $22.07.

$26.30 worth of tools were taken from College Motor Sales and $7 worth had been recovered.

The accused Clapp, elected trial by a magistrate on all of the charges and pleaded guilty.

Sentence was adjourned pending a pre-sentence report.

PM Says New Efforts Must Be Instituted

By JAMES NELSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA (CP)—Prime Minister Diefenbaker rallied Thursday for renewed efforts to settle the Berlin crisis peacefully, declaring that Western powers must stick together and make yet another attempt to negotiate a solution to the issue.

Mr. Diefenbaker, who said the new Administration is at stake, presided at a 2½-hour cabinet meeting at which Russia's announced intention to resume nuclear tests was reviewed.

Wednesday night he called the announcement a tragic and retrograde step. Thursday he issued a carefully-prepared statement saying the government will made vigilance and unity imperative in Western dealings with the Soviet Union.

The prime minister, who flies to Winnipeg today to address the annual dinner of the Canadian Bar Association, had been working intensively on the Berlin situation with external affairs ministers for several days when Russia's announcement was made.

His statement Thursday tied closely the new crisis over nuclear testing to the crisis over Berlin. Informed sources said his Winnipeg speech tonight probably will be in this context

SAYS SPECULATION

Mr. Diefenbaker described as speculative reports that the cabinet is divisible on issues whether Canada's present 120-man manpower quota in the armed forces should be raised. Any announcement in that regard would be made only in the House of Commons and not before the parliamentary session resumes Sept. 7, Mr. Diefenbaker said.

External Affairs Minister Green, who attended the meeting, would head the Canadian delegation to the United Nations General Assembly meeting opening next month, the prime minister added. He said he had heard of no plans to have heads of governments such as himself meet for a UN summit - style conference.

Nikita's Intention Shown In Recent Nuclear Move

By JOSEPH MACSWEEN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Premier Khrushchev has often been described as the master strategist but it appears he would rather be feared than loved.

This is one slant in the speculation about the factors behind the Soviet announcement of plans to develop a bomb of horrendous power. For one thing, the timing is the queer.

The announcement came—on the eve of the summit conference of neutral and non-aligned countries in Belgrade and these nations certainly do not want a resumption of thermonuclear bomb testing.

On top of this, the United Nations General Assembly convenes in New York Sept. 19. Nowhere has the business of bomb testing been condemned more frequently and with more fervor than in that 99-member forum.

SHOCK TREATMENT

UN diplomats were surprised and shocked by the Soviet announcement. But some speculate that one of Khrushchev's aims may be to exploit the dread of Russian might among the Western and smaller countries.

Khrushchev—has often proclaimed his faith in the forces of smaller countries—this could be reflected in the new Soviet statement — but it pointed out that there are various ways of influencing world opinion, and fear is a big one.

Diplomats also see the possibility Khrushchev is preparing drastic and dramatic move to reunite world disarmament attempts and launch a new campaign for disarmament on the high moral plane. Such a step no one he started at the UN two years ago.

This would be linked with his demand for a "troika" administrative system for the UN. Diplomats, recalling his impact in former years, wouldn't be surprised to find Khrushchev in their midst again this fall.

Red China is said to be a factor in a couple of ways. Some say that country is pushing Russia from behind on toughness against the West.

Also, it is pointed out that Communist China's bid for UN membership becomes stronger after Premier Khrushchev may have dreams of personally ushering his China into the world body it fought in Korea.

The most obvious factor behind the Soviet announcement was the situation in Berlin. The announcement heads the agenda of the military posture of the Soviet Union ahead of the expected diplomatic showdown on Berlin and Germany, where all the military powers are trying to show their sternest front.

Another point mentioned by diplomats is that Russia has worked out theoretical advances in size of nuclear weapons. These cannot be provided without tests. Khrushchev could not wait any longer — he had either to go ahead with tests or with his massive machinery slow down, while he was ahead.

13 Injured As Two Street Cars Collide

TORONTO (CP) — Thirteen persons were taken to hospital with cuts and bruises early today after two Toronto Transit Commission streetcars collided in the downtown intersections near Bay and Queen Streets where the accident occurred. Police said both drivers were taken to hospital.

Street car service was disrupted and hundreds abandoned the crowded trolleys and walked to work.

OPENS PARKWAY

TORONTO (CP) — Premier Frost Thursday opened Toronto's Don Valley Parkway. The road will handle 6,000 vehicles an hour. It provides a downtown access from the northeastern Metro area.

Steel Workers In 14 Firms to Take Strike Vote

TORONTO (CP)—Some 1,300 structural steel workers in 14 firms are to take strike votes next week in a move that could affect the construction industry across Ontario.

The men are members of the International Association of Bridge, Structural and Ornamental Iron Workers (CLC). The union has asked for a 37-cent-an-hour increase over the existing rate of $2.65 and other benefits.

The employers have countered with an offer of five cents this year and 10 cents next year, an offer previously made by the Toronto Builders Exchange of Unions with which it is negotiating.

The workers are employed in the erection of steel framework for buildings, bridges and other projects.

STRIKE UNSETTLED

Construction is also threatened by lack of progress in Ottawa industry negotiations. The Ottawa Builders Exchange and the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners (CLC) are awaiting a conciliation board report and the exchange has filed for lockout. A dispute with the Bricklayers, Masons and Plasterers International Union (CLC).

A settlement was reached earlier, however, with the International Union of Operating Engineers (CLC) and the International Hod Carriers, Building and Common Laborers Union (CLC) on the basis of a 10-cent wage, 15-cent-an-hour increase.

Ten other unions are in various stages of negotiation and conciliation. The Steel Workers are the first to take a strike vote.

B.C. Will Not Join Columbia Project Unless Power Sold

VANCOUVER (CP) — Two things seem to have emerged clearly this week ahead of Premier W. A. C. Bennett's Social Credit convention policy towards hydro-electric power development in British Columbia.

One is that the government is concerned, Peace River power development will go ahead, unless Ottawa underderakes it alone, Columbia River power development will go ahead only if B.C. can finance it with money from sale of power to the U.S.

This sale would involve only the peak power between benefits on the Columbia, and Premier Bennett says he doesn't intend to sell any part of electrical energy.

This policy has been read into previous statements by the premier. The government exproprietated the B.C. Electric Company Aug. 1 and gave it responsibility for public development of the Peace River's 4,000,000-horsepower potential.

But not until this week, when Mr. Bennett held two press conferences in Victoria, has he been so blunt in stating his intentions.

He said tenders would be called for a $250,000 bridge across the Peace River at the Portage Mountain dam site, 70 miles west of Fort St. John. It would be the first major construction project on the $580,000,000 Peace River scheme, towards which B.C. Electric has paid in a total of a $75,000,000 bank credit.

Premier Bennett said Columbia possibilities, the premier said downstream benefits power from the U.S. and Canada, a firm price for this sale must be settled before B.C. can approve the international treaty which sets out Columbia development plans. The treaty provides for return to B.C. of half the downstream benefits.

The federal government's policy has been to forbid firm export of large-scale amounts of and force it off the road. In the collision the police car was heavily damaged and had to stop. McKendry was uninjured.

The bandits' car, also damaged, continued on but was found a few miles up the road in a ditch. Police said the bandits apparently fled on foot into the bush.

Shortly after, OPP Const. Milo Chapman saw another car later reported to have been stolen in Montreal—racing past him with two men in it.

By the time he turned his car around, the bandits' car had disappeared. Const. Chapman found it abandoned with both right tires blown out, apparently from travel on the rough roads. About 200 rounds of ammunition were found inside.

COE HILL, (CP)—Weary provincial policemen gathered at a roadside restaurant here early today to eat what for some was their first meal in 36 hours.

Some storekeepers were reported keeping guns beneath their counters, as a highway miscount of western movies.

One doctor, travelling after midnight, drove approximately miles out of his way to bring coffee and hamburgers to two officers at a highway checkpoint. The pair had had nothing to eat since 4 p.m. Thursday.

Bullets Fray Robber's Pants, He Is Unhurt

MONTREAL (CP)—Two bank employees pumped six shots at a holdup man Thursday night, but the target in a teller cage with bullet holes. But the man was unhurt.

He was grabbed by police and $600 recovered.

Both gunmen drew them in the bank, a branch of the Montreal City and District Savings at the downtown intersection of Ste. Catherine Street and McGill College Avenue.

Police said the man, about 30, was unarmed. He shoved a holdup note at a teller and then snatched up a bundle of cash from another employee.

Jean-Paul Fluent, an assistant accountant, and watchman Roger Thivierge fired shots and chased him out into the street.

Two officers in a patrol car cruising nearby collared him.

Trenton News

By RULA BONTER—Phone 2-3...

Reporter Flies To Air Show In Sub-Hunter

TRENTON — On Thursday, around 30 newspaper reporters and the representatives of other news outlets were the guests of the Royal Canadian Air Force at RCAF Station Trenton, and participated in a practice fly-past of planes taking part in the Canadian International Air Show to be staged over the CNE grounds in Toronto on Friday and Saturday.

Members of the news-gathering group had been assigned to various aircraft — three Argus aircraft and three Neptune aircraft from Maritime Air Command and one North Star aircraft from Air Transport Command.

Trenton reporters, assigned to a Neptune submarine-hunter aircraft, were told that these aircraft would fly in two formations in case of a war; to hunt and, "kill" enemy submarines and to protect shipping or troop convoys. Submarine detecting equipment was explained, as far as military regulations would allow.

The pilot of Neptune 117 was Flt.-Lt. G. A. Saull and co-pilot Flt.-Lt. W. J. Martell.

From the plastic nose of the Neptune, a marvellous panoramic view of the countryside on the route to Toronto was afforded. An impression that remained was that all towns and cities should be planned from the air—as glaring mistakes in planning are quite apparent from this vantage point.

FREE SHOW

Weather permitting, the air show today and tomorrow should go down as the best on record.

Seven jets will be the new aircraft of Air Transport Command, Yukons, Hercules and Cosmopolitans, as well as older, but still reliable ATC types.

The saucy little Chipmunk aerobatics should delight the exhibition crowds and the CBC on Hawks will bring the show to a thrilling climax.

The exhibition air show first will be a demonstration by parachutists from the U.S. Navy.

Board Saves About $600

TRENTON—T. S. Ketcheson, chairman of planning for the Board of Education said today as the result of negotiations between a board committee and a Lakeland gas company representative the company had agreed to install 43 feet of pipe between the gas metre and the boiler in the new eight-roomed addition to Trenton High School, thus saving the Board around $600.

The sky divers will leap from their planes and glide to the lake below on "rain-made" wings.

The Havilland, Trans-Canada Air Lines and the Department of Lands and Forests will also have planes in the show.

There will be a helicopter demonstration and the jets will put on a series of spine-tingling antics for the delight of the crowd.

Need a New Look at Loda

Mr. Don Kingdon, secretary-manager of the Lake Ontario Development Association, told the members of the local Rotary Club Monday that Belleville has averaged one new industry a year for a number of years now. He added that this is well in excess of the national average, outside of metropolitan areas.

There are two possible reactions to this statement. One can puff out one's chest and demonstrate one's civic pride in this additional proof that Belleville is already one of Ontario's finest cities and destined for even greater things. Or one can soberly consider what this revelation as to what Mr. Kingdon, and presumably the LODA, regards as a new industry ought to have on our attitude towards continued membership in that association.

Mr. Kingdon is well and favorably known to many city residents, he having been secretary-manager of the Chamber of Commerce here before assuming his duties in the wider field of activity offered by the formation of the LODA. All who know him know that he would tell the Rotarians nothing but the truth, but it can be said that the vast majority of Belleville citizens do not dignify with the name of "new industry" every little expansion in industrial or commercial activity, every little new plant which may be established by the admirable, but natural, enterprise of some local citizen or some citizen of another community looking for a more favorable site for his own home town for a new venture.

Most Belleville citizens regard this type of "new industry" as a natural development in days of national prosperity and expansion, a development which would occur if there were no such organization as the Lake Ontario Development Association and no industrial commission in the city itself.

When Belleville citizens talk about "new industries" they envision the establishment here of some plant like Northern Electric, or Bakelite, or Deloro Stellite, a major addition to the city's manufacturing complex. They are aware that small industries frequently grow into big ones, but they are also aware that the major plant expansions here since the founding of the LODA has been in additions to existing plants, to Northern Electric, Stephens-Adamson, Mead Johnson and Stewart Warner, to mention a few which come to mind immediately.

The most frequently heard comment, when Belleville citizens talk about expansion, is general surprise that so many new homes, and to a lesser degree so many new retail and service establishments, should be opening here when there has been no major new industry established in the city for years.

If the LODA wants to count the new industries we have obtained, let it do so. But let us then keep clearly in our minds what the LODA means when it talks of helping a community get new industries and let us decide, in the light of this knowledge, whether the price paid for LODA membership is worth the probable benefits. Mr. Kingdon said that the national average is one new industry every four years for municipalities outside metropolitan areas. If the LODA could deliver to Belleville every four years a new industry" of the type which Belleville residents have in mind when they use the term, it would be invaluable. If it considers it is keeping its end up if Belleville averages a new industry, no matter how small, every four years, then perhaps we could let it figure its averages without including our natural, and largely inevitable, normal growth amongst its successes.

Compensation

Skirts are to be as short as ever this fall, according to fashion news from Paris.

We welcome the announcement. Short skirts make sense out of what would otherwise be those silly stiletto heels. Granted a well-rounded calf and strong slim ankles which do not wobble, the short skirt presents a pretty picture of a nicely-tapered leg coming to its unnatural, but nevertheless artistically desirable, point.

We men need something to keep our eyes lowered as we walk along the street. Otherwise, all too often, we look up and see one of the modern age's abominations, a hairdo which looks, on a thin neck, ears stuck out like stabilisers below a moist mass of hair tightly wound around tin clips.

This type of ornamentation might be considered appealing in certain parts of darkest Africa, but the North American man is certain to be revolted, unless the messy hair is bent over a baby carriage, in which case, if he has any imagination, he will be lost in wonder at this positive evidence that the age of miracles is not past.

Open Letter to 'Time'

By J. A. Davidson in Saturday Night

(The following open letter was addressed to the managing director of Time International of Canada).

Dear Mr. Laybourne: I almost wish you hadn't put that message for me in the June 30, 1961 issue of Time, which, "shrill, know-how, and technology" brought into Canada by the Ford Motor Company.

It isn't the sheer sort of thing it all—and shame on you for putting your signature to a false analogy which, I am confident in first year logic would detect with just one eye open.

* * *

In your final paragraph you say to me, "We hope you will say what you think". Well Mr. Laybourne, brace yourself for this one:

I think that the "Canada Edition" of Time is one of the most insidious influences on Canadian Americanism in Canada today.

I am usually mildly anti-American. Every few hours each week — and it always strikes me immediately after I have read Time.

A number of my friends have the same ailment.

* * *

On visits to the U.S. I have never been bothered by the eagle-opening in the regular edition of Time.

But I am now a little when I get that sort of thing in a magazine purely "Canada Edition", and full of Canadian advertising, and with a first section devoted entirely to Canadian affairs.

And must you use American terminology in the Canada section when the Canadian terminology differs from it? Recently you told us about the RCAF base: the USAF has a base, the RCAF a station. And in the Canadian army they don't call Canadian soldiers enlisted men: they call them NCOs and other ranks.

* * *

But what I have particularly resented in your occasional attempt to influence Canadian politics and attitudes which do not accord with ours. Here Time thinks should be American policies and attitudes. For example some time ago in your "Canada" section you got wicked-anschluss with the pen and pompous way, with the Toronto Globe and Mail over its editorial attitude on Canada's recognition of Communist China.

Probably the boys who essayed that little hatchet-job got pats on their backs from Mr. Luce himself — but I wonder if they and Mr. Luce realize that that job did not help Canadian anti-American sentiments in Canada, that it did to increase anti-recognition-of-China sentiments. For a couple of weeks after reading it I felt I had the most intense attack of anti-Americanism I've had in many, many years. It is my considered opinion that I am generally quite immune to the more virulent forms of that affliction.

* * *

Your magazine, operating the way it is at present, quite effectively nurtures anti-Americanism in Canada.

Your whole operation seems to assume that Canadians are simply semi-Americans, slightly underprivileged and living in a cold climate, who are kept from following what is manifestly their destiny only by a bit of quaint, archaic sentimentality.

The second is from the writings of an eminent Canadian social scientist, the late H. A. Innis: "We Canadians can only survive by taking persistent action at all strategic points against American imperialism in all its attractive guises."

Yours sincerely,
J. A. Davidson.

Strictly Personal
Medical Field Has Changed

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

It is interesting, and instructive, to see how the human animal responds to an attack on his beliefs and convictions. He does not try so much to rebut the arguments as to attack or as to impugn his motives.

This happened again with the doctors, in connection with the recent piece on the AMA and organized medicine. A few letters from physicians were clear, logical and factual; but most of them were hysterical and irrelevant to the charges I made.

These confused correspondents showed that they had disappointing experiences with the medical profession; that I have been overcharged or ill-treated; that, therefore, I am persisting, on some personal grievances to color my view of the entire medical profession.

Even if this were true, it would have nothing to do with the validity of my argument. But it is not true. My family and I have always had fine medical care — from our infertile, ever-sneezing allergist, on our pediatrician. They are splendid men and I have never had a personal grievance.

These individual doctors, however, are not really represented by the AMA, which is a third little political clique of bureaucrats, who (and like all medical doctors who are too busy or too indifferent to care about the official actions of their organization.

It is significant that the letter I received from doctors who agree with my position all prescribed not only medicines or medicines or dosing them. "I would get into trouble with my local medical society," one said, "and that I agree with you," each said, in effect, "but don't be assured that many of us do not care for the AMA any more than you do."

Obviously, something is seriously wrong with a professional organization when respectable and reputable members of it are afraid to express their views publicly for fear of reprisal of one kind or another. And, of course, the AMA and local medical societies have tremendously powerful professional statutes of doctors: not long ago physicians practicing "group medicine" were stigmatized as socialistic and found it heavy going for their survival.

All one has to do is to leaf through a magazine like "Medical Economics" to see how the practice of medicine in America has steadily become more of a business than a profession. As I said in my previous piece, even a committee of the AMA admit in recent investigations, forced to warn medical societies that they must do a better job of policing their members.

The doctors may fool themselves, but the public is not fooled. I received not a single letter from a layman disagreeing with me. The patience of America's patients is wearing thin, and the AMA is the last to know it.

STRENGTH FOR THE DAY

DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS

PERSISTENT HAZARDS

There is always some hazard which particularly threatens the existing generation. As men and women are born into the world the sword of Damocles suspended by a hair is poised into position over their heads. A cruising car, the very envy of father and mother translated as they realized that their son might be killed in a duel. If they had a beautiful daughter she might be betrayed by a soapbox. Today dads, the world trembles with the realization that's the bombs dropped on the principal cities of the Western and Eastern hemisphere may result in reversion to prehistoric life.

Ultimately we will find the secret of malignancy and heart disease — but we can ignore it in the comparatively near future. But the preponderance of amusement in the world today is very bad for future peace.

What we have to do is live as effectively and happily as we can day by day. The human race has never known what tomorrow will bring forth. This is a normal situation in the human race. And it is probably one of God's ways of challenging us and developing our powers.

Letter To The Editor

Opposes Extension Of Sidney Street

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer.

May I submit a few words in reply to several letters in articles appearing in your paper concerning the proposed extension of Sidney Street through the fair grounds which was recommended by the city traffic committee.

Clearly the purpose of this plan is to increase further the heavy truck traffic on Sidney Street.

I would like to point out that residents on this street have patiently endured for years with relief from the thunder of cement carriers which jolts them out of sleep. This piece of news hardly gives us cause to shout, hurrah.

Perhaps the members of the traffic committee have forgotten, that Sidney St. is not on the outskirts of the city; it is in the centre residential area. There are a public playground and a separate school already located on Sidney Street, and the next year our children will attend a new school on the Parkdale area only one block from Sidney Street, along which they must walk without sidewalks and over which they must cross the continued interruption of through traffic, to reach it.

Please, let's not have any more children become innocent victims of further lack of planning on the part of our public officials.

E. F. Conley,
551 Sidney Street.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

Another long sweet summer has ended; and my cottage neighbor who plans has had a wonderful season. He has ventioned in his mind plans that almost anything he has planned for years.

He owns a comfortable cottage set in a pleasant grove of pines and oaks with sundry outbuildings and a fairly large wild asters and poison ivy. He has a wharf that has withstood the slings and arrows of the outrageous years and is only slightly sunken.

Each summer he spends a most enjoyable time walking about, making decisions standing on the rocky point low-front surveying the cottage the wharf and the woodlot. On rainy days he sits on the verandah viewing the never-changing situation and making mathematical tests with figured calculations and small drawings that embody the plans he has for the new wharf the pretty little chalet-type sleeping cabin he has on the barge. He plans to clean out the woodlot each year all the underbrush cut down the ailing trees and convert it into a matchless little pine grove singing in the wind. He has been planning now for twenty years and he tells me the charity beauty and detail of this past summer's planning has given him the most enjoyable summer he can remember.

Hoarseness Indicates Vocal Cords Affected

By Joseph G. Molner, M.D.

"Dear Dr. Molner: What causes my vocal cords to become paralyzed? X-rays have been taken of my throat sometimes my voice sounds natural chiefly in the morning, but it soon becomes hoarse. — H.D.C."

The vocal cords* are really a pair of folds of mucous membrane which project into the larynx of "voice box." Changing in the tension of these cords as the shape and hence is one — but only one — of the things which helps form what we call "speech" or words, or other vocal sounds.

Hoarseness is some interference with the usual sharp precision with which the vocal cords (or folds) form the sound.

Ordinary nodules, or bumps, or growths, or whatever you choose to call them, sometimes form on the cords of people who do a great deal of talking or singing, and are known as "singer's nodes." This happens occasionally, and sometimes it isn't dangerous. The nodes can be removed — but of course, this must be done carefully, so as not to damage the cords themselves.

At the opposite extreme is cancer of the larynx or lower throat. This is a very serious condition. However, treated as it should be today in its early stages it can usually be cured. Most of us, no doubt, have at one time or another met someone who has had such an operation. When the larynx itself is removed, a new method of speaking must be learned. This has been done with well known result, but of a very great importance, is the fact that by the use of modern cancer surgery leaves the patient speaking with his normal voice, and with no need for learning the so-called esophageal speech.

So much for that. How about in-between cases? Pressure on the nerves of the larynx can cause hoarseness. This pressure may be from goiter, from a lung tumor, or from a gland enlargement of the nodes — the big artery from the heart. All are a general rule can be corrected or alleviated, although the cancer or the situation is attacked, the better for the patient.

And I'll add one more frequent factor: Excessive smoking can cause hoarseness due to irritation and swelling of the vocal cords. I mention this last, and apologetically, because I am quite aware that most people would rather have something more serious the matter with them, and something that the doctor has to take care of, instead of something that can be cured when cured by themselves, such as by cutting down on smoking. People are funny aren't we?

* * *

"Dear Dr. Molner: Would distension of the belly have anything to do with breathing? My breathing is so bad I can hardly walk from one room to another without getting all out of breath. — H. R."

To be strictly accurate, distension of the belly with or bowel can interfere with breathing, but only under extreme conditions such as intestinal obstruction or after an abdominal operation, or something like that. Any ordinary amount of "gassiness" should not cause the extreme shortness of breath you mention, so I would start looking elsewhere for the cause.

To Mrs. J.: This daughter who is so limp in your daughter hands that they become sore is obviously the victim of some form of nervous upset, especially suggest consulting a psychiatrist — which doesn't mean that she is "mentally ill" but simply that she needs some help in understanding her optik.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

FULFILMENT

Most of the things we see our hearts on at the start turn out vastly different than we expect. But, in most cases, vastly better.

After all, fulfilment of our fondest dreams and plans is the way measure up to what God promises to us. And in time of our reward for service unselfishly rendered.

It is well that you set out for a definite goal, but do not put your heart in thoroughly it may not. God has things with out being too disappointed. Very often the reward is better than the one you planned to take.

Fulfilment is development.

He who sets out to get all that he thinks he wants often gets little or nothing.

He who sets out to get all that his heart longs for, and with God's help, will get more than he ever planned.

Nothing is final. Our lives are wrapped in coverings woven by the Master, and they are safe.

Trouble not. Fret not.

Bad Habits Valuable

Hamilton Spectator

The Hon. Donald Fleming (under drinks alcohol nor smokes finds much encouragement in life for virtue. But there is a good reason why he should not encourage others to follow his good example.

If Canadians overnight became teetotalers Mr. Fleming's revenues would drop just $200,000,000 on the basis of what he collected last year. But that would be only the beginning. Consumer would have to find and compensate the provincial treasuries for losses on liquor sales which net them something over $500,000,000. If we had all stopped smoking another $250,000,000 would have been lost to the federal treasury.

At no time is it well to play for the present. The present is but a link in the chain of richness which the coming days

Women Urge Khrushchev To Reconsider

MONTREAL (CP)—The Voice of Women, an organization claiming a membership of 5,000 across Canada, Thursday night cabled Soviet Premier Khrushchev, urging him to "reconsider this tragic decision" to resume nuclear weapons testing.

The cable said the organization wished to express its "profound disgust and concern" over the decision.

The message was signed by Kay Macphail, president; Dorothy Arnold; Margaret Aitchison and Josephine Davis of Toronto; Doris Davis of Ottawa and Mrs. Thereze Casgrain of Montreal.

A message sent to President Kennedy of the United States called on him to "lead the world in declaring your government's concern over the situation. The association said it hoped Mr. Kennedy "will not permit another resumption of testing" by the U.S.

The Voice of Women was formed about a year ago "to try to create a better climate among people of the world."

Mrs. Fred Davis, national publicity chairman, said in Toronto that the organization is also spearheading a move to hold around-the-clock vigils at Soviet embassies across Canada by members and allied groups to display their disgust over the Soviet Union's action.

She said the events, to be held on one day, are not organized, would not be bannerwaving occasions but quiet gatherings to prayer.

Community Holds Double Baby Shower

MADOC JUNCTION — On Wednesday evening of last week, a number of ladies gathered at the home of Mrs. Maurice Clancy for a baby shower, given in honor of the two youngest members of the community — Janice Elizabeth, baby daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Murray Martin, and Ronald Gordon, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Clarke.

The party had been arranged by the hostess, Mrs. Clancy with Mrs. Keith Johnson and Mrs. Albert Jones, co-hostesses.

Mrs. Johnson presided over a short program as follows: A reading — "Nobody knows but Mother" was given by Mrs. William McKeown, after which Mrs. Forde Stapley gave a second reading — "A Fellow's Mother."

A scrambled word contest "Things for Baby" was conducted with Mrs. Bert Reide, Mrs. Bruce Stapley and Mrs. Murray Martin each having a correct list and were each awarded a small prize.

An address was read by Mrs. Johnson, and Mrs. Jones on behalf of all the group and they presented Mrs. Martin and Janice with a chromium plated baby cup, and a lovely pink nylon baby dress.

A second address was read by Mrs. Clancy, and Mrs. Jones made the presentation of a pair of blankets, a "bundle of presents", and a purse of money to Mrs. Clarke for baby Ronald.

Mrs. Martin and Mrs. Gordon Clarke graciously expressed their thanks or the lovely gifts.

Mrs. Martin cut the baby Forde Stapley's 1th wedding anniversary, and she was presented with a pink corsage and a pretty china cup and saucer, from which she thanked her friends.

The hostess and co-hostesses served a dainty collection of sandwiches and a variety of other cookies along with a refreshing cup of tea.

Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Wayne Murray are shown cutting the wedding cake following their marriage in Holloway Street United Church, Belleville. The bride is the former Marjorie Barbara Colden, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert G. Colden, Belleville. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James Murray, R.R. 2, Belleville.

MURRAY—COLDEN

Holloway Street United Church in Belleville was the setting for a recent mid-summer wedding when Marjorie Barbara Colden, daughter of Belleville, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert G. Colden, became the bride of Gerald Wayne Murray of R.R. 5, Belleville, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Murray.

The Rev. C. W. Coleman officiated at the double - ring ceremony before an altar adorned with tall white gladioli intermingled with fern. White bows marked the guest pews.

Mr. Clifford Templer, the church organist, provided the wedding music and accompanied the soloist, Mr. Harold McNish, of Belleville, who sang "The Wedding Prayer" before the ceremony and "Because" during the signing of the register.

The radiant bride, given in marriage by her father, was lovely in her full-length gown of snow-white nylon tulle over taffeta, featuring a molded nylon lace bodice accented with pearls and sequins, scalloped neckline, short scalloped sleeves and a chapel length train. She wore a crown of tear-drop pearls and sequins with a shoulder-tip veil of nylon net, and carried a cascade bouquet of pink tiger roses, white stephanotis, fern and trailing ivy.

Her maid of honor was Miss Ann Teeds of Belleville, gowned in white silk organza with rose-colored hat, shoes and cummerbund with flowing panel at back to hemline. She carried a bouquet of white and rose feathered carnations.

Mrs. Wilma Furmidge, of Corbyville and Miss Pat Seamen of Belleville were bridesmaids, gowned identically to the maid of honor, but with many accessories. They carried bouquets of white and mauve feathered carnations and all wore short mitts.

Mr. Larry Rowbotham of Belleville, attended the bridegroom, while Mr. Donald Shanish, brother-in-law of the bridegroom, and Mr. Ronald Caverly, cousin of the bride, ushered the guests.

The reception was held at Club Cedar, where the bridal table was prettily appointed in white damask, centred by a traditional three-tier wedding cake, topped by a miniature bride and bridegroom under an arch of pink roses, and flanked by pink candles in gleaming crystal candelabra, white tulle and pink rosebuds marked the base of the cake which, along with the bridal bouquet, formed a lovely nuptial picture.

Receiving the guests was the bride's mother, who chose a white and aqua figured nylon dress with white accessories and a corsage of pink roses and white carnations. Assisting her in the receiving line was the mother of the bridegroom, gowned in beige nylon over figured beige and yellow taffeta, with matching duster, and beige accessories, with corsage of yellow roses and bronze 'mums.

For travelling to Algonquin Park and points north, the bride wore a pink linen dress with white accessories and one rose of pink American Beauty roses.

The bridegroom's gift to his bride was a cultured pearl necklace; the bride's gift to her bridegroom, gold cuff links and tie bar, centred with a cultured pearl. Gifts to the maid of honor and bridesmaids were matching sets of socks and ties.

Guests were present from Winnipeg, Kitchener, Toronto, Lindsay, Bancroft, Thomasburg, Tweed, Corbyville, Point Anne, Trenton, Carrying Place and Belleville.

The bride, previous to her marriage, was entertained at a linen shower at the home of Mrs. M. Davidson, as hostess, and Miss T. Smith as co-hostess, given by her co-workers of the T. Eaton Company of Canada, where she was employed. Also, miscellaneous showers at the homes of Mrs. Carman Caverly, Belleville, Mrs. Ann Cross, Bellagille, and Mrs. Wilma Furmidge, Corbyville.

Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Murray will reside at Don Mills Road, Toronto.

Anne Bancroft Has Been Bopped in Face 2,800 Times in Name of Art

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (CP) — Anne Bancroft is a young lady who has been struck in the face more than 2,800 times in the name of art.

This rudeness slapped years ago when actress Mae Clarke played a role in which Jimmy Cagney pushed a grapefruit in her face.

As Annie Sullivan, teacher of blind, mute and blind Helen Keller in The Miracle Worker, she was slapped hard—or hit in the face with a plastic doll—four times a performance by her undisciplined young charge whom she gradually brings to love and learning.

Ann played the stage role through 700 performances and won her second Broadway Tony award. Now she is in Hollywood for the Screen.

She and Patty Duke, who plays Helen Keller as a child, are again co - starred in the screen version of The Miracle Worker, a picture that probably will have more fury eye between here and Timbuktu.

WEARS KNEE PADS

I talked with Miss Bancroft during a luncheon break on the set. She still wore knee pads under her flared gown, and her head was ringing.

"They had just finished shooting the fifth — I begged sequences, and Anne had been clopped in the face—and bopped hard to insure realism—some 15 times.

"It's all in the business," she said matter-of-factly, "but sometimes you have to do it over again—if it isn't your fault."

She said she had a headache but Anne, a dedicated actress if ever there was one, declined to take any aspirin. She feared it might affect her performance in the scenes to be taken this afternoon.

She sighed and stretched gratefully out on a relaxing board in the dressing room. Then she broke out her lunch—three carrots—and began to munch them thoughtfully.

"I have hundreds and hundreds of problems," she said cheerfully, "and no real plans ahead."

CAN'T PLAN AHEAD

"I don't see how one can get ahead in this business. I take singing lessons when I'm not busy working. I just want to do good stuff, whether its musicals or plays.

"I enjoy acting when it's good. And people—even when they're bad. I'm pretty content right now, but"—she laughed—"I won't be if I'm bad-mouthed tonight."

She arose to return to the set. The next scene was one in which Patty Duke was to sock her in the face with a plastic doll.

"They'll probably have to shoot it over six or seven times," Anne said gamely, "but she's been darn good so far except when Patty misses. Then it's a good shot. She has a good eye."

Readers' Friday Column

As conducted by Mary Moore

QUESTION:

Would you please send me the recipe for the Hawaiian Punch? — Cathy O.

ANSWER:

I have never made "Pol". The only information I have for you is that it is a grayish paste made from cooked and fermented taro root, like an elongated yellow sweet potato, I think. It is served cold and eaten by dipping your fingers into it. "One finger" poi is thick enough to be dipped up with one finger; "two or three-finger" poi is thinner. I would be happy if any of our readers who have cooked in Hawaii and have made poi, would send me the recipe for Cathy, although how she will acquire the taro I do not know unless she could have it shipped in.

QUESTION:

I would like to know if you have a recipe for canning small new potatoes; if so would you kindly send it back to me? I follow your column faithfully — Mrs. Ron D.

ANSWER:

CANNING SMALL POTATOES:

Scrape or peel very thinly small new potatoes and immediately drop into cold salted solution in proportion of 1 tablespoon salt to each quart of cold water. Let stand until them darkening. Fill into No. 2 cans (20-oz.) and immediately cover with boiling hot brine in proportion of 1 oz. of salt to each 2 quarts of water. Cover and seal at once on seaming machine. (Exhausting on this size of can is not essential). Process in pressure cooker at 240 deg. F. (10 lbs. pressure) for 30 minutes. Chill at once in cold water bath.

Anne Bancroft Has Been Bopped in Face 2,800 Times in Name of Art

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (CP) — Anne Bancroft is a young lady who has been struck in the face more than 2,800 times in the name of art.

This rudeness slapped years ago when actress Mae Clarke played a role in which Jimmy Cagney pushed a grapefruit in her face.

As Annie Sullivan, teacher of blind, mute and blind Helen Keller in The Miracle Worker, she was slapped hard—or hit in the face with a plastic doll—four times a performance by her undisciplined young charge whom she gradually brings to love and learning.

Ann played the stage role through 700 performances and won her second Broadway Tony award. Now she is in Hollywood for the Screen.

She and Patty Duke, who plays Helen Keller as a child, are again co - starred in the screen version of The Miracle Worker, a picture that probably will have more fury eye between here and Timbuktu.

INNES—BUSH

FRANKFORD—A lovely wedding was solemnized in Frankford United Church, Saturday, August 12th, at 12 o'clock noon, when the Rev. R. C. Judd united in marriage, Sharon Frances Bush, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Keith Bush, of Frankford, and John Edward Innes, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Innes, of Peterborough, Ontario.

The traditional wedding music was rendered by Mrs. G. S. Martin of Belleville, and soloist, Miss Ruth Gibson, of Bowmanville,"who sang "The Lord's Prayer" and "Because."

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was lovely in a white floor-length gown of pure silk organza over taffeta with Alencon lace, fern fronts marking its Florentine neckline and daisy shaped sleeves. The skirt fell in full folds to form a carriage back effect augmented by streamers-to-match ordered with Alencon lace forming a bustle. Her fingertip veil of bouffant silk illusion, held in place with a French handmade rose and, she carried a star-shaped bouquet of pink glamellias and white Sweetheart roses.

The matron-of-honor was Mrs. Gwen Coulter, sister of the bride, who wore a pure silk pink organza with bodice and sleeves of Swiss embroidery in a deep shade. The skirt featuring a new flat front with side drapes and soft impressed pleats in back. She carried a crescent-shaped bouquet of pink glamellias.

Miss Janice Bird, cousin of the bride, of Frankford, was flower girl, wearing a pink organza dress with a bouffant skirt of the matron of honor, and carried a basket of pink glamellias and white sweetheart roses.

The groomsman was Mr. Don Innes of Peterborough, brother of the bridegroom. Ushers were Mr. Frank Jobbitt of Peterborough, and Mr. Cameron Challer of Frankford, brother-in-law of the bride.

The reception was held in Rose Lowery Hall, Frankford. The bride's table was decorated with a three-tier wedding cake topped with pink Sweetheart roses and misted about the base with tulle.

The bride's mother received with crystal blue pebbleshean gown with jacket ensemble and matching hat, grey accessories and corsage of pink chrysanthemums. The bridegroom's mother assisted in a sheath dress with matching duster of champagne organza over figured taffeta with matching hat and accessories and wore a corsage of yellow 'mums.

Guests from out of town were present from Belleville, Stirling, Madoc, Peterborough, Toronto, Montreal, Quebec, Ottawa and Kingston.

Previous to her marriage, a miscellaneous shower was held at the home of Mrs. P. Ayatte on Peterborough st. mistress-in-sous shower at the home of Mrs. W. Twining in Belleville with Miss Joanne Twining and Miss Nadine Flunder as co-hostesses. A kitchen and clothes-line shower was held at the home of Mrs. Ross Fleming at R.R. 2, Frankford, with Mrs. Robert Burkitt as co-hostess.

SPEAKING of MANNERS

PATRICIA LEWIS

Question — My teen-age daughter has been invited to a dinner party at the home of a schoolmate. What is the party is this, and what should she wear? Mrs. D. C., Baltimore, Md.

Answer — Palamas, of course. She'll probably also want to take along pin curlers, hair rollers, a tooth brush and a hearty appetite. At a "palame party," young partiers all around nibble, trying out new table-dos, discussing parents and giggling about boys. They have company to stay awak longest, but all usually succumb to shut-eye around one or two a.m.

SORRY, GIRLS...

Sophie C. — That poor child has been knocked around from pillar to post and now Lydia wants to turn him over, too.

During his parents' stormy marriage, he lived with his mother. Then his mother, then one set of grandparents a nd then he went to Dad's in California, he sleeps on a cot in his mother's kitchen. Here at Lydia's he's staying in the first comfortable bedroom he's ever had. What's the temptation to crime? — especially if he pays her!

A relative is a relative, not just a fair-weather friend. If Gilbert wants to stay with you a big shot, Lydia and her family would be the first to brag about their kin. Well, now that he's 4 sad sack, let them do their part, too.

• • •

The Council — Sophie is like the mischief in a free-for-all who says 'em on, shouting, "Let's get 'em, get 'em, get 'em!" She's safe. After donating a few dollars towards Gilbert's board, she'll skip back to Chicago leaving Lydia with the whole job of activating this benighted groundhog.

Sophie's big-hearted, but with Lydia's home! Her kibitzing from the sidelines is in poor taste, unless she's offering to take Gilbert into her own home. Otherwise, this issue is between Lydia and Gilbert.

Lydia is well within her rights ring down the curtain on Gilbert's performance of "The Man Who Came to Dinner." On the other hand, he's a nice boy, too

Successful Living

Accusations Not True

DORIS CLARK

DEAR DORIS:—For four years my husband's parents have done nothing but castigate me to my husband and all their acquaintances. They live a long way off, and they have written dozens of letters to their only son, accusing me of being a liar, a disloyal wife, impudent, etc., etc.

Thinking it was the right thing to do, I spent the four years saying nothing; actually none of their accusations are true. I do what I think is right and so does Jim.

But recently a letter came in which they both advised my husband to leave me, also not to have any children. We get on well together and these bitter letters upset both of us. I felt they had gone too far and wrote this reply:

"We have been roaring with laughter over your latest letter—you know, where you accuse Jim of being an alcoholic, me of being a disloyal wife, and tell Jim he must leave me (!) and do it now before there are any children.

"Really, that is not one of your worries. I should have thought that at your time of life you'd look forward to being grandparents. Jim is far too strong a character ever to become an alcoholic. Do be reassured."

Well, silence didn't work over the years. Do you suppose this will?—MAIN JANIE.

* * *

DEAR PLAIN JANIE—No, it won't. But it is time you made an issue.

The only thing that will work is for Jim to lay it right on the line and say he will stand for no more of these poison-pen letters. Then if another comes, return it without comment.

He owes this to you and to his marriage, which is in far more jeopardy than you think. He has been tolerating this destructive criticism for far too long.

* * *

DEAR DORIS:—I dread the thought of the last of my four going off to school next month. He is five-and-a-half and all excited about it.

Now they'll all be gone all morning and I'll be alone. No more helpful fingers in the cake batter. No more dishes crashing musically to the floor. No more sudden sobs, then sunshine when mother rescues the fallen.

In short, no more babies. My family is growing up and I can't take it. What do others do?—LONESOME LIL.

DEAR LONESOME LIL—Could this called counseling your chickens after they are hatched?

I can hear a chorus of harassed mothers saying: "You don't know how lucky you are!"—longing for the day when the youngest trots off to kindergarten or Grade One.

Yet your problems are not over—they're just different. Ask any mother of a teenager. Perhaps you think things are simplified and dull—now that the offspring are out of diapers, can feed and dress themselves. That's where you make your first mistake.

Things are going on in those minds which test the skill and knowledge of even brilliant children's workers. The way Junior reacts to teacher, to books, to sports, to sister, to God; and the way he is loved and helped while he is learning to adjust himself to a complicated world; these can shape the man he will become.

Time is precious. If you work now to understand your children, the next fifteen years can be full of interest and challenge. I can tell you about books to read. Your city can provide you courses to take. And your school teachers can give you the inside track on your particular progeny.

were advancing north on this giant industrial centre. There was no confirmation of the report.

The newspaper said 2,000 pro-Goulart troops were manning a barricade at the port town of Aluba, and that 1,500 3rd Army men were marching to reinforce them, apparently fearing a navy landing attempt.

REPORT LANDINGS

Small marine units loyal to Deays Thursday night were reported to have made two landings south of Parnaguay on the coast of Santa Catarina late, Rio Grande do Sul's northern neighbor. Their aim apparently was to cut the lines of the rebellious 3rd Army stretched along the coast from Porto Alegro.

A Brazilian Navy force, led by a cruiser and several destroyers, steamed out of Rio de Janeiro Thursday and were officially reported headed south. The air force said planes carrying arms and ammunition are being used in an undisclosed location.

Ten of Brazil's 20 state governors gathered in Rio de Janeiro Thursday night for a long conference with the three military chiefs.

Weary congressmen in Brasilia, the hinterland capital, wrangled throughout Thursday over proposed constitutional changes in an effort to bring Goulart back as president but at the same time satisfy the military chiefs by trimming the president's powers. They came to no decision, and the military leaders apparently still were dead-set against Goulart's taking the presidency under any conditions.

CURRENCY DROPS

Officials in Rio were concerned about the country's financial situation—already shaky before Quadros quit last Friday and sailed for temporary exile in Europe until the air clears. The cruzeiro plunged from 285 to more than 300 to the U.S. dollar on the free market.

Panicky businessmen in Rio de Janeiro and other cities stripped stores of sugar, coffee and beef. In Brasilia, where gasoline supplies are running low, food supplies dwindled as jittery truck drivers steered clear of the isolated capital.

Frightened groups hurried to airports in Rio de Janeiro and Sao Paulo seeking to flee the country.

Press dispatches from Santos, the world's largest coffee port, said shipments are at a standstill and bags are piling up on the docks.

The Goulart stronghold of Porto Alegre in the south was virtually isolated and being mobilized for possible war. Commercial airline flights with the rest of Brazil were suspended.

Que. Boy, With Penchant For Acting, Will Star With Walter Pidgeon in Big Red

By ROGER TETREAULT
Canadian Press Staff Writer

POINTE-AU-PIC, Que. (CP)—Six months ago, 14-year-old Gilles Payant was an average high school student with a dream and an ambition for acting.

His dream, to become a television actor, had been fed by a series of short appearances as Napoleon's son in The Plouffe Family, a CBC television program a few years ago.

Today, the blond - haired youngster from Montreal holds a seven-year contract with Walt Disney Productions. He's playing opposite veteran actor Walter Pidgeon in Big Red, on location in Pointe-au-Pic, 80 miles down the St. Lawrence River from Quebec.

The story is about a young French-speaking Canadian orphan who becomes attached to Scraps, an Irish terrier owned by an English gentleman. The two become acquainted and follow each other to high adventure in the countryside.

ANSWERED AD

Payant's big chance came when he saw an ad in a Montreal newspaper calling for applications for a part in Big Red.

At first, Gilles' parents were doubtful of their son's chances of beating out several hundred applicants for the part.

Before Payant applied, director Norman Tokar and Disney himself were seriously thinking of abandoning plans to make the movie.

"Without a perfect type to play the part of the orphan," Tokar said, "it begin shooting. The whole story would have been ruined."

However, the production went back into high gear when they saw Payant's screen test.

"He's a great kid with a lot of talent," Tokar said. "He's willing to learn and has great promise."

WORKED ON ENGLISH

Before shooting could begin, however, Gilles had to brush up on his English. The only things he know how to say in English were the few words learned in school.

"He's going into Grade IX," his mother said. "We'll be in California for a time but I'll make sure he gets two months of school work from Montreal."

She plans to take Gilles' school books to Burbank, Calif., where indoor scenes for the movie will be filmed.

If Gilles goes on to other acting parts his parents say they'll probably move to Los Angeles.

"We'd like him to be close to his job," his mother said.

But Gilles interjected, "Of course we'll come back home often." He waved towards the surrounding scenery and declared, "I'm sure California isn't as beautiful as this."

Jeanne Williams was Hastings County delegate to the National Farm Union Convention in Winnipeg in July. She reported that it was a good convention and all of Ontario's Farm Union resolutions were passed. There was a lot of time spent discussing the drought situation in the West. In many areas the crop is a complete failure. Mrs. Williams reported that the Co-Op movement is very strong in the West. The Manitoba Co-Ops took the delegates on a tour of some of their plants.

Some time was spent discussing local problems. The next meeting is to be held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Thompson.

Delbert Mumby moved a vote of thanks to Mr. and Mrs. Heath of the use of their home. Refreshments were served by the ladies and a social period was spent.

Still Chance

For Canadiens to Join Loop

TORONTO (CP)—The Ontario Hockey Association's junior council was told Thursday night there still is a chance Montreal Canadiens may be able to join its Junior A Series.

Jack Roxburgh, president of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, said last weekend it was his opinion that the CAHA probably would not allow the team to join.

He said Thursday night it is possible the Canadiens would be allowed in, but that they would have to go through channels, file a release from the Quebec Amateur Association, take care of other details and then await the vote of the full CAHA executive.

After Roxburgh's announcement council passed a motion to go along with plans for the six-team league, in which Montreal would join St. Catharines, Niagara Falls, Guelph, Hamilton and Peterborough.

The council also discussed possible effects of the new Metro Junior A League on the OHA loop.

Ken Soble, owner of Hamilton Red Wings, Hamilton Forum and the Hamilton television station which carries the home games, said he is "concerned as a publicist" that the new league has the right to use the OHA junior hockey classification in advertising its games.

He said he wonders whether the calibre of play in the Metro league would impair the prestige of the established loop.

Jack Humphreys, general manager of Guelph Royals, said he is concerned about players which his league has drafted from the Metro areas.

At least four of six players drafted from the Whitby district have asked to be excluded from the draft regulations and allowed to stay home and play for the new Whitby entry in the Metro League.

He said he thinks it is improper for six clubs in the Toronto loop, to have equal drafting privileges with five Individual NHL - sponsored teams in his league and suggested there should be just one draft choice for the Metro league.

URGE 'FRIENDSHIP'

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet government — through a newly-organized institute for Soviet-American relations — sounded a call Thursday night for friendship with the people of the United States. Lending her prestige to the occasion was Mrs. Nina Khrushchev, the premier's wife. She sat on stage at Moscow's House of Friendship as Soviet professors and secondary officials read typewritten statements urging peace and friendship.

'Woiks' Hand Firefighters Just That

Somebody poked little holes in the Firemen's water wagon last night and the Public 'Woiks' showed 13 runs through to defeat the Smokies to the tune of 13-7 in the 'Interdepartmental' league's schedule windup.

The "Woiks" sent runners scampering around the bases every time the "Smokies" stopped to answer a call. Five in the second and four in the fourth flooded the score sheet although the Firemen pecked away with a few runs in almost every inning.

"Stop-an-Start" Stan Finkle got started on the winners' pitching rubber and they couldn't get him stopped. He was still firing golf balls (hope we didn't let the Firemen in on a secret) when "Uncle" Al (no insult intended, ex-neighbor) Rump called him to have the driveway watered down at 4 o'clock this morning.

"Large" Potts and "Robert B" Lee were two of the main thorns in the Firemen sides, along with "G-Men" McInroy, Maines and Smith.

R. Diamond (in the rough), L. Woodhouse ("hand me the axe") and Stan "The Man" Papke, were prominent in the Firemen lineup. (We always thought it was the police department who held lineups.)

FIREMEN: B. Diamond, R. Reid, P. Stephenson, F. Smith, L. Woodhouse, J. Watson, L. Parks, S. Papke, P. Dalnard, B. Williams and J. Ross.

PUBLIC WORKS: G. McInroy, G. Maines, G. Smith, L. Potts, R. Waite, B. Pearce, B. Lee, L. Curtis, Wilkinson and S. Finkle.

Scuba Divers Busy Weeding Picton Bay Swimming Area

PICTON — Two men have started an unusual enterprise in this district — weeding swimming areas in county waters. Louis VanHecke, Picton, and Bill Tryan, Belleville, are using diving equipment and tire chains to rid designated waters of undesirable weeds and other debris.

Working at Meriland Park on Picton Bay this week, the two men gathered in a six-foot grappling hook, an old 20-pound navy anchor, two dozen sunken logs and four tons of weeds from a 300 by 120 foot area.

The two divers drag seven-foot lengths of tire chain along the bottom, hauling the weeds out by the roots. If any weeds remain, they are pulled out by hand. Their breathing equipment permits them to submerge for one hour and 45 minutes without surfacing.

A complete diving outfit weighs 80 pounds, and the air tanks are filled to a pressure of 2,150 pounds per square inch. A large compressor, mounted on a car trailer, pumps 3,000 pounds of air per square inch into the tanks in 10 minutes. The men are working in a depth of 20 feet and while they are submerged, a special flag is set up over the water area. This flag is bright red with a diagonal white stripe and is warning to boatsmen that divers are below.

Next winter, ice over the areas cleaned up at Meriland Park will be covered with sand. The sand sinks to the bottom when the ice melts, providing sand beach where formerly existed a tangled mass of weeds over a rocky bottom, the two men explained. Both are experienced divers and Tryan is an instructor with the Quinte Aquadivers, Belleville.

The Trots Breaks Record

YONKERS, N.Y. (CP)—O'Brien Hanover, the amazing six - year - old who was just another long shot in the field six weeks ago, Thursday night broke the world record for a mile and a quarter while winning the $25,000 Anzac Pace. Driven by George Phalen, O'Brien Hanover covered the distance in 2:31.1, shattering the mark of 2:31.3 set in 1953 by the great Good Time and equalled last year by Bye Bye Byrd.

The new time brushe Adios Butler's track record of 2:32.1, for which Phelna will receive a $1,000 bonus from Yonkers Raceway.

Mr. Sadlong finished second Thursday and Armala third. O'Brien Hanover returned $4, $2.80 and $2.30.

YONKERS, N.Y. (AP) — The world pacing record for 1¼ miles on a half-mile track is down to 2:31 3-5 and belongs to O'Brien Hanover.

The six-year-old sidewheeler, owned by Hugh Grant of Bradford, Pa., clipped two-fifths of a second off the mark held by Good Time and Bye Bye Byrd in winning the $25,000 Anzac Pace at Yonkers Raceway Thursday night.

The record also was the second in two days for horses owned by Grant. Marian Dean, to whom the Pennsylvanian has part interest, won the Hambletonian at Du Quoin, Ill., Wednesday with mile times of 1:58 3-5 and 1:59.

DO NOT MIX

Fine whisky is a luxury and should be treated as such. And, knowing when to say "no" plays a great part in the art of sensible living.

Neither whisky nor any other alcoholic beverage has any place at the wheel of an automobile. Drinking and driving do not mix.

This conviction must be shared by every thinking person who drives a car, particularly this Labour Day week-end when many holiday-ing families will be travelling on Ontario highways.

If you expect to be at the wheel of a car this week-end, we say to you: Think before you drink. Don't drink before you drive.

Bank on Castoffs

Allard to Call Signals

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Montreal Alouettes are banking on a pair of Ottawa castoffs to help stop the Rough Riders in their Eastern Conference football game Saturday.

Finding it tougher as the games—and points — slip by to fit the shoes of Sam Etcheverry, Alouettes coach Perry Moss has tentatively assigned the signal-calling to Don Allard and Gerry Thompkins. Neither has seen action with Montreal this year.

The last-place Alouettes will be making their first visit to Ottawa in one of two games during the Labor Day weekend. The other pits Hamilton Tiger-Cats, co-holders of first place with Ottawa, against Toronto Argonauts at Hamilton Monday.

Allard, a graduate of Boston College, tried out with the Riders last year but was cut and sent to the Western Conference Saskatchewan Roughriders. Argos picked him up this year on a trade as insurance when Tobin Rote suffered a hand injury. But now as it became certain Rote would be tossing again, Argos put him on waivers and the Als got him for $500.

DIDN'T MAKE IT

Thompkins, from Texas A and M, tried out with Als a couple of years ago when Etcheverry was still around but couldn't make it. Ottawa picked him up last year as insurance when Russ Jackson was injured but dropped him this year.

The best Montreal has been able to do in four games is a 1-7 tie with British Columbia Lions in an interlocking Canadian Football League race. Ottawa is at the bottom of the Western Conference with the one point.

Halfback George Reed is hampered by a pulled hamstring muscle, and punter Gene Berreth could be in the lineup Montreal lineup.

Riders have a few problems too. Gerry Seabout, a tackle from Boston University, may replace Angelo Mosca, who is nursing a sore ankle. Other doubtful starters are Ron Knox, who has an ankle, and halfback Ron Stewart, who has pulled his thigh muscle.

The third-place Argos will attempt to better their record of one win. The Hawks beat them 28-24 Aug. 20.

Argonaut coach Lou Agase is expected to Start Mike Wadsworth, a speedster picked up from Quincy University in the collegiate draft. It's not certain what position he'll play.

The Tracks

NEW YORK (AP) — Bean $40,000, early favorite for the Kentucky Derby, and Carry Back, who won the big three-year-old classic, tangle Saturday for the first time since April 11 in the $50,000-added Jerome Handicap at Belmont Park.

The race may not settle the three-year-old title, but it will help clarify the business.

Richert race of the Saturday program is the $100,000-added Washington Park Futurity at Arlington Park. In it, undefeated Ridan goes after his seventh straight victory as some critics point to the big colt as probably early favorite in next year's Derby.

Other weekend attractions are the $40,000-added Kelly-Olympic handicap on the Atlantic City grass course, a preview for the $100,000 United Nations Sept. 16, and the $25,000-added Debutante stakes for two-year-old fillies at Del Mar.

Calumet Farm's Beau Prince has tabbed to be the Florida Derby April 1 as Carry Back edged Crozier. Beau Prince was hurt, missed both the Derby - Preakness, Belmont triple crown, and didn't get back to the races until summer. After winning the select stakes at Monmouth, he took the American Derby at Arlington, and last time out won the Travers Aug. 12 at Saratoga.

Carry Back, who won the Flamingo, then followed up with victories in the Florida Derby, and Preakness, was hurt in the Belmont Stakes. Sheriloy, a 45 to 1 shot, won that one June 3.

FORT ERIE (CP) — Mystic Mountain, ridden by Ronnie Behrens, scored his fourth win in a total of five starts when he defeated Rose Dawn by 3½ lengths at Fort Erie Race track Thursday.

Mystic Mountain, which led the way, paid $14.10 to win. Despite the fact that the track was heavy, the three - year-old, running the mile and 70 yards in 1:45.

The daily double paid $35.10 as Son Island and Jack Shore won the first two races. The windfall at Page Servece and Senor Teddy in the sixth race paid $27.20.

Second Gold Medal Won By Canadian

TEL AVIV (CP)—Phil Oberlander of Montreal captured the middleweight Greco - Roman wrestling crown at Israel's Maccabiah Games Thursday night to become the second Canadian to win a gold medal.

Oberlander's father, Fred Oberlander of Montreal, is the squad.

George Rainitz of Montreal was second in the light-heavyweight division and Phil Slabotsky of Montreal was third in the bantamweight class.

Stan Levenson of Toronto, who earned Canada's first gold medal by winning the 100-metre dash Wednesday, was forced to withdraw from Thursday's 200-metre finals after winning his heat earlier in the day.

Levenson was lying on the grass waiting for the semi-final when he was hit on the right knee by an errant 16-pound shot put.

The shot was rolling and it struck Levenson as he was badly injured as he easily won the heat in 22.2 seconds. However, he was unable to swim before the final.

"It's all terribly disappointed," Levenson said. "I expected to win since the 200 was my best distance. I'm happy now that I won the 100."

Canada has 12½ medals after two days of competition with 12 gold medals. Israel is second with six, Britain has three, Canada, Holland and South Africa two each, and Italy, Australia and France one each.

Start Saturday

KITCHENER (CP) — The best - of - five Senior Inter-County Baseball semi - final between Kitchener-Waterloo Panthers and Hamilton Cardinals gets under way here Saturday night.

Other dates in the Panthers-Cardinals series: Sept. 3 at Hamilton; Sept. 4 at Kitchener; Sept. 5, if necessary, at Hamilton and Sept. 7 at Kitchener.

Dinghy Team Races Tight

TORONTO (CP)—Thursday's action in the Canadian Dinghy Association Regatta on Lake Ontario has made the chase for two trophies into a two - man battle.

Glen Foster, 31, captain of the United States team in the recent international 14-foot dinghy team races, has taken first straight wins in the Stevenson Trophy races and Paul Henderson, 28, of the Royal Canadian Yacht Club has taken both races in the Bongard Trophy series.

Foster, sailing out of Seawahaka Corinthian Yacht Club on Oyster Bay N.Y., is second in the Bongard event. Henderson is third in the Stevenson race behind Bruce Kirby of Montreal.

Foster holds a 5½-point lead over Kirby going to the final race for the Stevenson while Henderson is up 3¼ points on Foster for the Bongard.

JUNIOR PLAYDOWNS

The Kenmore, who have seen little action since ousting Port Hope Ontario over a week ago to win the Lakeshore baseball crown, commence their OBA Junior "A" playdowns on the road this Sunday.

Manager Ken Soden expected the set against Peterborough to start there Saturday, with the second game here Sunday, but the OBA has advised of different arrange ments.

The Kenmore play at Riverside Park in Peterborough at 2.00 p.m. Sunday and the second game will be back here on the following Sunday, September 10. If a third game is necessary it will be played on Wednesday, the 13th, the field to be decided by the flip of a coin.

Should rain prevent Sunday's game from being played, it will be rescheduled for Monday afternoon, the Labor Day holiday.

The Belleville team won the championship last season, bringing the city its first junior baseball title, and the boys with the going all out to repeat their performance this fall.

Peterborought will do its best to upset the locals since every team always seems to give a little extra against the champs.

This should be a good series, as fans are warned to keep Sunday, September 10, open for that second game here.

RING-SWAM WRESTLING

Tag-team wrestling used to be such a special attraction that here in Belleville about the only time the faithful got a chance to see one of the four-men bouts was during the final week or two of the season.

It's quite a different story now, however, and the powere-that-be in Toronto's grappling headquarters send many of their top men here week after week for tag-team action.

Such is the case tonight at Memorial Arena when the hearded Russians, Ivan and Karol Kalmikoff, pit their strength against a couple of the game's top heroes, Frank "Farmer-Boy" Townsend and Lord Athol Layton.

Layton and Townsend are a couple of mighty big boys who can play it just as rough and rugged as anybody in the game. Layton's deadly judo chop will cool Ivan and Karol down in short order when they try some of their hog ei tricks, but the K's are confident they can take the heroes, one way or another.

The opening bout at nine o'clock pits Pat Flanagan against Gino Marello. The semi-final should be good, as giant Mal-Mountain Campbell tangles with Prince Nero.

Detroit Faces Big Moment

By ED WILES
Associated Press Staff Writer

Detroit Tigers face a big moment in their bid for the 1961 American League pennant.

They open a three - game showdown with New York Yankees for first place tonight at Yankee Stadium. Second by 1½ games going in, they must sweep the series to be on top coming out.

Even if they win the three games, the Tigers still face a four - game series with the Yankees in Detroit in two weeks. The Tigers, who haven't won a pennant since 1945, are newcomers to title showdowns but the Yankees aren't.

With Yank ace Whitey Ford (12-3) facing Don Mossi (14-3), and New York's Roger Maris and Mickey Mantle pursuing a home run record as well as world series cash, tonight's battle is expected to attract about 65,000 fans.

The Tigers, two games down in the decisive "lost" column, closed to within 1½ games of New York by chilling Chicago White Sox 8-3 Thursday while the Yankees beat 5-4 to Minnesota Twins, despite Mantle's 48th home run of the year.

Mantle's 48th home run was one game ahead of Babe Ruth's record-60 set in 1927, was one of three by the Yankees as they bettered their American League record with 185 for the season.

Cleveland Indians handed Washington Senators their 12th straight defeat with a 2-1 decision and Kansas City Athletics took two games from Los Angeles Angels, 17-3 and 6-5.

HAVE 4-18 RECORD

The Twins finished their season with New York with their fourth victory in the 18 games, and they did it with a five-run third inning.

Rookie Roland Sheldon (9-4) was the loser, but it was reliever Jim Coates who got the deciding hit, a two - run homer by Jim Lemon. Southpaw Jack Kralick (13-9) won, although giving up 11 hits. Bill Skowron and Hector Lopez socked the other Yank homers, erasing the league record of 193 set by New York last season.

Mantle, with his second home run in two games after failing to hit any in his previous eight engagements was 3-for-4 at the plate against Kralick. But Maris who has 51 homers and is six games ahead of Ruth, was 0-for-4 and has had just two hits, a home run and a single in his last 25 at-bats.

Billy Bruton and Norm Cash, the league's batting leader (.363) were idle and a game because of illness, cracked two-run homers as the Tigers ended Chicago's winning streak at six.

BAUMANN LOSER

It was the 11th victory in 14 games for the Tigers, who scored the winning run off Frank Baumann (9-11) in the second inning on Mike Roarke's single, a sacrifice by winning righthander Paul Foytack (10-8) and a double by Jake Wood.

With Roarke's double, won and the game in the third inning for the Tigers, who counted their first two runs in the second on Woodie Held's homer off loser Bennie Daniels (10-9). Jim Proctor (1-1) and Phil Regan (2-2) finished for Detroit.

Wynn Causey, off loser Ken McBride (11-11) and two relievers. They won the second in the ninth with pinch - hitter Joe Nuxhall sending the tying run home with a double and Causey scoring the decisive hit with a single.

Stanhope Ted Bowsfield of Peatichen, B.C., started the second game for the Angels and lasted 4 3-3 innings. He gave up seven hits and four runs and escaped being charged with the loss. That went to Art Fowler (5-6). Bob Shaw (9-12) won.

Leafs Hold Half Game Over Wings

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Rochester Red Wings continue their drive toward the fourth straight playoff berth in the International Baseball League tonight with the league-leading Columbus Jets' second-place Buffalo Bisons 2-0 in 11 innings, Jersey City Jerseys took a 2-1 decision over Charleston Marlins.

The victory was Rochester's second in a three-game series as Herb Moford won his 13th on a six-hitter. A two-run double-play avenged the gates to Rochester's six-run splurge that overwhelmed the Wings' Jim Ray Barker hit his 13th homer for the Wings as reliever Hector Maestri lost his third game in five decisions.

PANS ERGLE

Jim Umbricht held Richmond to six hits, fanning eight men for a 5-5 record. Tom Sanders on's 20th homer of the year and a two-run double by Ray Mc Liss accounted for the three Columbus runs.

Winning reliever Joe Bonikowski, who pitched the last two innings, and starter Jerry Arrigo broke Buffalo's seven-game winning streak with a combined two-hitter.

Jersey City scored three runs in the first inning as Zack Monroe, who rolled up from Andres Ayon, won his 10th. Borrego Alvarez tripled with two men to get two of the runs.

LIONS NAME COACH

VANCOUVER (CP) — Halfback Ed Wevers, 28, an All-American from Maryland University who returned to Canada this fall after a year with Washington Redskins of the National Football League, has been appointed assistant backfield coach by British Columbia Lions of the Western Conference. Braves Coming

Milwaukee Moves Into 3rd Spot

By ED WILES
Associated Press Staff Writer

If Milwaukee Braves can get Cincinnati Reds and Los Angeles Dodgers to stand still just a little longer, then might run off with the National League pennant.

They recorded a 2-1 victory over the second - place Dodgers — scoring the winning run on a double steal — Thursday night and moved back into first place while dropping Los Angeles three games behind leading Cincinnati. The Braves are 5½ games shy of the top and 4½ behind the Dodgers.

The Braves have a long way to go, but they have been in worse shape. They hit their low point July 15 when they were in fifth place 14½ games behind Cincinnati.

The Braves have won 32 of 47 games since then and have picked up eight games on the Reds and five on the Dodgers. In that span, Cincinnati had only a 25-22 won — lost record, Los Angeles a 25-16 mark.

GIANTS LOSE

Milwaukee edged past San Francisco into third place when the Giants lost to the Chicago Cubs Thursday night for their fifth straight setback, giving St. Louis Cardinals beat Philadelphia Phillies 3-1.

The Braves nailed the Dodgers with a second-inning home run by Frank Thomas and the tricky double-steal by Felix Mantilla and Lee Maye and Hank Aaron. It was Aaron's 23rd of this season for Thomas and one of six Milwaukee hits off loser Don Drysdale (10-9), who hasn't won since he beat the Braves 8-3 Aug. 5.

Rookie Bob Hendley (5-3) checked Los Angeles on six hits but had to haul out until Frank Howard doubled and Charlie Neal singled in the seventh inning.

The Cubs chased Juan Marichal (13-9) while collecting all their 10 hits in the first three innings. Three runs in the first did it, but Billy Williams' two-out single knocking a 1-2 tie.

Southpaw Jack Curtis (9-10) was the winner, limiting the Giants on six hits after giving up a first - inning run on Joe Amalfitano's bases - loaded triple and a sacrifice fly by Willie Mc Covey.

A two - out triple by Stan Musial broke a 1-1 tie for the Cards in the fifth - inning. It scored Ken Boyer, who reached base with the only walk given by loser Art Mahaffey (9-13).

The Cards' first run, scoring on Curt Flood's pop-fly single, followed Mahaffey's scoreless inning streak at 26 in the sixth. Bob Gibson (10-9) was the winning pitcher, blanking the Phils over the last eight innings on four hits. Billy Wilta of the Cards fell one short of Mel Ott's major league record of 512 as a run in 11 consecutive games.

First of Finals

Joyces Get Easy Victory

By GARRY ALEXANDER
Staff Writer

A short-lacked Cobourg team turned the opening game of the Belleville and District Softball League finals into a complete farce before a good crowd at the Fairgrounds here last night.

Trailing 10-1 in the top of the ninth, after a dull, listless performance, the Merchants ended up on the wrong end of a 9-0 default score, against Joyce Real Estate.

The second game will be played in Cobourg Saturday night, then back here Tuesday in Cobourg Thursday, and if necessary, back here a week from Saturday.

Cobourg 1st baseman Lingard evenly divided his time between making errors and agitating plate umpire Gerald "Stoney" Baker. Baker finally ejected Lingard while he was at bat in the top of the ninth. Cobourg, minus catcher Al Church, shortstop Dick Turpin and outfielder Clark Harnden, did not have another player to replace Lingard and the game was then defaulted to Joyces by the 9-0 score.

Joyces had opened up a 5-0 lead in the first three innings, on two of the only three hits they managed off Jim "Sleepy" Dawe, and a bagful more of Cobourg passed balls, wild pitches, errors and mental lapses.

Belleville scored once in the sixth, on Muirhead's infield single, a wild pitch, Kingston's long fly ball and another passed ball. They added single runs in the seventh and eighth on a combination of wild pitches and passed balls plated two runs in the seventh.

Joyces got their final run in the ninth, edged closer by three passed balls, an error and one lucky single over second baseman's head. Dawe was relieved by Ewart with two men on base and two outs in the one inning by Dawe. Two of the strikeout victims got on base while two batters drew walks and one was hit by a pitch. The merchants had seven errors in all.

The Joyce hits, in review, went to Claude Carr, with a double, Bobby Hull and Stu Muirhead, Hull and Jackie Elliott also came up with fielding singles.

Breaks Record In High Jump

SOFIA, Bulgaria (AP)—Valery Brumel of the Soviet Union Thursday broke his world high jumping record with a leap of seven feet, 4¼ inches (2.24 metres) in Soviet Games Thursday.

The six - foot - one, 175-pound miner's son cleared the bar at 2.25 metres on his third attempt. He bettered seven feet, four inches July 16 during the U.S. - Russian dual meet at Moscow in another of his numerous triumphs over John Thomas of the U.S.

A Surprise

Tiger-Cats Defeat Bombers 30-9

WINNIPEG (CP) — Hamilton Tiger-Cats, slightly overlooked in pre - season figuring as a power in Canadian professional football, have rocketed into prominence with three straight victories in the 1961 campaign.

They made an impressive invasion into the West Thursday night by belting the tough Winnipeg Blue Bombers 30-9 in a Canadian Football League interlocking game.

Victory sent the Ticats into a first-place tie in the Eastern Conference standings with Ottawa Rough Riders, defending Grey Cup champions. Each has six points, but the Ticats have played a game less.

It was the second straight defeat for the Bombers after they had rolled to four successive wins. They are in second spot in the Western Conference with eight points, two behind the leading and unbeaten Edmonton Eskimos.

Coach Jim Trimble's Ticats have recorded triumphs over British Columbia Lions of the Western Conference and Toronto Argonauts in the east. The latest performance will prompt many observers who rated the Tiger - Cats behind Ottawa and Montreal Alouettes to reconsider their forecasts.

Fullback Cookie McDougall provided most of the shock for 18,951 fans, catching three touchdown passes to pace the winners. McDougall caught two other passes from quarterback Bernie Faloney for a perfect five-for-five night.

End Hal Patterson scored the other H a m i l t o n touchdown. Halfback Don Sutherin kicked a field goal and three converts.

Gerry James, veteran Canadian fullback, got the only Winnipeg touchdown in the third quarter. Halfback Carver Shannon kicked a field goal which gave the Bombers a 3-0 lead starting the second quarter.

The first Ticat touchdown came just after the second quarter opened. Faloney fired a 15-yard pass to end Paul Dekker who lateralled to Patterson as he was tackled. Patterson raced another 60 yards.

About three minutes later, Faloney found McDougall in the clear in the end zone and hit him with an 18-yard touchdown pass.

Hamilton halfback Al Rogers recovered a Leo Lewis fumble at Winnipeg's 39-yard line to set up the next Ticat touchdown. McDougall slimmed the offensive when he took Faloney's short pitch while standing in the end zone.

Shepard's outstanding play started the Bombers on their way to a touchdown. His punt from the Winnipeg 37 was short, but he darted through a maze of players to recover the ball himself on the 55 - yard line. Winnipeg quarterback Hal Lerchen made 10 yards and passed to Shannon for 11 more. James and Shepard took the ball to the Hamilton 20. James then barged over centre for the payoff run.

Sutherin's 36-yard field goal capped a 45 - yard Hamilton march. McDougall got his third touchdown on a 13-yard pass from Faloney after the Bombers lost the ball on downs on their own 41 and the Tiger-Cats marched into scoring position in five plays.

The solid Hamilton line held Winnipeg's ground attack to 75 yards while Ticats made 180 yards rushing. Faloney completed 12 of 22 pass attempts for 211 yards while Ledyard connected on 16 of 27 attempts for 196 yards.

Read Drops 7-6 Decision To Cannifton

The Cannifton Clippers took a commanding 3-1 lead in their best-of-seven series with Read for the South Hastings League championship by handing Read a close 7-6 defeat last night in Read. The next game is scheduled for Cannifton Sunday after-noon starting at 2.00.

Cannifton scored three runs in their first time at bat but Read came back and moulded a walk, four hits and a pair of errors into the runs. They could not score after that.

The Clippers got two back in the second and won the game with two more in the fourth

Lyle Bradshaw toiled for the winners, allowing eight hits over the five-inning route. He caught two on third strikes and walked a single batter. Bradshaw also carried a big bat as he was good for a pair of hits.

Percy Milligan took the loss. He was touched for six safeties walking five and striking out two.

Hickey Locke starred for the winners with a triple and a double. Ron Urch, O'Connor and Bradshaw each collected a brace of singles. Len Harvey also hit safely on one occasion.

Maris Again Blanked as Yanks Lose

MINNEAPOLIS (AP)—Mickey Mantle continued his sensational batting assault Minnesota Twins Thursday but Roger Maris again was blanked as the Detroit best New York Yankees 5-4.

While Mantle, who now has 48, has hit four home runs in the Twin cities, homer mate Maris has connected only one here.

"I haven't hit in this park all year," said Maris. "In fact, I couldn't even hit here when I played for Cleveland's Indian American Association.

"It can't be the pitching," added the left - handed slugger whose 51 homers are six games ahead of Babe Ruth's pace of 1927, when he slammed a record of 60. "I've hit these same hurlers in New York. Maybe you could call it a jinx."

Mantle's homer put him one game up on Ruth. His shot and Minnie Minoso Lopez and Bill Skowron established a new American League team record, giving New York 195 this season and eclipsing their own mark of 185 set last year.

Oshawa Out

Booth's Win Without Hit

Booth TV's, held hitless over the nine-inning route, scored two runs in the fifth inning and edged Oshawa Woodviews 2-1 to capture the OASA Midget "A" Zone Four championship here last night.

Murray Hobbs, Oshawa pitching ace, hurled a no-hitter and still lost. He struck out four and walked two. Booth's sent only 28 batters to the plate in their eight innings at bat.

Belleville trailed 1-0 entering the bottom of the fifth. A two-base error on an infield pop fly ignited the winners' hit-less rally. A passed ball and another error on St. Denis' ground ball tied the score. A Zelder's choice, another passed ball and Pete Mitchell's fly ball chased the deciding run across the plate.

Mitchell almost spoiled Hobbs' no-hitter in the eighth inning on a two base line drive down the foul line. Both stayed foul by inches.

Bobby Boyle toiled for the win, scattering five Oshawa hits in a steady performance. He struck out one and walked one.

The Oshawa hits went to Dave Deming, with two, Pete Vasko, Ian McNamee and Lou Kocho.

Oshawa's will meet a Toronto team in the next round, likely next weekend.

Hatchery Culture Dubious Investment and Never Satisfactory Substitute

By BEN WARD
Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA (CP)—If the fishing starts to decline in your favorite lake don't go yelling for a restocking program. Chances are it will be a waste of money.

Two experts in fish management contend that anglers who look to hatcheries to remedy poor fishing are still in the dark ages of fish management.

"The advances of artificial over natural production . . . are not sufficient enough to justify the effort and costs required in hatchery operation," says W. A. Clemens of the University of British Columbia zoology department.

Echoing that sentiment is P. A. Larkin of UBC's institute of fisheries who says in most cases "hatchery culture is a dubious investment and is never a satisfactory substitute for natural reproduction."

The comments are contained in study papers prepared for the Resources for Tomorrow conference in Montreal Oct. 23-28.

PREVENT FLOODS

Among the topics to be tackled at the wide-ranging conference will be the future of sports fishing in Canada and what can be done to ensure the preservation of good fishing areas.

Mr. Clemens says the improvement of spawning beds and elimination of artificial spawning grounds shows promise of becoming a more efficient cure for declining fish populations.

Flood control was another important factor, preventing flash floods from destroying spawning beds and keeping water levels to a point at which fish can scan enough stream easily.

He suggests reforestation as a way of rehabilitating spawning streams by creating the right food and cover fish need.

Mr. Larkin says hatchery fish often die soon after release because they cannot cope with the sudden change to wilderness water or are injured and expended in transport.

RESEARCH FOR CHEMICAL

Both experts say the removal of undesirable fish species is the best way of developing better game fishing. But the problem is to find a chemical which will do the job without harming the desirable fish.

Experiments are under way to find such a chemical and the search has been spurred by development of the lamprey eel poison which destroys the eel but leaves other fish and water life unharmed.

Neither researcher places much faith in the development of hybrid fish in which scientists seek to cross two or more species and retain the best features of each.

Mr. Clemens says such hybrids can be developed in hatcheries easily enough but when they are released the hybrid will interbreed with the natural fish population and quickly lose the new strain.

The only way to retain a hybrid vigor is to stock a barren lake with the new species, an experiment which hadn't been tried on the scale needed to decide its value.

Hatcheries are not altogether discarded by the two reports. Mr. Clemens says hatchery-raising may be essential in certain areas where natural spawning becomes impossible. And Mr. Larkin sees some value in the "put and take" policy where larger hatchery fish are released to be caught almost immediately.

Hopes to Win NBA Presidency By Amendment

MONTREAL (CP) — Charlie Mayer leaves Monday for the National Boxing Association convention in Hershey, Pa., armed with a constitutional amendment he hopes will land him the NBA presidency.

The 39-year-old sports columnist from Montreal would normally be in line for the job as a matter of precedent. He's the NBA's first vice-president, by tradition an election shoo-in to the top office.

But an upheaval in Montreal's turbulent municipal politics last October dealt a haymaker to Mayer's chances.

His party was beaten and he lost his seat on the city council he had held since 1954 and with it his appointment as a member of the Montreal Athletic Commission.

The NBA regulations stipulate the president must be a member of a state, provincial or municipal athletic commission.

Mayer said the amendment he plans to introduce would qualify a member of a national governing body for the presidency. He is vice-president of the Canadian Boxing Federation, formerly the president.

Mayer writes a column for the French-language weekly La Patrie, and a syndicated sports feature carried by 11 other French - language weeklies in Quebec province. At one time he published his own weekly newspaper here.

Producer Refused the Use Of Park for Shooting Scene

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—One of the episodes of The New Breed, a new ABC action series, will involve a sneak thief who steals a woman's purse at an amusement park.

A gimmick of the show is using Los Angeles area backgrounds for stories about the work of a special police detail.

The producer, Quinn Martin, asked permission to use a seaside amusement park for location shooting. The park management was overjoyed — until it heard the sneak thief plot. Then the answer was a firm "no."

"We've spent $1,000,000 publicizing this place," Martin was told, "and we certainly don't want to leave the impression that there are sneak thieves operating here."

The scenes were made in another amusement park well outside the Los Angeles area.

BROWN PROBLEM

That represents but one of the problems of making a television program with identifiable backgrounds and the flavor of a recognizable city.

Another is the danger of lawsuits. If, for instance, a program located a fictitious drug store illegally dispensing narcotics at a point where a real drug store operated legitimately, the real-life store owner would run, not walk, to his lawyer's office.

Several years ago an adventure series failed to check out carefully an evil character in Chicago. The character was called—let's say — Francisco Schweinelder, and he was supposed to work for the Apex Lawnmower Company in Chicago. It turned out that there really was such a company in that city and that it employed a salesman with a name similar to that of the villain, information of this coincidence was accompanied by a hefty demand for cash settlement. It was settled out of court.

Now most TV production units hire a research firm to check out names of characters against telephone books and city directories. The names are immediately changed if similarities are found.

Harry Belafonte Outlines What U.S. Negro Wants

By JAMES BACON

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — "I'd gladly give up whatever success I have to be part of the human race."

That's Harry Belafonte, the top folk singer, talking what the Negro in the United States wants.

"Individual human rights — the God-given dignity of man. That's all we're fighting for."

He says success is meaningless without those rights. If he were to give up success, the sacrifice would be considerable.

His recent Greek theatre session here was a record breaker. The announcement of his name brought a one-day advance order of $250,000.

Belafonte says he wants to capitalize on his appeal by making a movie wherein he would travel the world and film natives singing folk music in the spot.

SEEKS UNDERSTANDING

"It could be something on the order of Around the World in 80 Days. At least I would want its primary message to be entertaining like that. But I think it would help to better understand other peoples."

Belafonte is on the governing board of President Kennedy's Peace Corps, the only shortcomings he sees personally so named.

"I think the Peace Corps may be the answer. We tried bombs and guns—and failed. Let's try it with people."

Belafonte lauds the state department's cultural tours, especially in Africa.

"Of course, it's easy for a Belafonte or a Louis Armstrong to get rapport with the African people. I'd like now to have the Africans meet a Fred Astaire or a Gene Kelly. I think it would help for them to meet some of our great white artists."

Steel-Workers Union Only Road Open to Rebel Local To Get Back Into Congress

SUDBURY (CP)—The name of the United Steelworkers of America emerged spearheaded Thursday as internal strike continued in the International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers.

A Steelworkers spokesman declared the only road open to Mine-Mill's rebel local 598 if it wants to get back into the Canadian Labor Congress is through the USW. CLC officials agreed.

And Mine-Mill's national office Thursday made public a sworn affidavit that some local executives want to join the steel union.

President Don Gillis of the 12,000-member local would not comment except to say a statement will be made shortly on negotiations with the CLC. He added no negotiations had been held with the Steelworkers.

Mine-Mill was expelled from the old Canadian Congress of Labor in 1956 over a factional fight with the Steelworkers and the issue of Communist influence in the national executive.

When Gillis and a "reform" slate took over Local 598 in 1958 elections, he announced he would try to bring the union back into CLC affiliation.

MUST JOIN USWA

Larry Sefton, Steelworkers district director, said Thursday:

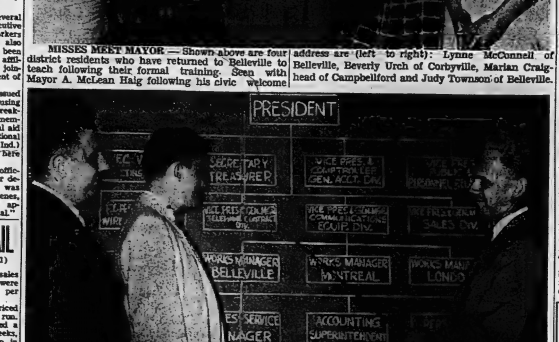
"The only way Mine-Mill Local 598 can become affiliated on its own with the Canadian Labor Congress is by joining the United Steelworkers of America."

The Steelworkers were awarded jurisdiction by the old CCF in the non-ferrous mining fields and the jurisdiction was continued when it merged with the Trades and Labor Congress to form the CLC. Sefton said.

In Ottawa, CLC Vice-President William Dodge said the congress is "in agreement with Mr. Sefton's statement."

Mine - Mill's national office Thursday made public a sworn affidavit by Tom Taylor of nearby Coniston, who resigned from the Gillis executive last Saturday just before national President Kenneth Smith ordered the local into trusteeship.

CLAIMS FAVOR MOVE



Taylor's affidavit said several members of the local executive favored joining the Steelworkers to get CLC affiliation. It also declared the convention ban been held by CLC officers that affiliation could come only by joining the USW or the International Brotherhood of Teamsters.

The Local 598 executive issued a statement Thursday accusing the national executive of breaking faith with Mine-Mill membership by signing a "mutual aid pact with the Teamsters' National Brotherhood of Teamsters. The pact was announced here Monday night.

It added: "The national officers were vehement in their denials that such a move was planned, yet behind the scenes, and without membership approval, they signed the deal."

Among them was a large mirror, a gift from the community. The Rev. Lorne McCallum was chairman and Mrs. A. G. Jones presided at the piano. Those who took part in the program were Homer Leavitt, Robert McColl, Hilliard Morrow, Percy Wheely, H. Marrow, H. Tindall of Stirling and E. R. Dorland. The ladies who gave readings were Mrs. H. ONTARIO RETAIL

sted Thursday night that sales generally across Ontario were up between three and 10 per cent.

As expected, the higher priced items were getting a bigger play. Luxury car dealers reported a boom during the last two weeks, with an exclusive fur shop in Toronto counted August sales up 30 per cent over year ago.

An appliance store manager said: "The whole month has been hectic. Sales have been almost double those of August last year."

The tax doesn't apply to articles bought and delivered before midnight Thursday, but installments go on for months.

Provincial Treasurer Allan announced this week that sales tax inspectors for the time being will not visit vendors who have not received a permit. Applications for permits must still be mailed. He instructed them to collect the tax on purchases only.

Retailers will receive about $14,000,000 a month for collecting the tax and keeping a record of sales. Another $1,000,000 a year will be spent on provincial collecting and computing the tax.

OPENS OFFICES

District offices are in Toronto, Windsor, London, Welland, Brantford, Stratford, Hamilton, Guelph, Owen Sound, Chatham, Peterborough, Smiths Falls, Ottawa, Cornwall, Sudbury, North Bay, Timmins, Sault Ste. For contravention of the Sales Tax Act a person is liable on conviction to a fine of $10 to $1,000. False statements may incur fines from $25 to $10,000 or imprisonment up to two years, or both.

New Teachers Tour City And Visit Industrial Plant

Thirty-three teachers, who will be teaching in Belleville Public, Separate and Secondary Schools for the first time this fall were the guests of the Chamber of Commerce for the Second annual business - education day. The day's program, which featured a bus tour of the city and a visit to the Northern Electric plant, commenced at the Corby Public Library, where the new teachers were addressed by local school board officials.

Following the welcoming remarks by Gerald Wishart, president of the Chamber of Commerce, Lyle Tanguberr, chairman of the Public School Board, Ken Burkitt of the Separate School Board, and Archie Wills, chairman of the Hastings County District High School Board, all expressed the welcome from their various boards.

A. O. Drysdale, director of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce and president of the Ontario Chamber of Commerce, gave a short address outlining the purpose of the business-education day. Besides giving new teachers an introduction to the community the day is designed to give them an insight into the working conditions which most of the parents of the children they will be teaching experience.

Mr. Drysdale, who is also manager of the Canada Cement plant at Point Anne, emphasized that in today's world it is extremely important that teachers stimulate their students thirst for knowledge and advanced education. He pointed out that it is the untrained and the poorly - educated who form the great majority of the unemployed. Students should take their education as high as possible in order to prepare themselves for a vocation, he added.

TAKE BUS TRIP

The part of the agenda was the bus trip through the city aboard a shiny new school bus, of course, provided for the occasion by Elliott Motors. Alderman Hon Bailey was the guide for the tour which gave the teachers an opportunity to view most of the major industries in the community as well as a large number of the schools, churches and various residential areas. The tour took about 90 minutes, ending at the Northern Electric plant.

Here the party was the guest of the company for dinner in the plant cafeteria, following which Mayor MacLean Haig spoke briefly to the group and extended the welcome of the city, especially, he quipped, to those who would be eligible to vote in the next civic election.

Donald McDonald, works manager, extended the greetings of the Northern Electric to the guests and gave a short history of the company's growth and an outline of the firm's organization as well as a description of the activity of the local plant.

TOUR PLANT

A 90-minute tour of the plant in groups of about a half dozen teachers accompanied by a guide then took place. Every facet of the complex task of manufacturing a quality electronic product out of the many components and raw materials delivered to the plant was explained from the time of receipt until the final product was packed ready for shipment.

Questions as to operating procedures or technical processes involved posed by the teachers were readily answered by their guides. A few of the guests also got a glimpse of the new office quarters which are nearing completion at the north side of the plant.

At the conclusion of the plant tour the teachers returned to the library and dispersed amid many favourable comments concerning the day's activities.

Our Duty of Discipline

By ROY L. SMITH

From a variety of references and confessions in the letters the Apostle Paul wrote, it is very evident that he was not always an easy man to work with. Any person, attempting to work under him, had to be prepared to forgive, overlook, capitulate and forget.

All this called for a rare type of personal discipline, and the Apostle was doubtless well aware of that fact. At any rate Paul's generous commendation of Timothy ("I have no one like him") must have rested down upon the fact that he knew he could depend upon the young man, in spite of his own sagitarities of mind and spirit.

DISCIPLINE AND LIFE

One of the most important principles any of us has to learn is this: there is no such thing as complete personal liberty in this world. And as the population continues to explode, and this world continues to grow more crowded, personal liberty must be curtailed still further.

The farmer's housewife, living in the middle of the prairie, on a farm land, need give no more than casual attention to the matter of disposing of the household waste. But the same woman, moving into a big apartment house in a city, finds that the question of garbage disposal is surrounded by an entire system of regulations and organization.

The hermit, living in a shack alongside a stream that runs through the desert, may perhaps say that the question of drinking is his own business, but a driver behind the wheel of a motor car equipped with 300 horse-power and driving down a highway filled with 100 other cars to the mile, is not at liberty to jeopardize the lives of other people for the sake of gratifying his own appetite.

The more complex civilization becomes, the more necessary it is that each individual shall discipline himself!

The more crowded life becomes, the more necessary it is for the drinking of the people to be disciplined. With alcoholism already rated as one of the first four "national diseases," it is no longer possible to allow citizens to give free reign to their alcoholic impulses.

All this called for a rare type of personal discipline, and the Apostle was doubtless well aware of that fact. At any rate Paul's generous commendation of Timothy ("I have no one like him") must have rested down upon the fact that he knew he could depend upon the young man, in spite of his own sagitarities of mind and spirit.

For the police to discipline the drinking driver is the poorest possible solution of the problem of highway hazards. For the individual to recognize his responsibilities and respect them by disciplining himself, is the glory of our democracy.

It is not almost importance that we, as Americans, shall remember that the greatest factor in the glorious days of complete individual liberty passed out with the passing of the log cabin and the muzzle loading rifle.

If we are to enjoy the benefits of a highly organized society (and those benefits are very great) we must very first of then we must be prepared to assume the disciplines that make such a society possible.

USSR MAKES FIRST OF NUCLEAR TESTS

If Reds Mean What They Say Accord Possible

Diefenbaker Sketches Course for Negotiation

By JAMES NELSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

WINNIPEG (CP) — Prime Minister Diefenbaker has sketched a course for negotiations with Russia and East Germany which should, he says, guarantee freedom and free access to West Berlin without war.

Speaking at the 24-nation conference of uncommitted nations here, Mr. Nehru said he regretted the Soviet resumption decision and urged the conference to back negotiations among the great powers.

The Indian leader told the conference the world today faces "the most dangerous situation that has arisen since the last war."

The only way to solve the problem was by general disarmament—"a complete necessity for the world of the future."

But he added "we should not lay down what should be done about Berlin and Germany."

"This danger of war comes nearer and nearer. It has become nearer to us by the resumption decision of the Soviet government to start nuclear tests."

In another conference addresses, President Kwame Nkrumah of Ghana said Friday's Russian H-bomb explosion showed "the supreme danger facing mankind" and called for talks between President Kennedy and Soviet Premier Khrushchev.

He offered Ghana as a possible site for Kennedy-Khrushchev discussions on Berlin and the German problem.

Emperor Haile Selassie of Ethiopia said in a speech "our only hope" was that world opinion could keep the big powers from breaking the peace.

Nkrumah, who had talks with Khrushchev earlier this week, said the explosion was "a shock to one as it must have been to you all."

"But it is a shock which forcibly brings home to us the supreme danger facing mankind, the imperative necessity to ensure that these must be signed and ratified by the Belgrade conference should stand for general and complete disarmament.

2. The existence of both German states should be recognized.

3. The great powers should sign a peace treaty with Germany without delay.

4. The complete liquidation of colonialism in all its forms and manifestations by Dec. 31, 1962."

5. Three deputies — one each representing the East, West and neutral countries—should be appointed to assist the United Nations secretary-general.

6. The conference should support the admission of Communist China to the United Nations at the General Assembly session opening in New York Sept. 19.

7. Africa must be declared a "nuclear-free zone."

Russian Tests Increase War Danger--Nehru

BELGRADE (Reuters) — Indian Prime Minister Nehru said today Russia's decision to resume testing of nuclear weapons had increased the danger in the present world situation.

TWO OF BANDITS SIGHTED BY LUMBER WORKER

Seen Crouching On Bass Lake Road

HAVELOCK (CP) — A tip from a lumber worker who saw two men fleeing into bushland today spurred the hunt for four armed bank robbers.

The provincial police squad cars raced to the scene, about 10 miles southeast of where the search had been concentrated at Coe Hill.

Sawmill worker Martin Murphy told police he saw two men running ahead of him as he walked along the Bass Lake road about 7:45 a.m. When they saw him, they fled into the thick bush.

They were footprints in the ground soaked by an overnight rain and Cpl. William Balck of the provincial detachment, identification expert, tentatively identified them as identical to those of prints found Friday afternoon near the bandits' second getaway car near Coe Hill.

The scene was a short distance south of Highway 7 at Steenburg area, about 10 miles northeast of the 15 to 20 mile road from the location of the original search.

The bandits looted the Toronto - Dominion Bank branch here of government which would make the leftist vice-president a figurehead and vest the top power in a prime minister.

At the midnight sight change Friday night a group of revolutionaries overpowered the Petroborough detachment, 26 miles west of here, to relieve their weary colleagues in a search around Coe Hill, 10 miles north of here.

Provincial police constable described the area "typical, rugged country with lakes, water and rocks." He said the isolated area has a lot of moose, deer and "they like to see humans."

Somewhere in the thick 40-square figure it may be within an area seven by five miles — the fugitives were ordered to be hiding. One police theory was that they had a hideout there, perhaps an abandoned cover-grown lumber camp that, as rumored, would have to be used to walk into before you could see it.

Another theory was that the men, who would surely get lost if they did not know the area, will try to make a break out of it in daylight when cottagers and holidayers swell the almost non - existent population of the few highways twisting fairly less obtrusive.

WEATHER HAMPS

The weather has been hot and humid and at times rainy. There was no sun in the area most of the day.

East Germany Protests to U.S. Against Sending Troops to Berlin

BERLIN (Reuters) — East Germany has protested to the United States against the "provocative" sending of 1,500 American troops to West Berlin. The protest, publicly hailed here, it was disclosed today.

The East German news agency ADN said the protest note was contained in a note handed over to the American envoy who landed in the Czech capital of Prague.

The note said the dispatch of the soldiery along the autobahn to West Berlin violated East German territory Aug. 20 was bound "to complicate the situation in West Berlin."

The official news agency, announcing the protest hand-over of the note, said the American move was an "abuse of the communication traffic" of the (East) German Democratic Republic."

The note, publicly hailed here, for the sending of this battle group to West Berlin makes the provocative intention of the measure obvious."

The protest note was handed over in Prague because the United States has no diplomatic relations with East Germany.

Meanwhile, East Berliners streamed to the centre of East Berlin at a mass rally for Soviet spaceman Gherman Titov, returning such fire.

RIO DE JANEIRO (AP) — Joao Goulart's claim to the presidency was strengthened today as the Brazilian Chamber of Deputies gave overwhelming approval to a constitutional amendment which would install him with limited powers. The measure now goes to the Senate.

Drought Slashes Prairie Wheat Crop Says Report

OTTAWA (CP) — This summer's Prairie drought has slashed Canada's wheat crop this year to a anticipated 495,000 bushels—smallest since the so-called Dirty Thirties.

It may be the end of an eight-year period of heavy surplus wheat stockpiles.

The seeding crop forecast Friday by the bureau of statistics would be 45 per cent below last year's 489,624,000 bushels and the worst since the 1937 disaster year when only 102,000,000 bushels were harvested. The 10-year average for 1951-60 is 497,400,000 bushels.

The Prairie wheat crop is forecast at 391,000,000 bushels, less than half last year's 470,000,000 bushels. Other Prairie crops are expected to have similar losses, most as heavily, with the prospective oat crop down 42 per cent, barley 45 per cent and flaxseed 37 per cent.

The heavy crop losses from the summer drought coincide with a sharp upturn in wheat exports.

Last month agriculture minister Alvin Hamilton estimated that wheat exports reached 354,000,000 bushels in the crop year ended last July 31—fourth-largest on record—and said he is hopeful that this year's exports will compare favorably.

Canada entered the new crop year with carry-over of 525,000,000 bushels. The new crop would mean total stocks for the year of some 1,020,000,000 bushels.

If the government's export hopes are realized, coupled with normal domestic consumption of some 150,000,000 bushels, the carry-over would be pared to around 275,000,000 bushels by the end of the crop year next December.

This would be the smallest stockpile since 1950, the start of a series of bumper crops that created Canada's wheat-surplus problem.

Lesage Challenges Right Of Govt. to Set Up Board

QUEBEC (CP)—Premier Jean Lesage Friday challenged the right to the federal government to establish a royal commission on health services in Canada, labelling the move as infringement on provincial jurisdiction.

The royal commission, he said, is inquiring into matters which "are in jurisdiction and which we do not believe we can participate in it."

Mr. Lesage was speaking at a press conference, during which he met publicly for correspondence between himself, Chief Justice Emmett M. Hall of Saskatchewan and Quebec Health Minister Alphonse Couture.

He gave some in the conclusion," Mr. Lesage wrote Mr. Justice Hall last Friday, "that the inquiry to be undertaken will deal chiefly with matters which fall exclusively under the jurisdiction of the provinces."

"We must energetically deny that the federal government has

LOGGERS TO GO BACK TO WORK, FIRES DIMINISH

Hunting Season Opens as Usual

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP)—Newfoundland's loggers, kept out of the woods this summer by forest fires, will go back to work next Wednesday and the province's fall hunting season will open as scheduled Sept. 11.

The announcements were made Friday night by Resources Minister W. J. Keough. He said the forest fire danger had diminished to such an extent that the two - month ban on game laws in the woods could be lifted Tuesday midnight.

This means 5,000 loggers will be back at work the next day, cutting the raw materials for the province's pulp and paper mills Sparks from chain saws were believed to have been responsible for some of the fires.

The announcement does not mean the government expects the fires will be out by then. But it feels the chance of fall weather and the presence of 2,500 civilian and military firefighters is enough to control any fires which do break out.

SITUATION BETTER

Chief Forester Jay Ralph said after an aerial survey that there is still some danger but "the situation is fairly well contained."

Main trouble spot was Salmon Pond, near Glenwood, 15 miles west of Gander, where more than 300 firefighters have prevented the flames from reaching a valuable spruce stand. At last report 50 men wielding back pumps had trapped the fire in a 2,000-foot square.

Cloudy weather was predicted for today over the Gander area with expected to return Sunday.

New outbursts caused concern Friday when they reached 35 on the southeast coast but 120 men were keeping the flames under control. The fire, largest single blaze in the province, had spread over 1,000 square miles.

The resources department is making plans for a ground and aerial survey of how wildlife survived the fires and how many animals are known to have perished.

No Decision

CORNWALL (CP) — Highways Minister Frederick M. Cass said Friday night he has made no decision as to whether he will contest the Progressive Conservative leadership when Premier Leslie Frost steps down.

Following the conclusion of the Conservative Association convention here, at which he was the guest speaker, Mr. Cass said: "I have made no decision yet but plan to devote careful consideration to the matter."

He told delegates the police have the power and the people to achieve complete success in the hit-and-run fatality.

Expect Kennedy Will Decide Soon On U.S. Testing

Intermediate Size Bomb Exploded in Mid-Air

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER
WASHINGTON (AP) — Russia's explosion of a nuclear test device was expected today to hasten a decision by President Kennedy on resumption of U.S. nuclear weapons testing.

Informed officials now consider it likely Kennedy will make a decision early next week and that it will be to start up U.S. testing soon. Russia's last test explosions were held in the fall of 1958.

It also was learned that the Kennedy administration is considering some modification of the secrecy policy covering the U.S. nuclear weapons arsenal. The reason: To give the American people and the world a better idea of the amount of atomic force available to the United States for its own defence and the defence of its allies.

Kennedy said Thursday that U.S. should consider any move "which adequate" to deal with the "political and blackmail" which he said now is being practised by Russia.

TYPE UNKNOWN

The White House announced Friday the U.S. had detected the Soviet nuclear explosion since Russia, the United States and Britain imposed moratoriums and began their last ban conference at Geneva almost two years ago.

The announcement said that the Soviet test explosion was in the vicinity of Semipalatinsk in Central Asia.

"The device tested had a substantial yield in the intermediate range," the statement said. "It was detected in the atmosphere."

In London, a foreign office spokesman said the explosion in the atmosphere rather than underground "increases by an amount as yet unknown the danger to health from radioactivity."

The White House statement said the Soviet nuclear explosion was detected by the nuclear detection system of the United States Air Force Technical Applications Center, which is a joint service agency.

Chief Justice Earl Warren of the U.S. supreme court is now in Canada and began their last

"Therefore, I have come to the realization that death being inevitable, should not be looked on as a calamity," the late actor, who died here June 30, 1961, at 7:30 p.m., was to the Richard Ellis printing plant at 336 Coleman Street where a fire had started in the washroom. No serious damage occurred.

The second alarm was at 8:17 p.m. to put out a rubbish fire at Hillcrest Church.

Coburn declared he would not object to a funeral service at the Little Church around the Corner in New York City—provided there be no flowers, no weeping, prayers, hymn-singing or think.

He said he believed in freedom of religion and a Supreme Being, but was not a member of a church.

THE GOLDEN YEARS

Providing Security for Wife Is Key Task for Retired Man

BY THOMAS COLLINS

A man's club, with more dignity and less noise than a country club, has asked how a business man who is approaching retirement can provide for the security of his wife.

"We want a formula, or a checklist," says the club president. "Something each of our members can sit down with, and map an intelligent program."

Unfortunately, there is no such formula for — and it is suggested that any wife whose husband does not belong to this particular club may want to place it under his coffee cup some morning.

1. The first thing any man approaching retirement should do is provide health insurance for himself and his wife. No matter how neatly a wife's security is arranged, a major illness can wreck it. A "disaster" policy that takes care of the expenses of a major illness, and has a deductible clause, is better things which the budget can afford. It usually best — and cheaper.

2. The pension. A husband should determine what will be his pension, if any of it, will be paid to his wife if he died. And for how long. This should be written down as Exhibit A, and read to his wife, and put in a safe place.

DRAW A WILL

3. A will. A husband who has any property, be it a few old marbles, will draw one with the help of a lawyer. When he comes Exhibit C, should be read to the wife, one copy put in a safe place, and another copy put likewise by another copy put likewise by another copy.

4. Cemetery lot. A husband should buy one, not where he wants to be buried, but around, but where it will be most reachable by his wife. The deed, Exhibit D, should be put in a safe place.

5. Exhibit E is the unemotional, factual letter instructing the wife specifically how to give the husband a modest funeral if he wants to save her money for the widow will find that any verbal instructions the got and shoot the works on an expensive funeral. Also, deliver a letter. The letter, to be read by the wife only after the above edicts, should be put in a safe place.

6. Life insurance. A husband should read all the fine print in his life insurance policies, determine whether the provisions are what his wife needs now if she should be left alone, then make what changes are advisable. The exact things he should will do should be written down in brief and in laymen language, read to the wife, and, as Exhibit F, put in a safe place.

EMERGENCY MONEY

7. Emergency money. A husband should set up a fund of at least $1,000 (if it's not a hand-to-mouth situation) and tell his wife to tide herself over a crisis, such as the husband dying. It can be in a bank, and the wife's name at the bank. But it must be where she can get her hands on it quickly without tax men, lawyers, creditors or anybody stepping in. Without this clause it's a confidential husband-wife matter.

8. Taxes. A husband who has accumulated any wealth, including a home, should see to it that his wife does not have to pay inheritance taxes on the part of it the helped him accumulate. As he approaches retirement he should muzzle his vanity a little and transfer some of the wealth to his wife's name. Put some of it in joint ownership, or something. The lawyer will know. Both the husband and wife should listen to what the lawyer advises on this point.

9. Realism. A husband, as he nears 65, should strike no decision — such as selling this or buying that, living on here or moving there — without determining first what effect the decision will have on his wife if she is left alone. Whatever the husband's desires it retirement is when he is dead, to satisfy them unless they fit into a pattern of life that is fit for a widow. Ask the wife who doesn't like fish deserves better than being stranded for life in a fishing camp — because her husband didn't think he would ever die.

Careless Driving Charge Laid Against Driver

Damage to the three vehicles amounted to several hundred dollars, including an estimated $300 to the Woods vehicle.

Also Friday night a still unidentified motorist attempting to drive his car out of the driveway at 211 Coleman St., instead drove his car over the wall into the Moira River.

The driver escaped unhurt and police are leaving to him the matter of figuring out how he is going to get his car out of the river.

position we are taking is simply that the federal government is trying to inquire into a provincial matter. We do not recognize this right."

Mr. Lesage was asked whether he thought joint federal-provincial programs could be discontinued and operated on a provincial basis alone.

"I think it can be worked out over a long period of time," Mr. Lesage said. "The province should consider this question more seriously than it has so far."

Dr. Courtnier said in a report to Mr. Lesage that what some medical services and external hospital services are all that could be done to round out Quebec's health services.

Quebec is in a good position to establish a health insurance program, Dr. Courtnier said, "Thanks to a wide range of benefits already provided in Quebec."

The late Premier Maurice Duplessis had claimed that the Massey commission investigating the arts, science and letters in Canada was dealing with matters relating to education, a field under exclusive provincial jurisdiction.

Actor's Estate Listed as More Than $10,000

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "I don't know whether I shall go," or whither I shall go," Charles Coburn declared in his last testament.

"I'm content with the knowledge that I have lived and that all living things must die.

"Therefore, I have come to the realization that death being inevitable, should not be looked on as a calamity," the late actor, who died here June 30, 1961, at 7:30 p.m., was to the Richard Ellis printing plant at 336 Coleman Street where a fire had started in the washroom. No serious damage occurred.

The second alarm was at 8:17 p.m. to put out a rubbish fire at Hillcrest Church.

The coltcoil detailed Coburn's philosophy of life and requested that he be cremated. He died Wednesday.

Coburn declared he would not object to a funeral service at the Little Church around the Corner in New York City—provided there be no flowers, no weeping, prayers, hymn-singing or think.

He said he believed in freedom of religion and a Supreme Being, but was not a member of a church.

International Union Against TB Will Meet

TORONTO—On September 10, some 1,500 delegates from 60 countries will gather for the five-day conference of the International Union Against Tuberculosis at the Royal York Hotel.

Though the IUAT has been organized for 41 years this is the first time it has met in Canada. It will be opened officially by the Hon. J. Keiller Mackay, Lieut. Governor of Ontario, who will be welcoming guests, some of whom are from lands under the equator, like Mali and Nigeria, others from as far north as Norway, Finland and U.S.S.R. and still others from as far south as Australia and Chile.

Among the visitors are men responsible for tuberculosis programs in countries as ancient as India, China, Japan and Egypt. There are also doctors who have made fortunes as tuberculosis services in nations as new as the Ivory Coast.

RATE HIGH

With many, tuberculosis is still the leading cause of death. In contrast are a dozen countries which, like Canada, have had tuberculosis rates reduced by 50 years. In these countries TB death rates are low but cases are still found in individuals and the costs in millions of dollars. Canada has approximately 10,000 patients yearly treated for tuberculosis and the annual bill for TB services is $40,000,000.

Topics to be considered range from extremely technical review of new drug-resistant strains of tubercle bacilli to exchange of views on how to get patients to continue taking drugs without a doctor or nurse standing over them. Patients' failure to take drugs is an important problem all over the world and suggestions for improving the situation will be heard from Tanganyika, Nagaland, Brazil, Tunisia and the United States.

For the first time a Canadian is president of the International Union Against Tuberculosis. He is Dr. G. J. Wherrett, since 1933, executive secretary of the Canadian Tuberculosis Association.

District CD Organization Fully Discussed at Meet

Yesterday representatives of district municipalities met together with RCAF and Canadian Civil Defence officials here to discuss emergency measures operations in this area at the hutting.

Head of Mayor A. M. Bell, a meeting held at the Hotel Quinte the armed forces personnel described the scope and depth of their responsibilities in event of an attack or a major disaster regarding the preparations which have been put into effect involving both service and civilian personnel.

The meeting was called, Mayor Haig said, to discuss informally the possibility of creating an adequate district civil defence organization on a long-range basis through a co-operative effort from all part of the municipalities and counties in this area. A favourable response was met in all quarters contacted, he said, and is indicative of a feeling that this subject has gone too long unattended in view of developments on the international scene.

Although there were no definite decisions made at this meeting, a meeting has been scheduled for next week with representatives from Hastings and Prince Edward counties, town of Trenton and the city of Belleville invited to attend.

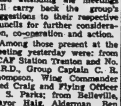
Several factors have prompted this interest, he said, in that this district is definitely within the fallout area if there is a nuclear attack on one of the major cities about Lake Ontario as well as the possibility of RCAF Station Mountain being a secondary or tertiary target in the event of hostilities. There are the complete lack of any preparation to meet the needs of civilians in the district in the event of hostilities or to provide for many refugees from the places closer to target areas of Hastings.

Belleville and district merchants were also invited to be on the look-out for two men and a woman suspected to be passing counterfeit bill in this area.

The warning to merchants was issued by Inspector J. Clair Hayes of the city police department after the city of Peterborough was flooded with the counterfeit money on Friday. The three suspected counterfeit passers are said to be driving a late model white auto.

Royal Canadian Mounted Police said the counterfeit bills passed had the serial Y/D 0000 and it was believed there are many bills of the same number being passed on unsuspecting merchants.

The RCMP advised merchants if they suspected bills being tendered to be counterfeit not to return the note to the customer but to attempt to delay the person passing the note until police are notified.



Should the note passer leave before the arrival of police, merchants were advised to attempt to have him followed until the nearest policeman is encountered.

It is impossible to follow the suspect police ask that an accurate description be obtained, if possible, the licence number of the car being used.

Third of Inch Rain Falls on Quinte District

Close to one third of an inch of rain fell on the Quinte district last night as a sudden electrical storm passed over the area just after midnight.

During the brief storm which lasted less than an hour there were several sharp thunderclaps accompanied by vivid lightning but no damage was reported in the district.

Despite the storm, however, yesterday's humidity is still with us and probabilities are for scattered showers again today.

Will Question Youth About Missing Girl

TORONTO (CP)—Police Friday arrested Gilles Frenette, 18, of Cap de la Madeleine, Que., wanted for questioning in connection with the disappearance of Shawinigan, Que., teen-ager, on a charge of car theft.

Quebec Provincial Police arrived Friday night to question him and have also picked up on the car theft charge in connection with the disappearance of Denise Therrien, 16. The other two are Gerald Dagenais, 19, of Montreal and Victor Dubeau, 36, of Toronto.

Police spotted the car, stolen in Montreal from a car rental firm, after they were given its description. All three men will be returned there when fresh evidence here is complete.

The search for Frenette started earlier this week when it was thought Shawinigan teen-ager might have run away with him. Police said there was no sign of her when the men arrested.

"We want to get to the bottom of this elopement story," said QPP Inspector Jean J. Gauthier. "Our officers have been instructed to take all the time required to investigate the story in the Toronto area."

Denise has been missing since Aug. 8 when she left home to meet a man about an ad for a $35-a-week baby sitter.

Mr. Therrien, 44, maintains that his daughter was kidnapped and did not run away.

In Shawinigan, Maurice Carbonneau, 30, of Shawinigan, was sentenced Friday to three years in penitentiary after pleading guilty to a charge of attempted extortion.

Carbonneau was arrested Aug. 24 in a public telephone booth after a call demanding $5,000 ransom was received by Mr. Therrien for the safe return of his daughter Denise.

White Mice Used to Rob Two Stores

LONDON (Reuters) — Woman storekeepers in suburban Deptford today wondered where the white mice gang will strike next.

The gang, three in number and aged about 8, has robbed two stores in the district this week armed with about six trained mice.

The gang, keen observers of female nature, has worked out this operation:

While the women scream and cower, two confederates dash in, grab something, retrieve the mice and make their getaway.

So far, their haul has been 30 shillings ($4.20), a toy pistol and three lead soldiers.

The money was scooped from the till in a dry cleaner's store as the woman clerk screamed in a corner.

The gang struck next at a toy shop. The woman owner held she and another woman in the store were "terrified" when the first boy freed the mice.

"While we were screaming two others came in and grabbed some toys. They rushed out with the mice in their arms."

Bill of Rights To Be Widened When Possible

WINNIPEG (CP) — Prime Minister Diefenbaker said Friday the federal government will propose a bill of rights affecting both federal and provincial fields of law as soon as a way is found with Canadian Bar Association convention, Mr. Diefenbaker said.

"One of the first things the government will do, if it can reach agreement with provinces on a way to amend the constitution in Canada by Canadians, will be to bring in a bill of rights applicable in provincial jurisdictions as well as federal."

"Quite an advance" had been made recently on agreement on constitutional amendment procedures, "with the exception of one province," Saskatchewan.

"I am hoping there will be a further endeavour so as to bring about that agreement."

TWO OF BANDITS

Upwards of 30 policemen are cruising around the suspected hideout area and a few of them are heading into the woods. Police said that lumber will be maintained. Roadblocks have been set up.

Friday police found footprints and traced them, but the lead petered out.

QPP Inspector J. A. Stringer, heading the search squad, said he thinks there is "about a 50-50 chance" of catching the gunmen, who crashed two stolen cars in their escape. A provincial police car was shot out of commission as they blazed away at their pursuers.

Wild Animals Make Comeback Close to Toronto

TORONTO (CP) — Wild animals seem to be making a comeback within 150 miles of Toronto, according to observations by officers of the lands and forests department. And deer, raccoon, groundhogs and other fur - bearers are plentiful much closer.

Beaver may be seen at work within 35 miles of the city and there are reports of bear tracks in some of the ravines within the Toronto metropolitan area, the department says in its weekly news release.

More than $30,000 worth of beaver and mink were trapped in the Lindsay district during the 1960-61 season. Tweed district reported more than 11,000 beaver taken. Large cat - like animals, probably bobcat, have been reported 5around Allision and Orangeville and the species is believed to be increasing throughout southern Ontario.

Dean and John J. McCloy, Kennedy's chief disarmament policy adviser, conferred with the president at the White House Friday after Dean's return to Washington. He was summoned home Wednesday after Russia announced its decision to renew nuclear tests.

The blast triggered speculation that Soviet scientists wanted a component for one of the superbombs about which Premier Khrushchev has boasted.

The White House announcement described the blast as "in the intermediate range." This would be, U.S. scientists say, a blast with a force ranging from the equivalent of 20,000 tons of TNT up to 300,000 tons.

Khrushchev is announcing a resumption of nuclear weapons tests Wednesday, said Russian scientists now would proceed to develop a 100-megaton bomb, equivalent to 100,000,000 tons of TNT.

U.S. experts do not consider the size of the latest Soviet blast significant. They said an explosion in the 20-megaton range would be used to test components essential to the successful development of huge nuclear weapons. Smaller nuclear weapons are used to trigger the high yield blasts.

An Act of Terrorism

Some nine to a dozen months ago, in Eisenhower's time, there were reports that the U.S. was seriously considering resuming nuclear tests, having become disillusioned by the Russian stalling at the Geneva conference seeking to arrange for a formal ban on such tests.

There is no sound reason to doubt the accuracy of such reports.

It follows that, at first appearance, the Americans seem to have no tenable grounds for moral indignation at Russia's decision now to resume such tests. Russia, it may be argued, is merely doing what the Americans considered doing a year or so ago.

Closer examination will reveal a number of flaws in this reasoning.

Firstly, while the Americans may have considered resuming testing, they did not do so.

Secondly, although bias might enter any judgment that it had been Russia, rather than the West, which has blocked all efforts at an agreement for a test ban, there can be no questioning the fact that the Russians altered the rules of the game after the start of the conference, by demanding that a ban on tests be made a part of a general disarmament agreement.

Thirdly, the timing of the Russian announcement is either atrociously inept or almost unbelievably callous, coming at a time when international tensions have been tremendously heightened by the situation in Berlin.

Fourthly, and this is a point which is likely to weigh most with many U.S. officials, there is a grave suspicion that the Russians have abandoned the de facto test ban, observed by all nations except France during the duration of the conference, just as soon as tests would be useful to them. Russia announced an unilateral abandonment of the moratorium immediately after she had staged a series of such experiments in the fall of 1958. It appeared like an idealistic decision, resulting from real concern for the possible effects of increased radioactivity on future generations of mankind. The U.S. and Britain met the challenge and likewise suspended tests. Now it may be that Russia has had new weapons ready for testing for months, but if this is so the burden of proof is on her. One would have to be a trifle ing person, indeed, not to suspect that there might have been no new Russian tests during the past three years even if the Western powers, the U.S. and Britain, had continued testing, for the very good reason that the Russians did not consider new tests would be helpful or would augment their nuclear arsenal.

The whole tenor of the Russian announcement makes it only too plain that the object of the new series of tests is to terrorize the world. It may be argued that no new threat can develop out of these tests because the Russians already possess the power to destroy their enemies — just as the U.S. possesses the power to destroy Russia. Indeed, the Russian apologists practically admit this is true, when they say they are aware of the horrors which would be let loose on the world by even a few thermonuclear bombs, "and not one, not a hundred but thousands of such bombs are in the arsenals of the great powers." This argument, though, far from proving that the object of the new tests is not blackmail, tends to prove precisely the opposite. One bomb with five times the power of the biggest H-bombs now existing is not more deadly than five of these existing H-bombs, which we are told there are thousands stockpiled, but it is likely to appear more terrible to many people. The object, then, is not deadlier weapons but heightened terror.

Showdown

Virginia, land of song and story, of brave men and beautiful women, beloved of song writers and devotees of the weed, may yet have another claim to fame.

The day may dawn when UNESCO's most pressing task is to end illiteracy in the Old Dominion.

For two years there have been no public schools in Prince Edward County, Virginia. The schools were closed rather than have them accept Negro students. White children have since been attending "private schools" aided by county and state tuition grants. But Federal Judge Oren R. Lewis of Richmond has now forbidden state and county officials to distribute such grants, or to allow any credits to the private schools, so long as the public schools in the county remain closed.

Virginians, white Virginians that is, must now choose between leaving their children uneducated or opening schools which disregard the color of the pupils' skins.

That there should be any doubt about what their decision will be is a measure of the urgent need of Virginia for the best educational facilities their money can buy.

Berlin Election Issue?

By Joseph Barry in The New York Post

Until the Germans re-elect 85-year-old Konrad Adenauer to his fourth term in office on Sept. 17, we are all going to be treated like German voters. After that five-week vaccination from common sense, we'll be allowed to return to international affairs.

You can take that as coming from a "very high American source."

Between the German election and the Russian Communist party's national congress in mid-October, there will be a span of time—the West will shift markedly from a show of irresistible strength to one of reasonable compromise, though the word compromise will never appear in official speeches.

"In the five-week interim before the German elections," your agent asked a very high American source, "isn't there a great danger of political escalation?" The phrase, attributed to Secretary Rusk, expresses the pause-giving concern that Berlin is becoming an all-or-unlisted symbol of life-and-death prestige for both the U.S. and the U.S.S.R.

The very high American source granted the danger, but doubted the occurrence. "The positions are fixed, they have been published," he said, "and it's doubtful if there'll be any more major speeches from the rest of the summer, Mr. K. has gotten that major new bill off his chest, we can assume; and we all know just about where we stand. It's unwritten law — and there are vacations, even for us."

• • •

"But shouldn't there," your agent persisted, "be some deflation of the Berlin symbol, particularly for the American people, to prepare them for the compromises inevitable in negotiation?"

The very high American source accepted the premise of the question, namely the overinflation of Berlin's importance in the eyes of the American public, by proceeding without pause to the answer.

He repeated that he foresaw no aggravation of the crisis by a crescendo of Kaa-Hitty announcements and implied that by the end of the summer it would be clear that the summer of the air out of the Berlin balloon.

• • •

Probably he is right, so long as Comrade K. and Jack Kennedy can control the course now set for their personality portfolio from collision, the Berlin crisis is serious but not tragic. However, there is always the surmise of supremely cool judgment and showdown nerve.

Nuclear weapons are in the hands of politically less skilled subordinates. Rarely can there be mirrored by frightened and inflamed men.

Only the British seem more concerned about this than about the German election.

Conservative and Labor papers alike criticize the prime minister for their negative meeting. There is not a newspaper of importance that is not calling for negotiations, which in practice vouchsafes a call for surrender.

They are, unfortunately, out of synchronization with the American opinion, which is not prepared in August for what it will be prepared to late in September, at which time many will cry appeasement and betrayal.

Need to Fix Buying Power

Toronto Saturday Night

A pension most certainly is a good thing and a portable pension is even better, but one thing at the fuss it might have provided with Bank of Canada). Certainly, Ontario's initiative in developing a plan with such portability and vesting rights is commendable. This is a necessary first step in ensuring financial security for the individual, including that all the provinces ultimately will introduce similar legislation.

But it is only a first step and, in the long run, perhaps, will prove to be as comprehensive as now appears. Additionally, the pension plan as presently outlined cannot do an entirely satisfactory job by themselves. They require also a change of management hiring and firing procedures.

A pension is intended, as far as possible, to keep the employee — just as the U.S. possesses the power to destroy Russia. Indeed, the Russian apologists practically admit this is true, when they say they are aware of the horrors which would be let loose on the world by even a few thermonuclear bombs, "and not one, not a hundred but thousands of such bombs are in the arsenals of the great powers." This argument, though, far from proving that the object of the new tests is not blackmail, tends to prove precisely the opposite. One bomb with five times the power of the biggest H-bombs now existing is not more deadly than five of these existing H-bombs, which we are told there are thousands stockpiled, but it is likely to appear more terrible to many people. The object, then, is not deadlier weapons but heightened terror.

He Never Got Single Raise

Windsor Star

It is an old axiom that the improbable often occurs. Latest illustration is the discovery of "butcher, boy" in Midhurst, England, who worked for the one employer 14 years. During that period he never asked — and never got — a raise from his $7 per week wage.

In an era of inflation, union demands, labor shortage, almost unbelievable. It suggests, there are still some faithful employer-employee relationships of a type which has retired "should and, by implication, relationship" to his standard whilworking.

When it is observed that some Canadian wages and salaries are significantly lower (seven percent per year—compounded —the dilemma is clear. Obviously the employee has the first step in resolving this disparity between income and outgo during prices while working, and fixed income and rising prices when retired—and, of course, with the retirement fixed income significantly below preretirement income.

What is needed, ultimately, is a device to enable pension plans to provide fixed purchasing power, not just fixed income. This, admittedly, is a somewhat difficult problem. But it is not insoluble. A beginning can, in any case, be made with most current pension plans.

That beginning would call for a determination on the part of management to adjust retirement ages at regular periods to costs and benefits. There is no actuarial reason why the ultimate in retirement ages produce sharp changes in benefits levels.

But to take even this small step forward management must abandon its old position of maximum hiring and retiring ages. Unfortunately, this is a step it has consistently refused to take.

STRENGTH FOR THE DAY

—DR EARL L. DOUGLASS

IT'S UP TO YOU

To what extent should we submit to the necessity of conformity, and to what extent should we be rebels?

This is a question everyone has to answer for himself. Conformity has its advantages and its intellectual also. When there is evil in the world we should be rebels at that. When we encounter something which appears to us to be right and advantageous for ourselves and others, we should conform ourselves to things as they are. Every religious system requires a certain amount of conformity on the part of its members. Good citizenship requires conformity to certain basic requirements of order and justice.

The person, of course, who worries us is the boy or girl who either conforms all over the place to social practices as they exist and the boy or girl who rebels against everything from parental discipline to the criminal code. Some conformity we indeed must have. The human race cannot start at scratch with every generation. What the past has handed down has some meaning. But along with the good which has been handed from the past there are evils which need to be opposed.

So the normal individual must balance conformity and rebellion in his nature whether he is a teenager or a person of mature years. Life is primarily a matter of balance. God leaves us giving us choices and compelling us to make them whether we want to or not.

You have to decide whether you will be a conformist or a rebel.

". . . After paying for passport, visas, medical shots, and the going away party . . . I didn't have enough left for the fare."

Standardize Automatics

Pasadena Star - News

Remember way back, when automobiles all had different gear-shift patterns, and the invention that might be "reverse" is one car and "low" in the next? If you do, you're much older than we, or us. Those were the days before anyone can take our word for it that such was the state of affairs until the triumphant adoption of the standard shift pattern.

Today motor cars have automatic transmissions, but with this additional progress the car makers seem to be returning to the confusion of the days before the standard shift. What we are talking about is the fact that the automatic shift positions for "reverse" and "low" may be that for "reverse" in another. It may have been all right for cars to have different shift positions in the old days. "Familiarity with the various systems was something to brag about, especially if one knew nothing else. But confusion in shifting to "park" and "reverse" position in the rush of evening traffic may easily be disastrous. Matters are not helped by the tendency for drivers to buy new cars, whose shift patterns may differ.

The time is here for another great meeting of minds on shift patterns by the industry at large. Futhermore, such standardization would very likely save the car-makers money.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

The myth that everybody speaks English in Europe, and you need no other language, has been painfully exploded by another batch of tourists now homing from abroad.

On the well-beaten path of the conducted tour type of travel in the big hotels and around the conventional show-places, it is true you can always find somebody who speaks English. But even a little way off the beaten path you are likely to find yourself mouthing like an idiot and groping in your phrase book for a much more limited vocabulary than that of interesting human contact than is possible to those who can speak and understand French, Italian, or German. While the number of those content to go on conducted or rubberneck tours has increased greatly, the number of tourists wanting to get off the beaten path and really travel has seen a far greater increase. These are the ones who have found something slightly heinous is the assumption of English-speaking that theirs is the universal language.

"Without the local language," says one of my friends newly returned, "you might just as well stay home and look at a color slides of foreign lands."

To Your Good Health

'Spider Veins' Are Said To Be Physiological Mystery

By Joseph C. Holmes, M.D.

"Dear Dr. Holmes: For several years I have been troubled with small purplish blood vessels on the thighs. They are somewhat purple, and most unsightly. What can be done? They have become worse and are now appearing on the calf of the leg. I am 36 and of normal weight for my height. — Mrs. R.H."

These are known commonly as "spiders," or "spider veins" or quite often as "venous stars." They are not visible, I might say, from the range at which I, like other brisk, middle-aged males, might scrutinize a handsome pair of legs walking down the street! But I can't help being aware, from letters that this discoloration is very worrisome to women. I have yet to receive a letter, out of hundreds of thousands, from a man saying, "My wife is worried about spider veins."

So I take the facts to be these: Women, who (and I approve) are very interested in their appearance, are troubled by spider veins.

Actually, these "spiders" are tiny blood vessels. They are not necessarily "broken" little veins because if they were, the result would be a purplish "bruise" mark, as the blood escaped in a small way from the broken vessel. (That's what a bruise is.)

Exactly what causes veins to appear without pregnancy, and it is equally possible for them to be absent despite repeated pregnancies.

They don't have to appear in the legs; they are known to appear elsewhere after an injury — sometimes after a severe scratch.

They don't seem to have relationship to health. However, since there is so much interest in them, some very detailed studies have been made, and readers will be glad that these say this marks can come and go. Some disappear completely. Others persist and show a convivial cap.

There was a time in the early days of motor-car travel when the same camaraderie prevailed. Then, whenever a car broke down, it became a matter of sympathy for the rest of over-charged and cheerfully driven automobiles speed kids. But it is decently to be hoped that the surge of unfriendliness that has engulfed completely kill the credibility of the bystander that does not first still on our waterways.

Waterways Camaraderie

Financial Post

One of the few places where the cordial camaraderie of the still practised is on Canada's inland waterways. An old skiff with a pocket motor sometimes pass a 30-ft. luxury cruiser with a crew of respective captains exchanging the usual stores of the head.

Not even the amateur skipper fools his like negotiating a tricky lock, few sound an impertinent blast on the horn when the cruisers pull in to spend the night. Strangers are more likely to fraternize, and friendship and oddments of cruising lore are exchanged where a convivial cup.

There was a time in the early days of motor-car travel when the same camaraderie prevailed. Then, whenever a car broke down, it became a matter of sympathy for the rest of over-charged and cheerfully driven automobiles speed kids. TODAY'S TALK

WALK PAST YOUR LIMIT

We all have our limitations. But so far as I can find out, no one ever knows just where to put his finger on them.

Usually your limitations are reached when you feel in your mind that there is no use in going further.

However you feel you are nearing your limits, have but one thing in mind — to walk right past them, and keep on.

Growth is a natural process. Just the minute a human being stops growing in his mind, at that moment does he begin to surrender life.

Keep filling your life with interests. Interests will make your very life blood and keep ringing in your ears the eternal fact that all worthwhile efforts contribute to the measure of your character.

There is no limits. They will loom before you, undoubtedly, time and time again, but walk right past them.

Be the thing you most desire — by working at it and always walking moment of your life.

You will amaze yourself at such threatening mile-post, that looked like a barrier, pass into the distance, and be gone.

You can win right where you are. But you must get interested in what you do and you must give the best that is in you to the work that you do.

Expect to meet every emergency. Believe in yourself and you will meet it. All limits will then vanish as new dew under the bright summer sun.

A Lift For Living

Need Sense of Responsibility

By DR. RALPH W. SOCKMAN

I want to think with you today about a "sixth sense." It is a sense without which our five physical senses would be pretty useless. In fact the total lack of it would leave us less than human. I refer to the sense of responsibility.

To say that a person is utterly irresponsible is about the worst description we can give. It means that one can't depend on him. Such a person does not count except as a consumer and a load to be carried.

The sense of responsibility is woven into the whole warp of our Bible. It is the woof which held together the Hebrew family through persecution and exile. The devout Hebrew felt responsible for teaching the moral law to his children and for keeping himself pure lest his sins be visited upon his offspring.

The oldest Hebrew codes required the assumption for responsibility for other's property in laws such as this: "Thou shalt not see they brother's ox or his sheep go astray, and hide thyself from them: thou shalt in any case bring them again to thy brother."

NECESSARY FUNCTIONS

To whom are we responsible. Some years ago, the head of a family addressed a parent-teachers' meeting in New York. He said that he could see nothing in the modern school curriculum which took the place of the early training given his father. He continued, saying it could hardly be presumed that his father as a boy got up at 5 a.m. to milk the cow and keep the family woodpile stocked because he enjoyed those occupations. Rather, they were the necessary functions of home life. Their daily performance felt to his lot just as other tasks were assigned to the other children.

This daily rendering of service vital to the well-being of his family developed in him a power to make himself do his tasks despite his feelings about them. That power was surely the foundation for the complete self-mastery which was one of the outstanding characteristics of his life. The boy who did those chores was John D. Rockefeller and the man who spoke about them was his son. Certainly we are responsible to our own families.

Our juvenile delinquency would be immeasurably decreased if the youth of our cities and suburbs had the family chores and after-school jobs which some of us knew in more rural living.

Many a man who has been an active citizen in some American town moves to a large city to himself, "I am tired of pulling community loads. I'm getting out of harness for a while and taking a rest."

We have many moral runaways in our big cities because we have so many unharnessed people. The civic tone of our large cities tends to be lower than that of our towns because as the group grows, personal responsibility tends to shrink. And if there was ever a time when community spirit need strengthening, it is now. Every person person feels responsible for his community.

CHURCH IN CENTRE

In the center of all these circles of responsibility stands the church. Sometimes I hear people say, "I can't join the church because I cannot take as any more responsibilities just now." If the church just an selfish obligation, upon more thing to support? So some think. But how wrong! The church stands in our midst to remind us that all these other circles of obligation — our homes, our work, our communities, our nation and our world — revolve around our central and sovereign responsibility namely God himself.

Dr. Robert Russell Wicks tells of the time when his children took a gramophone record and punched a new hole in it about an inch off-centre, then put it on, and played it. You can imagine, the caterwauling it produced. Isn't that roughly analogous to what is causing the disharmonies in our world today? Our circles of responsibility are off-centre. Harmony can come only when our sense of obligation is centred in God, in whom we "live and move and have our being."

In our mass living we may be lost in the crowd. Our neighbors may not know when we dodge our responsibilities. But God knows.

SOLID COINS

LONDON (CP)—A decision on whether Britain will adopt the decimal coinage system may be made before the end of the year, but the treasury already has turned down an idea of plastic coins of varying colors. A spokesman said the British would not like the introduction of "aesthetic tiddlywinks."

BULLETINS FROM BIRDLAND

SPECIALIZED TASTE
By WINIFRED WILSON

Potato bugs, fuzzy caterpillars, ants, bees, and wasps are hardly the kind of fare we would consider as delicacies. Yet some birds prize them above all else. The rose-breasted grosbeak eats wild fruits, seeds, and insects, but has earned the name of "potato bug bird" because of its curious choice of a favorite food, incidentally helping the farmer clear up his potato patch. Cuckoos feed almost entirely on caterpillars, with a special (and most unusual) liking for the very hairy species. The interior of a cuckoo's stomach has been found so lined with spiny caterpillar hairs that it looked like fur. We wonder how the birds survive.

Few birds eat bees and wasps. Ants are not such an uncommon food; indeed, flickers prefer them to anything else. But it is somewhat odd that they should be relished by flycatchers, which, as their name suggests, really live on flying insects. However, the olive-sided has a specialized taste, taking bees, wasps, and ants. The economic status of flycatchers as a whole is distinctly beneficial and it may be said that the olive-sided is no exception. But its range is limited.

NORTHERN BIRD

This bird's choice of habitat is as specialized as its taste in food. It is actually a bird of our northern, unsettled regions, where some dead trees stand in boggy ground near a coniferous forest. Those dead trees are an important feature, because they are used as lookout perches from which sallies winged insect or fly. Another practice results in the olive-sided being fairly rare. It is anything but friendly with its own kind, so that nesting pairs are only found far apart.

When migrating through settled Canada the olive-sided uses the same routes year after year. These, too, are specialized, the birds stopping over at the same flyway restaurants each trip, so that people of certain districts are very familiar with it, and look forward to seeing it about the same date each year, while other people have never even identified as olive-sided flycatcher.

It might be mistaken for a kingbird, a phoebe, or a pewee. However, the dark sides and pale white underparts give the impression of a dark vest and white shirt front. The long, silky tuft of white feather on either side of its back is a definite distinguishing mark. And, given the chance of hearing its voice, you can hardly go wrong, because, very plainly, it says, "hip-three-cheers."

REAPPEARS STAND

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress formally reaffirmed Thursday its opposition to U.S. recognition of Communist China and membership for the Red regime in the United Nations. By a roll-call vote of 395 to 0, with two members abstaining, the House of Representatives adopted the resolution previously approved by the Senate expressing the "sense of Congress" for continued support of the nationalist government on Formosa. The resolution requires no action by the White House.

Kum Double Club Enjoys Get-Together

HALLOWAY — On Sunday, August 27th several of the couples of the Halloway Kum Double Club travelled north and spent the day at the cottage on the Eastern Lake of Earl and Beatrice Snider.

GASPE CODE, BEST ON MARKET

"Cod is a kind of inexhaustible manna," aptly expressed Nicholas Denys, (hero of Gaspe and cod king) three centuries ago.

Down below, from the high-way here, perched precariously high above the sea, like a cluster of dwellings, as if some giant handful of multi-colored gumdrops had been spilled helter-skelter about a tiny sand beach, is a fish and a small wharf. On the road map, it is called L'Anse-a-Vallaud.

The sudden "toot" of a horn sends us diving downward. Would we be fortunate enough to find a cabin or even a room for the night, for it is becoming late and the places are becoming fewer in this area?

"Yes, you are fortunate, there is just one room, left," replies Madame (whom we later learn is the mother of sixteen children, mostly married and away). We are shown a neat, clean room under the eaves, upstairs and informed that dinner will be served at seven.

Since there is time, we take a stroll, past toy-like stores. In one we buy cigarets, and where the young girl is wife of the owner, and tells us she was born here, but went away to work for a while in Montreal, but longed to return, did so, and happily married.

We go on to the small wharf where a fishing boat has just docked. Men are hustling up cargo of net filled with a mass of writhing silver-cod fish.

Another tourist from Halifax, who is wandering with us exclaims: "Here you find the best dried cod! And why? Because the weather is ideal for drying. Not too much humidity, not too much sun, but just right."

You see here, and return each day with your catch. In a matter of a few hours, the cod is in the brine and the curling process begins. But deep cod fishers can not do so. These cod must be prepared upon their ships, and difficult to give an systematic treatment, and that is why Gaspe cod is considered the best on the market.

"This is an amazing thing" he went on, "the part cod has played in the lives of Europeans. Ptah, you see, is the secret symbolism of the Christ, and food of fast days: So fish and fishermen are symbolic of the Christian faith, and with its rise in Europe, there was a great demand for fish. Catholic countries, in fact, intermanned their navies with their fishermen. Then, as the origin al significance gave way to dogmatic uses, fast days were established as an aid to "economical recovery" and a "new deal" for the fishermen. Eating fish was no longer so much a matter of being "good for the soul" as a means of livelihood for the population. Under fast days supported the fisheries, for instance, which in turn supported the navy which finally enabled the great Tudor Queen Elizabeth to destroy into a fine sea-power. So you can see why the British have a taste for fish and chips.

Yes, the banks of the Gaspe and North Atlantic have been an unending source of cod supply, thanks to historic boundary disputes.

The chapel of King's College at Cambridge, England, holds its awe with its stained glass windows. Vivid colors and excellent craftsmanship characterizes the intricate Biblical scenes created by Flemish artisans during the Renaissance.

HELPFUL HINTS ON HOW TO MEET THE NEIGHBORS

When a family moves into a new neighborhood, or community, the next problem after getting settled usually is: How do I meet my neighbors?

The task of establishing some sort of social life naturally falls on the frail shoulders of the woman. But many, and especially if she is employed, has a apartment into a house, have the police department don't speak until they're spoken to.

While it used to be customary for the new residents to make a formal call on a neighbor, this is not general practice today. Very rarely it is such district protocol observed, for the simple reason that the average homeowner is a younger couple who doesn't stand on much ceremony, has small children and usually picks a community where he's sure to have common interests with his neighbors. In short, this way of meeting is shaved and so are his social customs.

Of course, you wouldn't go up and down the line ringing doorbells to announce your arrival. But if you show a friendly face in around the neighborhood, people will respond in ways.

Since you have to be taken at face value in the beginning, it is a natural asset, it's also a good idea to be particularly polite to tradesmen and repairmen, so they can help spread the word that someone's new in you're curt or sassy, the grapevine will carry the news in no time.

Children are the best icebreakers, and you can certainly count on meeting neighbors on a friendly plane when you go to fish [illegible] or a nearby sandbox he's managed to infiltrate.

Another way of getting established is to take part in school and local affairs. When a town meeting is called, make a point of attending. You may be sure most of your neighbors will be there, and they'll welcome a new face.

An awesome gateway makes a good impression if he's natural, friendly and interested. It's not considered forward to give you want others to beat 2 pah to your door.

Question — When guests are coming to dinner and will arrive by train, is it necessary to meet them at the station?

Last Saturday my husband had to hop down three times to fetch visitors. Is it impolite to ask them to take a cab? — Mrs. L. P., Greenwich, Conn.

Answer — Under the circumstances, no. If guests can't be expected to arrive on a pick-up, then it's perfectly correct to ask them to cab it from the station.

CWAC Girls Celebrate Anniversary

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's girls in khaki are observing the 20th anniversary of the Canadian Women's Army Corps and the 15th anniversary of its regularization in 1951 as part of the militia.

Some 2,700 members of the corps across Canada are being [illegible] as they ready in case they are needed to replace men in such jobs as switchboard or wireless operators, linguists, dental assistants, clerks, accountants, drivers, mechanics, stock controllers and medical aides.

Only six CWAC members—all officers—remain in the regular army, serving as advisers at command and army headquarters. One of the first to join the CWAC 20 years ago was Maj. Marjorie Evis, now senior officer in Ottawa.

During the Second World War more than 20,000 women saw CWAC service. At the end of the war nearly 2,000 were serving in the European theatre of operations.

The girls have one musical group still playing, the 30-member brass band of No. 106 Manning depot in Winnipeg.

Famed Cambridge More Alive Than Most Ivy League Towns

By Shirley and Bob Heaton

Cambridge, England — It is difficult to say whether this ancient university town is actual or no similar to many American campus communities, or whether it just has a natural familiarity about it, like an ancestral memory.

The same overflowing bookstalls on rickety stands are there. So are the classy-looking glass windows, where one can find bulky boundabouth jackets, [illegible] caps, that go with formidable mustaches and other items of apparel that accent an English man on a country weekend or an American college student wouldn't wear. Inevitably, there are the tea shops, [illegible] and pubs.

Where Cambridge differs from the American scene, however, is in the strange fact that the place jumps. Most Ivy League towns are sleepy, [illegible] and torpid, quiet, conducive to the summoning of muses and the contemplation of Truth.

But Cambridge teems. The [illegible] currency trade booms all day. Not only taxis and cars, but bicycles and pedestrians [illegible] the streets most of the day, jamming the sidewalks and [illegible]. American students covet English sport cars, English students have gone a step further in attaining them and delight in 30-year-old minivans [illegible], mostly Austins, that look like [illegible] Model A Fords. We weren't importing it to [illegible] a story North Americans have ever seen them.

EVERY PLACE MARKETS

There are even open-air produce and "flea" markets, about the last things you'd expect to encounter in [illegible] centers.

By contrast, the campus is the peaceful, vine-covered tenple of learning you'd expect. Shaded walks and broad lawns spread out among the old stone buildings. To visitors, the most [illegible] sense of the old 16th-year-old King's College Chapel, whence emanate the voices of choir-boy radio recordings of mass Eve.

The chapel offers Europe's finest intact example of the last art of stained glassmaking. Fortunately, the [illegible] Flemish craftsmen, the intricate Biblical scenes of the windows are rich in vivid colors. The most modern techniques have been unable to reproduce them.

Not far from Cambridge is Ely, on whose playing fields the Duke of Wellington said he won the battle of Waterloo. Up per-class Britishers believe in bringing their kids to the hard way, and these hallowed halls look as if the battle were fought in the classrooms.

If you arrive on a day when [illegible] is not in session, you can [illegible] the [illegible] classroom buildings. Most of the rooms are dark and many have [illegible] benches and [illegible] instead of desks, also unpainted.

Virtually every inch of wall and desk space is carved with names and [illegible] down years of most of the pupils who were labored through the soul-trying Latin, Greek and mathematical curricula. Among those names are most of Britain's famous sons, including a majority of its prime ministers, all carved when each was just another schoolboy.

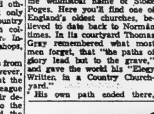
REMOTE AND PEACEFUL



On the way to Ely is a remote and peaceful village with the whimsical name of Stoke Poges. There you'll find one of England's oldest churches, believed to date back to Normin times. In its courtyard Thomas Gray remembered what most [illegible] that "the path of glory lead but to the grave," and gave the world his "Elegy Written, in a Country Churchyard."

His own path ended there, and he is interred near where he wrote the poem. Adjoining the church is the still handsome [illegible] home in which William Penn was born.

The visitor's awareness of familiarity is never far from the English countryside. The landscape is [illegible] with pride and joy the breasts of ten centuries of poets, which is quite an accumulation of literature for North Americans to have read.

But it's all there as advertised. There are the thatched roofed, half-timbered [illegible] houses that still represent a remarkable architectural style, the roofs last for 30 or 40 years and the beams are all but indestructible. Many lose, in their more distinctive and intimate than our roadhouses, do not seem to differ much from those the stage coaches used to roll by on. Lovely green fields and hillocks, somewhere greener and softer than any in the world, impart that inscrutable air of timelessness that is so much the theme of the British fabric.

You have to see it all to know how they could sing a corny song like "There'll Always Be An England." How could there be otherwise!

Mrs. S. P. — She should end her affair with him immediately.

• • •

Mrs. S. P. — My niece has confided in me that she has a lover. What makes this so shocking is that Brenda has been brought up in a home with God first in it. Brenda hasn't really worked on her marriage. Maybe a marriage counselor could help bring her and Matt together again. Now Brenda is risking the end of her marriage and the family unit—up of another home, too.

• • •

Brenda B. — What I'm doing is better than getting a divorce. Matt has told me he doesn't care what I do—or where I go. He'll keep the home going for the children's sake, and he'll provide for us as long as he can keep up the front. Love is dead, flown, kaput! For all I know, he has a lover on the outside, too.

My friend is also the victim of a miserable marriage. He and his wife also want out. But we believe it's fairer to our children to stay together during their growing-up years so they don't have the agony of "visiting days" and two homes for two parents.

Once my younger child is in high school, I'll get a divorce. Meanwhile, this arrangement hurts no one and gives me a little brightness in life.

• • •

The Council — We beg to differ with Brenda. She says her affair hurts no one. The truth is it hurts everyone.

But most of all it hurts the [illegible] Brenda's children. Sooner or later one or the other will want "out." These affairs rarely end by simultaneous mutual agreement. Someone just breaks off, and someone just gets "left." So, always there's the worrisome question, "Who'll weary of this first?"

Then, of course, it hurts the children who are [illegible] in the home which is not a home, really. There's the [illegible] between a home and a mere roof. The former is suffused with [illegible] and love. The latter is an expedient. While it is true, as Brenda says, he believes in her dsign for living, that her youngsters have both parents living at their address, they know that this is but a pale facsimile of family life. Every day's play acting compared to what their friends have, who are [illegible] and mother and who work at their marriage rather than forsake it.

And of course Brenda's friends and relations, like Aunt Sue, are uncomfortable with the situation. They must either take sides and alienate Brenda or Matt, or else [illegible] and immoral "solution."

Mrs. S. P. is right. Either the marriage can be saved and resolve on both sides, and the intervention of a marriage counselor, or it should be dissolved cleanly and openly without [illegible] or deception. "to hold the home together!"

Compassionate Genius

By ALMA MASON

So many of us are familiar with the circumstances which inspired Beethoven to write his nostalgic and deeply melodious Moonlight Sonata.

It is doubtful if this lovely composition would ever have been pulled from the profound crystine clouds of the great master's mind, had not Beethoven been stirred to pity by the desperate need of another human soul.

As Beethoven passed a small, shabby house in a narrow, dark street one evening, he suddenly paused to listen to someone playing his Sonata in F. Auditor voices floated from the house as the player stopped playing in the midst of the finale and exclaimed, "I cannot play anymore. It is so beautiful I cannot do it justice. Oh what I would not give to go to the concert at Cologne and hear him play it himself, even for such as poor we can scarcely pay our rent."

The composer was deeply moved. He gently knocked at the door and then entered and said, "Pardon me, but I heard your play and was tempted to enter. I am a musician. Would you like me to play for you?"

The young girl was rather embarrassed by the intrusion; her brother was slightly annoyed. However as the visitor seemed gentle and kind, they invited him to play for them.

His amazement, he learned that the lowly, golden-haired pianist was blind. He was deeply touched to hear that she played wholly by ear and had composed all the music through listening to a neighbor practise.

The harp belonged owned by the brother and sister was old and full out of tune, but never had Beethoven played on such a harp to the blind girl and her brother.

The brother and sister became intense and silent with wonder and delight, for suddenly they sensed that they were listening to the performance of a genius. The girl seemed fearful that even the beatnik or her heart would burst with the [illegible] of her emotions.

As the last chord died away, the maestro left a [illegible] folded in thought. Then he said, "How peaceful and lovely this atmosphere is. I will improvise with the circumstances which inspired me."

With a backdrop of purple sky and snowy shimmering stars, the Moonlight Sonata was born.

The two enthralled young people who listened to the creation heard an infinitely sad and flowing movement sweep over the instrument. On the heels of the serene movement dance a wild, elfin passage; then it changed a breathless, hurrying agitato finale punctuated with an uncertain impulsiveness which seemed to soar on rustling wings of wonderful gayety.

As the composer's hands rested quietly on the keyboard and the instrument became mute, a deep silence more expressive than words, hung in tribute to a great creative soul.

As Beethoven left the house he looked tenderly at the enraptured face of the blind girl as he promised not only to visit her again, but to become a teacher.

So, through pity and concern, a lovely scrap of eternal musical grandeur was bestowed to bless and beautify human existence.

One reads continually of how many masterpieces have sprung from the compassionate hearts of the kings and patrons of the arts and sciences. The greatest songs have been born, the greatest [illegible] have been written, the most hauntingly lovely pictures have been painted, when the hearts of creators have been gloriously stirred by human pity and the will to comfort and perpetuated a God-like desire to stoop and lift and lead through God-given creative powers.

When God's hand moves through the heart of any gifted children to stir them to divine compassion; when they, under God's direction, reach out their shadowed lives with the ardor and fervor of their genius, human hearts are lifted into a broader plane of existence and [illegible] with a new sensitive [illegible] floods out to enrich and exhilarate a neglected and needy world.

A song was born
Because he saw the sorrow
And the need
In lonely eyes;
So one forlorn
Was taken up on beauty's wings
To rainbow skies.

The world was blessed.
Because a great soul paused and Placed his hand
On human pain,
Or grief's high crest
And so bequeathed to human hearts.
God's own retrain.

QUESTION:

Could you please send me a good recipe for sour mixed pickles and another recipe I'd like to know how to make good brown gravy without a flour or other meat as I haven't always meat on hand when I want to make gravy — Mrs. Gertie W.

Dinner Menus

by Mary Moore

SATURDAY

Cold Platter: Cold Sliced Meat, Potato Salad, Sliced Pears, Potato Salad in Lettuce Cups, Hot Corn and Broccoli Casserole (see Tuesday) Hot Cheese Tea Biscuits, Grapefruit and Peach Ambrosia, Iced Tea.

MONDAY (Labor Day)

Fried Chicken Legs or Marinated Sliced Collage Cheese, Potato Salad (see Polish Potato Salad (see August 31st); Tomatoes with Egg Salad (see August 31st.); Apricot or Peach Pie (see August 30th or 31st.) Chocolate Milk for Children; Iced Tea.

ANSWER:

SWEET MIXED PICKLES:

Two medium heads cauliflower, 12 qts or 18 qts cucumbers (if 4" cut each into 6 pieces crosswise), 1 pint small pickling onions, 2 red and 2 peppers, 1 small bunch celery is optional, 1 oz. whole mixed pickling spice, 2 cups salt, 2 tablespoons turmeric, 1 tablespoon celery seed, 2 cups sugar and 1 cup water for 10 minutes, then add vegetables and boil until cucumbers just change color and are ready to put into jars, add 1 teaspoon mixed pickling spice to each quart. Fill jars to overflowing with boiling vinegar-syrup mixture, put lid on jar, place in a clean crock in a cool place for 10 days to 2 weeks and leave in crock.

You probably know that you can buy pure spices for making brown and chicken and mushroom gravy quite economically.

BROWN GRAVY (without meat):

There are several ways to make gravy without meat but all need beef extract or bouillon cubes or brown gravy powder. To make 1½ cups, melt 2 tablespoons fat, add chicken or pork drippings or butter or margarine and stir in 2 tablespoons flour, you could let this cook to brown a little if you like, then stir in boiling hot liquid until thick. This may be liquid in which vegetables have been cooked, as potatoes, peas, carrots, beans or tomatoes, or it may be a tin of broth leftover from boiling chicken or beef or veal. Or it may be half milk or half some of the above-mentioned liquids. To this add 1 teaspoon beef extract or 1 cube of beef bouillon cubes, or 1 or 2 or more teaspoons brown gravy powder. When these are dissolved taste by salt and pepper and add what is needed.

UN Breaks Off Normal Relations With Katanga

ELISABETHVILLE (Reuters) The United Nations has broken off all normal relations with the Congo's Katanga government, following charges that Interior Minister Godefroid Munongo was involved in a plot to kill UN troops and officials.

Ireland's Conor O'Brien, head of the UN in the breakaway state, told a press conference that the UN refused to deal further with President Moise Tshombe's government except for the minimum contacts necessary for public order and the security of our forces."

He said the step had been taken because Tshombe "covered" Munongo, who was "guilty in the eyes of the world" of atrocities and flagrant breaches of the principles of the UN charter of human rights.

O'Brien said Tshombe's arrogance in trying to implicate Katanga citizens was provided.

O'Brien said Friday that he had sent a letter to Tshombe saying the UN could not possibly be associated with the activities of his government while one of its ministers was accused of such crimes.

O'Brien refused to spell out what action the UN would have, but it was believed that UN forces would carry out any orders they received from Premier Cyrille Adoula of the central government in Leopoldville.

Successful Living

By Doris Clark

(A Canadian Social Worker Helps with Human Problems)

Budget Badly Needed

DORIS CLARK

DEAR DORIS:—I am writing this letter to ask you about a budget. My husband and I have $300 per month and I can never make his cheque last until the next pay day.

We have five children. Neither of us drinks. He smokes, but not too much. We pay $55 rent, $16 gas, $5 telephone, and $10 power, per month.

Could you please help me make a budget so I could make ends meet?—MRS. J.

DEAR MRS. J.—Family needs and wants differ. The percent of income spent on food differs with size of family. Type of clothing, food, depend on location and occupation of wage earner—whether in Eastern or Western Canada, whether on farm or in city—and other things.

Here are some general ideas worked out in a useful little folder supplied by the Bank of Nova Scotia. (I am sending you one.) The proportions given apply with a take-home pay of $300 a month, for a family of 5, which is as high as the table goes:

Food ($75), shelter ($71, home operation (gas, telephone, power, repairs) $28, clothing $36, transportation $22, development (health, education, church, recreation, personal,) $23, savings $3.

Shelter and home operation are pretty well fixed. With a family of seven you are probably already skimping on clothing. Transportation usually costs some less for the boys and school, even if there is no car to maintain. "Development" covers a host of odds and ends—and you are probably not saving at all, unless it is in insurance.

For seven people your food is probably casting more than $90. But it may be that a few tricks of the trade will help you save, not pennies, but dollars.

Here are a few: Buy with an eye to weights on packages; avoid fancy wrappings (as the contents doubtless weigh less); buy things like cereals, beans, sugar, flour, in bulk when you can. Powdered milk, either skim (which is quite nourishing) or whole, can cut your milk bill in half. Learn more about cheap cuts of meat and how to handle them.

Save meat and vegetable stock and keep a soup pot going with it and leftovers. Never buy ready made cakes. When you shop, have a list and resist buying extras on impulse.

Budgeting won't work without the enthusiastic cooperation of your husband. (If he is buying smokes out of food money it is bound to throw out calculations.) If you are tempted to say "Let's forget the budget this week and splurge on cream puffs—or whatever," don't!

* * *

DEAR DORIS:—The Irish actress Siobhan McKenna says the way to married happiness is to spoil your husband. I think a marriage is most likely to be successful when the man spoils the woman. What do you think?—BABS.

DEAR BABS:—Both need spoiling.

There are times when each party to a marriage shows temper or displeasure or inability to cope. The couple who work out a balance, in which one keeps head screened above water when the other gasps, will win through.

We can court love. We can indulge, give affection and understanding, which will bring out the best in our partner. Or we can nag him into failure.

Science at Work

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Topic this week: The existence of ozone, the death of fleas' berries, the fragility of birds and a dusty look at weather.

CONFUSION, CATTANOOGA

University of Chicago scientists are pondering the strange conception between trichollum confusum and tribollum castaneum—two species of flour beetle.

Each species lives fine alone, even flourishes, but when put together, the presence of one always sooner or later eliminates the other, despite plenty of food and space.

The victorious species varies depending on what drinks or families are pitted against each other. Remarkably, a strain which has a high population level when isolated, often is eliminated by a strain which has a low population level.

SYMBOLIC HOSTILITY

Every bird has a primitive instinct of hostility for the low birds, says a Smithsonian Institution ornithologist.

Yet through the ages birds have found advantages in social living, sometimes in large flocks, subduing their natural hostility, explains Dr. Martin Moynihan.

In bird societies, this hostility is sometimes overcome by symbolic actions rather than open fighting — sometimes by the display of colorful plumage, sometimes by stimulated attack.

But in captivity the restraints that allow this "play" hostility in wild conditions break down, and one bird usually kills another.

METEOR RAIN?

At various times in the year the earth passes through giant streams of meteors in space—and each time large amounts of space dust are deposited in the earth's atmosphere. Some scientists believe the influences related on the earth below.

Australian meteorologists contend that some 30 days after the earth passes through a meteor shower, rainfall on earth reaches a peak. Some U.S. and Soviet scientists support this theory.

The space dust, descending through the atmosphere is believed to form the seeds around which water vapor is clouds collects, finally becoming heavy enough to fall to earth. But, so far, there is no direct evidence that this is so.

No Easy Task To Pinpoint Rear-End Noise

BY EUGENE B. MILMOE

Because rear axles become noisy when damaged, dry or otherwise defective, the tendency is to pin the blame there immediately when rear end noise develops. Before any such automatic diagnosis is made, test wheel bearings, universal joints, drive shaft bearings and tires should be cleared of possible guilt.

There's no easy way to recognize pinpoint rear axle noise. It may develop as a hum or a growl — it may sound off-key when the engine is pulling the car, only when it is coasting, or only on turns.

What causes the noise? Here again, it's something of a guessing game. Lots of lubricant (or the wrong kind), gears or bearings which may be rough, warped, worn, chipped, pitted, too tight, broken, unmatched, etc.

To minimize the chances of trouble, have the lubricant checked occasionally and changed as recommended, and always investigate any signs of leakage.

W. C. asks: "Why would the pedal suddenly move almost to the floor when brakes are applied? This happened overnight on my car."

(A) Loss of brake fluid or air leak in the system — you'd better see a mechanic, fast.

L. O. writes: "Whenever I drive our 1958 sedan over 50 m.p.h. the car vibrates abnormally. At lower speeds it disappears.

(A) Any number of conditions might cause this, but it often happens because rear wheels are out of balance.

F. T. asks: "I have drained the cooling system of my '51 at least twice a year, always put in a top brand of permanent antifreeze and never re-reused it. So how do you explain the fact that the corrosion that is now evident in the engine water jacket?

(A) Since you didn't mention using a fresh rust inhibitor each spring, the first thought is — did you? If you did, then there's a good chance that air is leaking into the cooling system. You'll need the help of a mechanic to check this possibility.

• • •

From R. H.: "What is wrong when the sailings never warms up?

(A) In the summer, it's because the temperature gauge is off (or else the engine isn't running). In other words, it can't happen. In the cold of winter, a defective thermostat is the usual reason.

Day-Lilies Are Hard to Beat

By FLORA M. SAVELLE

Hemerocallis (day-lily) means beautiful for a day. Each bloom lasts one day but there are so many buds on each stem that each plant blooms for 30 to 40 days.

Last summer I ordered a dozen day-lilies. I planted yellow ones for the most part as the orange and red shades do not appeal to me.

They arrived late in the season and several things made it impossible to get them into the ground at that time. Later my son can for a visit and planted them for me. Later I found that a big pile of leaves had been dumped on them.

After much scraping and searching I found them and replaced a stake beside each one. This was November.

They had seemed doomed from the first. Late in arriving, the plants were small and dry and then were left in the basement over long, planted hastily, then buried in leaves for six weeks.

ALL HAD SPROUTED

This spring I looked for them and eventually found that all of them had sprouted. Much later they sent up scapes and each of them has already had four to eight on each. All but two planted singly and each of these two plants look healthy I expect they will bloom next year.

I had pored over the catalogue long and yet some of them turned out much darker than I had expected from the description but all were beautiful. Some had lime green throat others frilled edges, or extra large buttercup-yellow blooms and one had a lovely fragrance.

The plants were moved while in bloom and were barely noticed by it. The right time they say is September but they can be moved any time you wish.

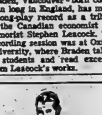
Day-lilies are good natured plants they will do well under almost any condition in clay, loam or in sand, if you add some humus to improve the texture of the soil, full sun or high light shade makes little difference.

Consider the flowers — pales the day-lily could fit in: in front of shrubery under tall trees, by garden steps, by a pool in front of a fence, or in the perennial border.

The dark ones, they range down to deep burnt scarlet-maroon, dark brown shades, need a light background. Tall white blooms such as white phlox or white cleome, a white wall, or fence or clumps of light coloured lilies, around them will give them the contrast they need to be effective.

MIXED BACKGROUND

The very tall ones need a background of wall, or shrubbery other wise they look awkward. The middle and dwarf strains fit into any border, or can be planted alone as an accent plant.



Pests seem to pass them up. They have not yet discovered how fine they are. This makes them easy to care for.

Plant them two to three feet apart. Three if you do not wish to divide them oftener than every four years. Give them a good soaking if the weather is dry, especially during the time buds are forming. Get rid of the dead blooms but not the foliage. Otherwise you will benefit next year's blooms.

Look for early and late strains to prolong their blooming season. If you enjoy your garden in the early and late evening look for the strains that bloom late in the day and stay open on into the night.

Plenty Of Heroes In Yanks' 1-0 Win

Score Run After Two Out

By ED WILKS
Associated Press Staff Writer

New York Yankees had plenty of heroes in their 1-0 victory over Detroit Friday night that increased their American League lead over the second-place Tigers to 8½ games.

Some of the heroes: Bill Skowron, who drove in the run when the Yankees broke through against Don Mossi with three consecutive two-out singles in the ninth inning; Luis Arroyo, a bullpen ace who won his 10th game in a row with a perfect inning of relief; Yogi Berra, a catcher turned outfielder who broke a Tiger rally with a perfect peg.

Then there was pitcher Bud Daley, a lefthander who saved the shutout after Yankee ace Whitey Ford had to quit in the fifth inning because of a strained thigh muscle.

"It was Daley who did it for us," said Yankee manager Ralph Houk.

DRAWS TOP CROWD

Cleveland Indians knocked off Baltimore Orioles, Chicago White Sox split a pair with Washington Senators, winning 2-3 and losing 2-1, Minnesota Twins defeated Boston Red Sox 5-1 and Los Angeles Angels beat Kansas City A's 4-1.

Skowron's winning hit for the Yankees broke singles by Elston Howard and Berra. Until then, Mossi (14-4) had a five-hit shutout. He was touched for a run and struck out seven, tanning Mickey Mantle three times and Roger Maris once and pitching both sluggers aiming at their trunks, and using it on their fannies.

One of the Kalmikoffs ripped off a long run and started to use it on Farmer Boy's head. Layton promptly dove into the fray, took a shot in the temple and beat Ivan and Karol over their own sweat little shindig. He was shortly after this that Layton and Townsend sank the good ship Kalmikoff to wrap up the victory.

SENIOR HOCKEY

If things seemed rather quiet, and we might add, businesslike, when the OHA Eastern Senior Hockey League was formed here the other night, there is a very simple explanation.

Thus the team representatives, three or four from each club in most cases, were quietly serious about their plans for the new loop.

Most have had previous experience in such matters and all readily admitted the widely-known fact that Senior "A" hockey, as we know it a few years back, had priced itself out of existence.

When each representative was asked in give his club's intentions for the 1961-62 season, all expressed desire to get the new loop going but stressed that it must be on "a strict share-the-wealth basis".

The four definite entries, Belleville, Kingston, Toronto Macedonians and Napanee, as well as the OHA members present, seemed almost positive that Oshawa would be "in" prior to the next meeting here on September 13.

The Oshawa club will play its home games in the Bowmanville Arena providing the entry is forthcoming, of course. Oshawa's only risk is one built for children and no one over the age of 16 is allowed to use its facilities.

Regret was voiced that Whitby was out of the picture, due to that town's entry in the new Junior "A" league. It was felt, however, that Peterborough might still enter a team.

J. P. Lamirande, speaking for the Belleville entry, expressed regret that H. J. McFarland would not be sponsoring the locals this year. He did state, however, that he was ready with a new sponsor whose name he would release shortly.

Napanee's representatives said that they would be very happy to have a league in which to play after seeing around until playoff time for the past few years.

"We kept hockey alive in this area by sticking together, despite the fact we had nowhere to play and we certainly want in on this new league," said Napanee coach Lou Douglas. The food that his club would be moving up from Intermediate to Senior did not seem to bother Douglas. He felt that the Comets would be able to hold their own, both on the ice and at the gate.

Greg Currie of the Macedonians expressed confidence that senior hockey could be brought back into the picture in Toronto. He felt that this was the year to do it while the Junior-"A" organizations in that area were more or less fighting among themselves.

All in all, the picture for the Eastern Ontario Senior Hockey League appeared to be a very rosy one, especially if that all-important fifth entry becomes a reality.

THE JUNIOR BRAND

The OHA Eastern Junior "B" Hockey League, hoping to get pre-season problems solved early, will meet at the Radio Station here this coming Thursday at eight o'clock.

OHA representative Jack Devine said the other evening that he is hoping for a strong, well-balanced league this winter despite the fact the last year's Whitby Hillcrests have moved up to join the new Junior "A" grouping.

Gordie Bell has assured us that Belleville will be back once again, sponsored by Picton Wayne H. J. McFarland, in connection with the Chicago Black Hawks organization.

Coach Bell will lose a few of last year's locals but he is positive that a number of the district's youngsters can move up from midget and juvenile ranks to make the squad at least as strong as in previous years.

Kingston Junior Frontenacs, working under the pro organization of the Boston Bruins, are expected to be back stronger than ever.

Peterborough always has a powerful aggregation and there is no reason to doubt that such will be the case again this winter. Montreal Canadiens supply player strength for that team.

Picton, also hooked up with Chicago, will return to the loop and, from all reports, friend Chris Lockyer is already making his plans to build the "Little Spainers" into a contender for top honors this season.

A number of other centres, such as Cobourg, Napanee, Gananoque and Warsaw, will also be invited to the meeting. Devine said there is a good chance that enough clubs will seek entry to enable the OHA to divide the league into two divisions. We expect one would consist of "B" clubs and the other of "C" clubs.

Yes, there is no doubt that the hockey season is much closer than many of us realized.

As always, some of the best laid plans can go astray, but at least now is the time for organization. And everyone appears to be wide awake in that department.

Those pleasant summer weekends are quickly drawing to a close so have a good holiday. But please, please make it a safe one. We don't want to end up writing your obituary come Tuesday morning.

Beards Bite the Dust

By GARRY ALEXANDER
(Staff Writer)

Shades of years gone by! Wrestling fans who liked their action wild and wide open, were treated to tossed in to keep it interesting, would have loved last night's main bout between the Kalmikoff Brothers, Ivan and Karol, and their opponents Lord Athol Layton and Farmer Boy Townsend.

The boys put on one of those old fashioned shows where everything goes, the referee gets completely and totally lost, the good guys win and everybody goes home happy.

Anyway, Layton and Farmer Boy copped the decision, in two consecutive falls and they had a lot of fun doing it. Matter of fact, Lord Layton spent most of the evening with a wide grin on his face, much to the displeasure of Ivan and Karol.

Farmer Boy got the show rolling by giving the Kalmikoffs a pretty good going over on his own. Layton tossed the odd bit of advice as well as a few judo chops from his corner but he didn't get in the ring until the K-Boys trapped Townsend in their corner.

Layton to the rescue — and from then on it was mostly a five-man battle, with little Sammy Godder, the man in white, right in the middle.

Layton and Townsend socked the Kalmikoffs left and right, then they both loped together, spread-eagled, then and applied the old four-boot treatment. Tied one in the ropes and used the other for a battering ram.

Ivan broke off across the arena floor at one point and Farmer Boy gave chase, pursuit. They ran out to the front doors and back again, as the fans cheered their efforts. Farmer Boy chased Ivan to the dressing room and got back in the ring in time to help Layton set Karol up for the kill. Layton wound up the first fall with one of his powerful judo chops and a shoulder pin.

It was more of the same in the second fall although the Russian beards had things going in their favor for some time. They traded a weapon back and forth, hiding it in

Dodgers Threaten Within 2½ Games Of Cincinnati

By ED WILKS
Associated Press Staff Writer

As Fresco Thompson, a Los Angeles Dodgers vice - president, remarked in a mood of nostalgia the other day, what wouldn't the Dodgers give to have just one of their old crew —Roy Campanella, Jackie Robinson, Carl Furillo, Pee Wee Reese, Duke Snider or Gil Hodges — back in their prime again.

They were the stars of bygone days in Brooklyn when the Dodgers won six National League pennants in 10 years before the move to Los Angeles.

Not that the Dodgers, with Sandy Koufax a pitch hitter and Hodges seldom more than a defensive replacement, are doing so poorly at the moment.

Manager Walt Alston has made anybody forget Pee Wee's all-around performance at shortstop, and John Roseboro is no Campy behind the plate. But between them they put the second-pace Dodgers within 2½ games of front-running Cincinnati Reds, each battling in a pair of runs for a victory over Milwaukee Braves.

That dropped the Braves back into third place as San Francisco Giants reclaimed third place with a 4-3, 14 - inning victory over Chicago Cubs. St. Louis Cardinals beat Pittsburgh Pirates 4-2.

Koufax, a run triple by Zoilo Versalles in the second inning off Don Schwall (13-4) wrapped things up for the Twins and Pete Ramos (10-16).

Jim Gentile's singles and a sacrifice fly by starting pitcher Eli Grba gave the Angels five runs in the first two innings against the Athletics and beat Norm Bass (17-10). Tom Morgan (7-3) won in relief.

Roseboro's tie - breaking single in the ninth inning followed a two-base hit by Jim Gilliam. Don McMahon (6-2) in relief, Bob Purkey's run triple in the fourth, off starter Bob Buhl, overhauled a 1-0 Milwaukee lead and the pitchers made it 3-1 in the seventh on singles by Ron Fairly and Tim Harkness, plus Roseboro's infield out. Dick Farrell (8-6 won in relief after giving up the Braves' tying run in the eighth inning with two wild pitches.

Curt Flood, Alex Grammas and Jim Schaffer each drove in two runs for the Cardinals before big Joe Gibbon (10-9), Right-hander Larry Jackson (11-9) checked the Bucs on eight hits —three by Smoky Burgess, who drove in a two - run homer.

The Giants tied their battle with the Cubs with six runs earned run and then won on a two - out triple by rookie Ernie Bowman after Chicago had tied the fourth.

Billy Pierce (6-5) was the winner as the last of six Giant pitchers who blanked the Cubs over the last 12 frames. The Cubs got their three runs in the second inning on homers by Ernie Banks and Roberto Barragan, who connected on his first major league at-bat.

McKinley Sore at USLTA

By ED CORRIGAN

FOREST HILLS N.Y. (AP)— Chuck McKinley, top United States hope in the national tennis championships, today blasted the U.S. Lawn Tennis Association for the way they:

1. Handled the Dennis Ralston case.

2. Arranged the preliminary Davis Cup rounds.

McKinley, second-seeded behind Australia's Rod Laver, marched into the second round with a 7-5, 6-2, 6-2 victory over George Stoessner of Tucson, Ariz. Friday as the 10-day nationals got under way.

"There is only one word to describe the action of the USLTA against Ralston—it's ridiculous," said McKinley.

The USLTA suspended Ralston, who signed with McKinley and Tut Bartzen made up the U.S. Davis Cup team, for unsportsmanlike conduct in the North American zone final against Mexico two weeks ago.

"I'm the voice of experience on these things," said McKinley.

(He is on probation for arousing the ire of the USLTA in Australia last year.)

"And I know how Dennis feels. He got everything he had and they suspend him.

"I know just what happened. He cussed once and they accused him of tarnish his back on the Mexican flag when he offered him a towel. Dennis didn't even see him approach. He's a fighting fool there."

McKinley said he and Ralston would have had an easier time against the Mexicans if the match had been played on grass instead of clay.

"Now," he said, "I see they're thinking of playing the next round on clay in India. They have so many obligations that they're playing all over Europe now.

"Did it ever occur to the USLTA that we have obligations too? I'm behind in my schoolwork at Trinity (Tex.) University now."

Bob Mark of Australia, seeded No. 5, had too much hitting power for 19-year - old Herbert FitzGibbon of Garden City, N.Y. and beat him 6-2, 6-1, 6-0. Ron Holmberg of Brooklyn, No. 8 seeded Mike Green of Philadelphia, 6-4, 6-4, 7-5.

Christine Truman, of Britain, seeded No. 4, crushed Elizabeth Crady of Louisville 6-0, 6-0. Yola Ramirez of Mexico, seeded No. 8, defeated the 10th ranked American player, Carol Hanks of St. Louis, 6-3, 6-3.

HOLDOUT SOLD

CALGARY (CP) — Holdout Ron Morris was released by Calgary Stampeders Friday and sold at the waiver price of $350 to Toronto Argonauts. The veteran import punter and defensive halfback refused to sign a 1961 contract with the Western Football Conference club.

Richards Quite Orioles

BALTIMORE (AP)—A baseball era ended in Baltimore Friday as manager Paul Richards hung up his No. 12 Orioles uniform to become general manager of the new Houston team in the National League.

Orioles officials said after a conference with Richards his resignation was being accepted immediately "in the best interests of everyone concerned."

Richards announced his resignation as Baltimore's 850,000-a-year manager Thursday but said he would be expected to finish the season here.

Coach Luman Harris was named interim manager.

Richards is expected to sign a five-year contract for $100,000 or more a year with Houston GMs in the expanded National League next year.

He is ending 15 years in the American League — seven with the Orioles—when many observers believe he was on the threshold of having a championship team.

Coming here from Chicago White Sox in 1955, he took over a seventh-place team that had finished last in three years. His development of the Orioles into a second place team last season won him the 1960 manager of the year award.

Walker Cup Will Stay In States

BATTLE (AP)—The United States swept all four foursomes matches in the first of the Walker Cup golf match Friday to take a 4-0 lead over Britain.

The U.S. needs to win only three of the eight singles matches today to retain the amateur golf trophy for another two years.

Bob Cochran, 43-year-old from St. Louis, and Gene Andrews, 48, of Pacific Palisades, Calif., defeated Mike Bonallack, British amateur champion, and Ronnie Shade of Ayr.

Charles Lawrie, captain of the British team, deliberately paired Bonallack and Shade, his No. 1 twosome, against the two U.S. elders in hopes of evening the foursome sweep the Engineers in taking the Walker Cup this time in 17 meetings two years ago.

He also put Jimmy Walker of Scotland and Brian Chapman of England against the U.S. boys, Deane Beman and Jack Nicklaus. The American youngsters won singly 6 and 5 after being 8 up and 17.

The other U.S. triumphant were registered as Charlie Coe and Don Cherry, 1 up over Ma). David Blair of Scotland and Austin Christmas of England; and Bob Gardner and Bill Hyndman over Jim Carr of Ireland and Gordon Huddy of England, 4 and 3.

John Powell Hits Three In 2 Games

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

John Powell of Rochester Red Wings took over the International League's home run leadership with a sensational display of power hitting Friday night.

The 30-year-old first baseman clubbed three homers, running his season total to 28, as the Wings and Syracuse Chiefs split a doubleheader. The Wings won the opener 6-1 and lost the nightcap 4-3.

Jersey City Jaycees temporarily shut down baseball's year 'pound drive with a 4-1 victory. Charleston Senators swept a twin bill from Richmond Virginians 5-1, 6-2; Buffalo at Toronto was postponed because of rain.

Powell, in his first year in Triple-A baseball, also doubled twice and singled twice in eight at-bats to raise his batting average to .315. He drove in four in the league.

Harry Chiti's second - inning homer with Powell on base put the Red Wings in front for good in the first game. John Anderson won for the second game, Frank Lajcik hit his fifth round-tripper with men on base in the first inning and Dutch Dotterer followed with his seventh for a 4-0 Syracuse lead.

WINS SEVENTH

Marshall Bridges won his sixth game for Jersey City with ninth-inning help from relief ace Ayon.

A two-run triple by Doug Clemens in the 10th cancelled the decision for the Marlins in the opener. Jack Reed's pinch-hit homer for the Virginians in the seventh sent the game into overtime.

Hal Delis scattered nine hits and didn't issue a walk in his 4-3 win. Delis doubled in the fifth inning of the afterpiece. The Marlins added two more in the frame, on two scoring singles by Clemens and Fred Whitfield.

Impose Life Suspension On Player

SAULT STE. MARIE (CP)—Frank Carlisle, Sault Ste. Marie soccer player, was fined $50 on two months in jail Friday when he pleaded guilty to a charge of assault.

Carlisle was charged after referee Jim Lappage told police he was struck and bitten during a game-ending brawl sparked by a goal scored against Carlisle's team, Marconi.

The Tracks

FORT ERIE (CP) — Two track records were broken and Avelino Gomez rode three winners at Fort Erie Friday.

Its Ann, speedy filly owned by Ross Wedderfield of Toronto, set a record of 1:10.2 for six furlongs in winning the featured $6,000 Marseilles purse. She paid $4.70 to win.

Another mark of 2:01.3 for 1¼ miles was established by Jitsue de Guere in the sixth race. Ruling Prince, owned by Ruff and Sinclair Clarkson, erased the old record of 2:02 when he was awarded the $3,300 purse.

Gomez took both ends of a $14.10 daily double on First Shot and Queen's Lets and captured the fourth race on Prince Sadi for a total of 68 winners at the meeting.

Choked to Death

SUDBURY (CP) — Donald Bourrier, a 20-year-old catcher in the Sudbury Intermediate Baseball League, choked to death on a wad of chewing gum Thursday after he was struck in the chest by a foul tip.

DALLAS (AP) — Arnold Palmer, the year's big tournament winner, and Billy Pott, the defending champion and Earl Stewart, the home pro, shot three-under-par 67s Friday to tie for the first-round lead in the Dallas Open golf.

Jerry Pittman, Gee Mitchell Jr., and Charles Sifford, the first Negro to play in a open tournament in Texas, all posted 68s while veteran Jim Ferrier and Howard Johnson had 69s.

Tiger-Cats Are Confident

Ere Meeting Argos

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Hamilton Tiger-Cats, the only unconquered team in the Eastern Football Conference, were riding a crest of quiet confidence today as they prepared for a Labor Day battle with Argonauts of Toronto Argonauts.

There was no mistaking the confidence as the Ticats whipped through a practice Friday afternoon, returning from a successful invasion of the West, where they overpowered Winnipeg Blue Bombers 30-8.

That victory, which came Thursday night, gave the Ticats three straight this season and a first - place tie with Ottawa Rough Riders in the Big Four. The Riders meet Montreal Alouettes in Ottawa today.

Coach Jim Trimble's Tiger-Cats already hold a 28-34 victory over the Argonauts and are 6½-point favorites to win again in Hamilton Monday.

No games were scheduled in the Western Conference today but four teams see action Monday. The Bombers are at Regina against Saskatchewan Roughriders and the league-leading Edmonton Eskimos take on the Stampeders at Calgary.

Argonaut coach Lou Agase is wrestling with the problem of sorting out his injured men in an attempt to find a winning combination. The key to success is quarterback Tobin Rote and he is also bothered by a sore arm and his throwing arm.

Argonauts purchased defensive halfback Jeannote Morris from the Stampeders Friday and gave up $300 waiver price. Morris, former star with the University of Tulsa, refused to sign a contract with the Stamps and wanted to play out his option so he could switch to United States professional football.

It is known whether Morris will report to the Toronto team.

The Bombers may be directed by rookie Dick Thornton from Northwestern University for the first time in league action.

The Stampeders have indicated Eagle Keys is available from the National Football League in the U.S. and a former Mississippi star may be signing signals at least part of the way.

Winnipeg has lost two straight since winning its first four games of the season and trails Edmonton by two points. The Stampeders have managed only one victory in four tries and are in fourth place, two points behind the Bombers.

Bomber coach Bud Grant said Friday night fullback and punter Ken Ploen, injured, whose knee was hurt at Winnipeg last 30-9 to Hamilton Tiger-Cats of the Eastern Conference Thursday, will not make the Regina trip.

Canada Wins 3 Bronze Medals

TEL AVIV (CP)—Canada won three bronze medals Friday in Israel's sixth Maccabiah Games and Phil Oberlander of Montreal ran out contender on his winning ways in wrestling competition.

Marvin Chapelle of Downview, Ont., won a bronze medal in the flying trird in the 100-metre backstroke swimming event, just ahead of team-mate Walter Unger of Toronto, who finished fourth. The race was won by Jack Zalis of the United States. The Canadian men's 400-metre fencing team each took third place in their class for Canada's two other bronze medals.

Oberlander, who won Canada's second gold medal Thursday in the middleweight Greco-Roman wrestling championship, turned to freestyle wrestling in the middleweight class Friday and won his first match. He defeated Keith Gordon of South Africa.

The U.S. has won 30 gold medals. Friday leads with 22 over the three days of competition. The host Israel team is second with 13, Britain has four, The Netherlands three, and Canada, south Africa and Italy two each.

Canadians must be suffering a bit of athletic chosen. Without 561, this is suspected and the slight start when certain sports are handed $5,000,000 a year on account.

There have been petty fights over the selection of the managers and coaches of the various teams for these international contests and the final roster usually shows about one official to every five athletes.

The government certainly won't want to get mixed up with this. And the public, which has been practically ignored in money-raising campaigns to pay the cost of sending teams to international competitions, probably will see a closer look at the personnel — athletes and officials—in the future.

If your child is born today he, she, will be the type individual to whom security is of utmost importance, but in order to acquire or maintain it, you must give as much attainement as possible. Otherwise your promising youngster will bury himself, or herself in a maze of detail from which there is little hope of being extricated once the habit of hiding within one's self is formed.

General Tendencies — Labor Day, 1961 is certainly a day when you can express the best of home and family that you feel deep within yourself, as well as any sort of patriotic expression that you wish to indulge in. A splendid day for thinking of your work as a real service. Remember "Always perform the labor, but only the free' truly serve." Are you one of these?

Aries (March 21 to April 19) Your greatest benefits and happiness can come today by being at home with family, but if you must be out in the business world, return home early. Handle any important affairs with extreme care and be of real service. Grow.

Taurus (April 20 to May 20) Making calls on trade, visiting, taking a trip, all very good today, but be very careful while out driving and be sure you use the right words with everyone. Don't be caustic. P.M. take it easy and retire early — restore energies.

Gemini (May 21 to June 21) Patriotic fervor can lead you to do something very worthwhile for fellowman today, as well as gain prestige that will help you in your material affairs. P.M. go over your finances and be sure you know just where you stand.

Moon Children (June 22 to July 21) — A day to indulge personal desires and see the friends you truly like. Be sure your dress is excellent taste, then off to a happy and enjoyable time. P.M. attend that important social function and meet interesting people. Grow.

Leo (July 22 to Aug. 21) While you are able to take care of any personal affairs easily now, this is also a good day to confer with advisors who can assist you with current problems that are vexing. P.M. fine for watching TV quietly with the one you love.

Virgo (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) — If you get in touch with good friends and those who admire you, you will be able to gain personal aims much more easily. They will gladly help you in any way that they can. Then get together for a good time in P.M. Be happy.

Libra (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Seriously study and then perform those basic tasks that are so important to you right now, especially whatever is of a civic nature. Be ethical in all that you do and say. Grow.

Scorpio (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) — This ideal day to look into new interests, meet fascinating people or go to some new place. Be alert to opportunities all around you that will lead to greater success in the future. Also, raise your level of consciousness.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) — Be sure you know what your greatest goals are and then conduct the person in whatever category of life who can assist you to achieve your ambitions. P.M. fine for being with the one you love the most in life. Be happy.

Capricorn (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Don't permit your nervous associate to get under your skin during a.m. Later on in the day, all will be smoother and you can reach a true understanding with others as well. If you are generous, you can work wonders.

Aquarius (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) If you devote this day to accomplishing a great deal, you will have cleared the decks for the busy days ahead and given meaning to the Labor Day holiday. Get an early start on all those uncompleted little asks. Retire early.

Pisces (Feb. 20 to March 20) Astrologically, the planets are with you today and this could be one of the happiest holidays you have ever had. You arise feeling wonderful and can spread sunshine wherever you may be. Be full of life, generous — have fun!

If your child is born today there will be every opportunity for success in whatever has to do with the manufacture or sale of products. Give a fine training in ethics as well as a thorough business education and teach to think big in order to get big. By being conscientious in dealing with others, there is no limit to what can be accomplished here. Curb emotionalism through discipline.

Astrological Forecast

By CARROLL RIGHTER

Tuesday, September 5, 1961

General Tendencies: From early, morning until late night this is a day to be very careful and to do nothing in your attitude or actions toward others that could possibly cause any estrangement or separation. A tactful and diplomatic approach at your duties with others is very necessary to keep this an even, calm and poised time.

Aries (March 21 to April 19) While certain situations at home or in the business world may be very disappointing, be calm and study them objectively—fight-ing over them may be disas-trous. Keep busily occupied rectifying errors or best you can. Then all OK.

Taurus (April 20 to May 20) While many a fascinating new outlet or concept may enter into your orbit now, be sure it first fits in with your over-all plans before you adopt it. It is all right to think big, but more important that you be practical.

Gemini (May 21 to June 21) Here is one of those peculiar days when you are bright and adventurous one moment and afraid to invest a penny the next, and your advisers are the same way. Better stick to duties and await a better day for fine investments. Be wary.

Moon Children (June 22 to July 21) — You cannot understand the actions of partners at this time and disagree with them heartily, but to get into arguments would be most unwise right now. So, be sure you remain calm and quietly go about your own duties, disregarding them entirely.

Leo (July 22 to Aug. 21) — You feel that you should make radical changes now because things are not going just as you would like them to, but this would be most foolish in the long run. Dig in and work more efficiently and carefully instead and you succeed.

Virgo (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) — Make it a point to listen carefully to the hopes of good friends and relations, since they are serious and enthusiastic, too eager for praise, and you could offend them if you are not co-operative. Be courteous, kind, wise.

Libra (Sept. 23 to Oct. 23) — Be sure you impress higher-ups with your efficiency and conscientiousness today, as well as prove in some tangible way that you are devoted to family and a fine upstanding citizen. P.M. have dinner at some charming spot.

Scorpio (Oct. 24 to Nov. 21) — Listen carefully to the good ideas of comrades today. You are doing too much daydream-ing and this will help you to get down to earth and become more practical. Follow through on assignments without delay, accepting only the best, however.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) — Be sure you tighten your purse-strings today, or even a trusted adviser could lead you in the wrong direction and you could lose a good deal of present security. The planets are not with you — just keep busy work-ing.

Capricorn (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Be careful you do not get so involved with a high-strung per-son that you neglect others who can be far more helpful to you. However, this is no day to come to any serious decisions about anything, even with associates. Be cagey.

Aquarius (Jan. 21 to Feb 19) Take care you do not commit yourself to some work that will be very tedious and not pro-gressive at all, or you could spend several miserable days ahead. Be sure you study mat-ters well beforehand and avoid being the goat, as it were.

Pisces (Feb. 20 to March 20) Ideal day and evening for so-cial affairs and gatherings of all kinds and making the type of friends that you truly want. Be friendly and co-operative in your attitude, however, so that you draw the right ones to you who can be very helpful, also

If your child is born today — he or she will be one of those interesting youngsters who soon becomes involved with all sorts of activities and other children, is very gregarious and always full of enthusiasm, but it is im-perative you early teach to first complete one task before going on to another. A very fine chart for the pioneer, the public work-er or any profession connected with music and sound.

STORIED REFEREE — Mickey Ion, famous lacrosse player and hard-boiled hockey referee of the Old Pacific Coast League, relaxes during his visit to Toronto for the opening of the Sports Hall of Fame at the Canadian National Exhibition. Ion has lost both legs almost to the hips because of a circulatory ailment and now lives in a Seattle nursing home. (CP Photo).

Sport Snapshots

By JACK SULLIVAN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

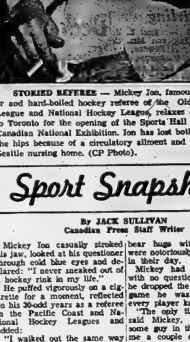
Mickey Ion casually stroked his jaw, looked at his questioner through cold blue eyes and declared: "I never smoked out of all my long life."

He puffed vigorously on a cigarette for a moment, reflected on his 30-odd years as a referee in the Pacific Coast and National Hockey Leagues and added:

"I walked out the same way I went in—through the main door. But there was one small difference. On the way in I carried my skates in a bag. On the way out, I had a skate in each hand, just in case some crazy guys wanted to play games and rough me up.

"And you know, nobody did."

Mickey wasn't a trace of bravado in the 74-year-old legless man's voice. He was simply stating a fact. He one pushed Frederick James (Mickey) Ion around, and that included some of the roughest, toughest players the game has known when Mickey was ice boss in the pro leagues from 1912 to 1943.



SAME OLD SPIRIT

Mickey now gets around in a wheelchair, his legs amputated almost to the hip. "Bad circulation," he explains in a cheerful, carefree sort of way. The only clues to Ion-age are the deep lines creasing his face and stock market cut hair. There are only a few tracers of grey in his thinning brown hair. Mickey has been confined to a Seattle nursing home for years. His wife died, there six years ago, victim of a stroke. He lost his legs four years ago. But he can get by with a hearty belly laugh and his eyes seem always to be swapping yarns with old-timers.

Mickey was in Toronto a week ago for the official opening of the International Hall of Fame. He was one of 43 living members of the Hall invited to the ceremonies by the National Hockey League and the room of a downtown hotel were thick with nostalgia as former members busily renewed old friendships.

IRISH-FISTED, RULER

They all beat a path to Ion's wheelchair. There was a great lacrosse defenceman who never played pro hockey exchanging affectionate handshakes and bear hugs with players who were notoriously bad characters in their day.

Mickey had ruled them all with no questions asked. When he dropped the puck to start a game he was the boss and everybody knew it.

"The only time I was hit," said Mickey, "was the time some guy in the stands ringed me a couple of times on the neck with a pea-shooter. But he wasn't using peas. He was blowing out small marbles.

"I turned around fast the second time and spied the guy. There was nothing to do but go up in the stands and biff him. Which I did."

His visitors included Eddie Shore, the rambunctious Boston Bruins defenceman who found that Mickey was just as tough as he was. Another was Gordon (Iron Duke) Keats, a bruising defenceman with Edmonton Eskimos of the old Western Canada League.

'CREASED ME GOOD'

There were Frank Foyton of the Toronto Elsenhirts, a pro and in the dim dawn of time, and Frank Fredrickson, now a New Yorker salesman, and tough guy in the old PCL.

Walking in together were Nesuy Lalonde, an old lacrosse and hockey cut-up who played with Ion in the Montreal lacrosse team away back in the early 1900s; King Clancy, witty Irish defenceman of the old Ottawa Senators and Toronto Maple Leafs and, within a few years with Ion, and Frank Nighbor, the Pembroke peach who finished his career with the Senators.

The lads ran around to Nesuy.

"I remember facing off with this guy and somebody yelling at me, 'Watch the cavalry,'" recalled Clancy.

"Cavalry?" I thought that referred to money. So the next think I know, I'm getting Newsy's stick all the way up from my knees to my hairline. He creased me good."

"I know all about it," said Nighbor. "Look at me; I hardly have any eyebrows left."

"Yeah," said Lalonde. "But I didn't do it when Mickey was on the ice. He was too smart for me."

Ion sat back and smiled.

OTTAWA (CP) — Hunting polar bears can be a risky business under the best of conditions.

That was the predicament biologist C. R. Harrington of Ottawa found himself in last spring, when he went into the Arctic to study the behavior of female polar bears with newborn cubs.

Mr. Harrington took along a rifle which fires a dart loaded with a stunning dose of tranquilizer. But in the bitter cold of Cornwallis Island, 500 miles inside the Arctic Circle, the rifle wouldn't fire.

Undaunted, he mounted the darts on long spears and set out to probe the snow for hidden dens.

FAST FOOTWORK

Twice he located denned-up mother bears. Twice the darts broke off as they struck the ice. And twice biologist Harrington had to hot-foot for camp when angry bears came charging out of their hideaways.

Undiscouraged, he plans another try next year. But by then he hopes to have available a dart-firing pistol which will be kept warm inside his jacket.

Mr. Harrington's experience is just one of many being logged by the 40 biologists roaming Canada this year on research for the Canadian Wildlife Service.

Not all of them pack the thrills of the polar bear assignment. One crew is out on the Prairies testing an explosive device to scare hungry ducks away from grainfields. Another is roaming the Margaree Valley of Nova Scotia trying to determine how seriously the predations of the merganser duck affect young salmon.

COVER WIDE FIELD

A unit headed by Dr. J. S. Tener has just completed an intensive aerial survey of big game in the Northwest Territories, particularly on the Thelon Game Sanctuary. Another group is studying black ducks on Prince Edward Island and John Kelsall roams Fundy National Park in New Brunswick charting the causes of overpopulation among moose.

And up near Fort Smith, N.W.T., resident biologist Nick Novakowski works on a bold project with eye constantly alert for the return of the rare and beautiful whooping cranes to their northern nesting grounds.

All these projects—and many others—are blended into a master plan to chart Canadian wildlife resources and determine the best ways to preserve them. From such scientific studies have come seasons, bag limits and conservation measures that help control hunting and, in federal areas, protection.

POLAR ESTATE STUDIES

The polar bear study is one of the newest fields in which the Canadian Wildlife Service is working. As of now, nobody knows how many polar bears live in Canada's Arctic. Attempts are being made to count the bears in controlled areas and learn more about their life history.

There has been recurring pressure from outfitters to open polar bears to organized hunting by white men. Only Eskimo and Indian hunters may shoot them now, and they may not shoot cubs or females with cubs.

There have been discussions aimed at international agreement on polar bears, which inhabit the Arctic regions of Canada, Alaska, the Soviet Union and the Scandinavian nations. Some limited kill is allowed in other nations but there is a suggestion that widespread hunting might wipe out the species.

Dr. Ward Stevens, acting chief mammalogist with the Canadian Wildlife Service, says much more study is needed before Canada can come to any decision on polar bear but he expects an international pact may be needed to set workable controls on this king of the Arctic.

Badge of Distinction Does Not Come Cheap to Anglers

CAMPBELL RIVER, B.C. (CP)—The badge of distinction for west coast salmon sport fisherman doesn't come cheap.

Membership in the Tyee Club, one of the world's most exclusive fisherman's cliques, costs time, patience, energy and money. But at this Vancouver Island east coast fishing resort where the big ones lurk, membership in the club that was formed in 1934 is a much-sought possession.

To be eligible for membership the fisherman must have a light rod and tackle. It must be registered with the club at a cost of $3. The salmon must be caught from a rowboat, and the fish must weigh 30 pounds or more.

For a 30-40 pound tyee the properly accredited fisherman gets club membership and a bronze button—at a cost of $5. For a 40-50 pounder he gets a silver button costing $7.50; for a 50-80 pounder a gold button at $15, for a 80-70 pounder a diamond button at $22.50 and for a fish over 70 pounds there's a ruby button, also costing $22.50.

Ruby button-holders are rare, but there are quite a few with diamond and gold buttons, most of them from the United States. ONLY ONE HOOK

This year Mrs. Walter L. Mikas of Los Angeles, equipped with a rowboat, a light rod, 25-pound test line and a spoon lure—also stipulate lures with only one hook—boated a 53-pounder to become the first gold button winner of the season. She fought the fish for 40 minutes before boating it with the aid of her husband and a gaffe.

Last year on his first day of fishing an American reeled in a 66-pounder. But his rod and gear weren't registered so he didn't get a button.

Over the years several myths have grown up about the club. One is that the fisherman has to have a guide. Officials say he doesn't, though guides who know where the fish are, are available at $18 to $20 a day.

Another myth had it that the fisherman was supposed to give the fish to his guide, then buy it back. Not so, say club officials. The button-winning fish belongs to the man who catches it.

Deck of Carrier No Bigger Than Piece of Confetti to Airmen Attempting to Land

By DAVE McINTOSH
Canadian Press Staff Writer

ABOARD HMCS BONAVENTURE (CP)—It has been said that to the airman landing on an aircraft carrier the deck must be bigger than a postage stamp.

But Lieut. C. A. (Whitey) Williamson, 33, of Sarnia, Ont., has managed to land expertly on flattops 140 times, 45 times at night.

On a recent exercise off the Nova Scotia coast, he landed on the Bonaventure in a pea-soup fog after being talked down" by carrier control approach, the same system used ashore and known as ground control approach.

When the hook of his Tracker anti-submarine plane grabbed one of the five cables stretched across the aft end of the carrier, he couldn't see much beyond the island of the carrier. the fog was so thick. And he couldn't be seen from the carrier until a second or so before touchdown.

LIKE CANNON SHOT

The next day he took a reporter for a flip to demonstrate takeoff and landing and the tactics used by the Tracker to find and kill a submarine.

The takeoff is like being shot out of a cannon.

The plane is then into position and is hooked to the catapult. The pilot puts on full power, says "OK, OK, OK" to his co-pilot who salutes the flagman. The flagman whips down his green flag and the under-deck catapult fires its missile—the Tracker—into the air. The blastoff drives the crew back into their seats with a violent jerk.

Lieut. Williamson figures that it safer NOT to touch the stick until the tracker is in the air, that the blastoff might damage a pull back on it suddenly. So he lets the catapult do all the work.

One moment the Tracker is standing still on the deck. The next, in a wink of an eye, it is in the air.

DONE WITH MIRRORS

On this day, there was little or no natural wind. All there was was that created by the speed of the carrier. As a result, it came straight down the deck and not down the angled deck. This created "stack wash" and Lieut. Williamson had to bank sharply to port at the last second to get down and avoid going around again.

Landing is carried out literally with mirrors.

Orange lights are shone into mirrors and the reflected light—known as the "meatball"—tells the pilot whether he is making his approach at the proper angle.

The Tracker touches down at more than 100 miles an hour and is brought quickly to a stop by the arrester gear. The sudden stop throws the crew forward against their straps.

At night, the shortness of the flarepath and the fewness of lights would give a shore-based pilot the shudders.

But deck landings are all in a night's work for the Tracker crews who patrol the Atlantic from their tiny, sea-tossed airfield.

Barriers to Check Outward Flow Have Failed to Crush Will of Hundreds to Escape

By JAMES F. KING
Associated Press Staff Writer

The refugee is the man who flees his homeland—sometimes beckoned by hope but more often driven by fear—and can't go back again.

Since the Second World War more than 40,000,000 persons have become refugees in the greatest exodus since Moses led the children of Israel to the promised land.

And the human tide rolls on.

The Communist barricades around Berlin . . . the Iron Curtain encompassing the Soviet Union and her east European satellites . . . the fabled wall of Communist China.

These barriers have checked the outward flow of those seeking freedom under democracy; yet they have failed to completely crush the will of hundreds to risk death daily to try escape.

GERMANY UNIQUE

Most of the refugees have found sanctuary. But millions are still herded under pitiful conditions, keeping alive as minds on hope as from charity.

The dramatic flight of more than 3,000,000 East Germans is unique in that they joined fellow countrymen in their own country and with the almost certainty of finding a job in a prosperous West Germany.

For millions of others uprooted from their homes the outlook and prospects have been—and still are—filled with uncertainty in a strange land.

Some are still pawns of war—like the 2,000,000 Arab refugees who are wards of the United Nations Relief agency. For a decade they have huddled in camps in the Arab lands encircling Israel in virtual hostages. The Jews and Arabs are still technically at war, leaving resettlement of the Palestine refugees in the air.

The biggest-and bloodiest migration since the war came literally with the granting of freedom when India was partitioned in 1947.

THOUSANDS KILLED

About 9,000,000 Hindus moved from Pakistan to India and more than 8,000,000 Moslems shifted from India to Pakistan amid violence that took several hundred thousand lives.

Communists have been the trigger for the mass flights of refugees in recent years in other areas as well as Germany.

More than 1,500,000 Chinese have poured into Hong Kong since the Communist conquest of the Chinese mainland 12 years ago. For thousands their only home on arrival is the street, their bed the sidewalk.

The Communist Chinese have extended their border sentries to include Tibet since the Lhasa uprising in March, 1959. Upwards of 75,000 Tibetans have fled to India and Nepal.

More than 800,000 North Vietnamese crossed over to South Viet Nam without much interference when the Communists cut the country in half.

Most of the 300,000 Hungarians who fled in the 1956 revolution have been assimilated around the world. A few thousand stateless persons remain in western Europe, displaced person camps but most have been taken care of.

The United States has been the chief haven for European refugees, opening the door to nearly 500,000 since 1947. But since Fidel Castro seized power in Cuba nearly three years ago the United States has provided a sanctuary mainly for Cubans.

Cubans are trickling into Miami at the rate of more than 1,000 a week and up to 100,000 have left the Caribbean island republic since 1959. The Castro regime has given clearance to most but hundreds have made their getaways surreptitiously rather than wait in fear of being trapped or jailed.

Marked by the Years

Moments in History

Belleville's "first moment in history" was the discovery of the site in 1615 by Samuel de Champlain. Then it was known by its Indian name "Assumkheenk" which means "The place where the rushes end." Naturally, no homes had to be heated in those days and the explorers kept warm as best they could. Today, modern heating units keep Belleville homes in cozy comfort; and perhaps the pleasure of the heating industry in Belleville was the predecessor of the Schuster company which began at the turn of the century. Neutrals Plan Plea For Meeting Of Kennedy, K.

Name 2-Man Missions To Washington, Moscow

BELGRADE (Reuters) — The summit conference of non-aligned countries planned to make an urgent appeal today to President Kennedy and Premier Khrushchev to meet soon i.. an attempt to relax dangerous East-West tension.

A conference source said the brief, three-paragraph appeal will be handed over to United States Ambassador George Kennan and Soviet Ambassador A. Epishev later today.

The 25 non-aligned leaders will follow up the letters by sending two-man missions to both Washington and Moscow to press their demands for a meeting between the American and Soviet leaders.

President Sukarno of Indonesia and Prime Minister Nehru of India and President Kwame Nkrumah of Ghana will go to Moscow.

TEXT WITHHELD

The appeal to Khrushchev and Kennedy was approved in a marathon four-hour session Monday night of the heads of state and government attending the conference here. Its text will not be released until it has been delivered to Khrushchev and Kennedy.

The appeal is based on an Indian proposal. Nehru told the conference Saturday the organization of war or peace is the most important issue facing the world today.

Deputy delegates to the conference here met until 5 a.m. today trying to hammer out agreement on a final conference declaration, due to be published tonight.

Disagreement was reported among the delegates over the wording of the communique, which covered a wide range of topics from colonialism to the resumption of nuclear tests.

De Gaulle Calls For Firmness By West Allies

The French president told more than 600 reporters and officials at a press conference that France's warning against pressing for negotiations with the Russians over Berlin at any cost appeared to have been appreciated by the other Western powers.

De Gaulle said that if Russia tries to interfere by force with the West's position in Berlin, or with Western communications "the Western allies must maintain their communications and their positions by force also."

He said the Western powers "have no better way of serving the peace of the world than to remain united and firm."

But this did not mean that the Western bloc must always remain in opposition to each other.

"If there is to be no nuclear war then we must go about making peace. If the Soviet government would cease to rain wild threats, if it could encourage relaxation of tension instead of opposing such relaxation, then it will be possible for the three Western powers to examine with the Soviet government all the problems of the world and especially the problem of Germany."

Goulart Warned Air Force Plans To Attack Plane

BRASILIA (AP) — An air force inspection team has been sent to fetch Joao Goulart's path to the presidency and plunge Brazil back into political confusion.

Congressmen, rushed out of bed for an extraordinary 15-minute post midnight session, were given the news that air force dissidents were apparently determined to shoot down Goulart's plane should he try to reach this hinterland capital to be sworn in as president.

Acting President Ranieri Mazzilli telephoned Goulart in his southern stronghold of Porto Alegre advising him not to fly to Brasilia because he had planned. Mazzilli said in view of the sudden turn of events, the vice-president's visit to Brasilia could not be guaranteed.

Goulart had made plans to fly here to be sworn in after the three military chiefs agreed to his appointment as figurehead president under a new parliamentary system vesting the real power in a prime minister elected by congress.

It had been expected that Goulart would be inaugurated somewhere this week to succeed Jania Quadros, whose resignation Aug. 25 touched of the crisis and brought the country close to civil war.

The three service chiefs had blocked Goulart's succession, contending his leftist tendencies would open the way to Communist turmoil. They yielded Sunday night after congress adopted a constitutional amendment authorizing the new system of government by referendum and taking virtually all power away from the president.

Word of the airmen's revolt came to Senate President Auro Moura Andrade, who told Congress Air Minister Grum Moss had said he no longer could control his men.

Today's Chuckle

This would be a heckuva time for the meek to inherit the earth.

Oppressive Heat Drives Many To Beaches, Parks on Holiday

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Residents of Southern Ontario and Quebec fled to the beaches and parks to seek relief from high temperatures and oppressive heat, while in the rest of Canada Labor Day weather ranged from comfortably cool to downright inhospitable.

But whatever the weather, labor celebrated its day with parades and speeches.

Hailing the Toronto's 85 degree heat, 8,000 union members and their families jammed the Canadian National Exhibition grounds carrying placards supporting the New Democratic Party and condemning the government's policies.

In Montreal, members of the Montreal labor council and their guests filled the Forum to hear an address by New Democratic Party leader T. C. Douglas.

St. John's, Nfld., held its first labor day parade in years while in Windsor, a three-day celebration was launched by a speech by George Burt, vice-president of the Canadian Labor Congress.

On Parliament Hill, uniformed members of the Red Army Chorus, which has been making concerts and visits in Canada, mingled with 3,000 Canadians who had gathered for celebrations of the guard as the 2nd battalion, Canadian guards, ended its nine-week ceremony.

In British Columbia, motorists drove with their headlights on, a practice started by the United States as a successful reminder to other motorists of the need for safe driving, was enforced by safety officials.

At Lonsdale park, district trade unionists and descendants of the Doukhobor Martyrs made their annual pilgrimage to the grave of the martyrs' leader George Loveless, who died in London township in 1876.

Loveless and five others started the labor movement 130 years ago in England in the parish of Tolpuddle, Dorsetshire.

In 1834, they were sentenced to seven years in the Australian penal colonies because of their union activities. They were pardoned following a public outcry.

UNION REBELS CALL FOR PROBE OF FINANCES

Less Than $30,000 In Its Strike Fund

SUDBURY (CP)—The rebellious Sudbury local of the International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers (Ind.) voted Monday night for an investigation of the national office's financial affairs.

Some 1,500 members of Local 598 voted unanimously for the resolution asking for the inquiry, at a meeting called by local president Don Gillis.

Ray Poirier, Local 598's financial secretary, told the meeting more than $500,000 had been sent to the national office from Sudbury in the last 2½ years but that a check on last May showed the national office had less than $30,000 in its strike fund.

The Local, which has been at odds with its national office since 1940, began withholding its dues, totalling $25,000 a month, five months ago.

Both local and national executives were barred from using the union's headquarters by a court order following an outbreak of violence a week ago when the national office appointed an administrator for the local and took over the building.

'KEY CHARGES'

Two of four members of Local 598's executive who face charges by the national office that they worked for affiliation with the Canadian Labor Congress through a merger with the rival United Steelworkers of America, said no such action would be taken without a full membership vote.

Vice-president Don McNabb and Poirier said their meetings with CLC and Steelworkers officials were exploratory.

But, they said, if it came to a choice between merging with the Teamsters or the Steelworkers, the latter were said to be superficial.

Still Hope Reds Will Agree To Ban Atom Tests in Air

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Kennedy still kept the door open today for Soviet acceptance of a British - American proposal to ban nuclear test explosions in the atmosphere despite Russia's explosion Monday of its second nuclear weapon test in four days.

The new shot in Central Asia was announced by Dr. Glenn Seaborg, chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission. Seaborg said it had a force "in the low kiloton range" and was fired in the atmosphere.

At Hyannis Port, Mass., Kennedy, taking a Labor Day weekend rest, did not comment on the atmospheric test but Russia launched after he and British Prime Minister Macmillan had proposed a ban on overhead explosions that shower the air with lethal radioactivity.

The state department said the second Soviet test was not considered a final answer to the Kennedy - Macmillan proposal. Officials noted that tests are generally run in series and the latest probably was in the series at the time Kennedy and Macmillan issued the appeal to Khrushchev.

The AEC statement said:

"Dr. Glenn T. Seaborg announced this afternoon that the Soviet Union conducted another nuclear test early this morning, again in the Semipalatinsk area in Central Asia. The yield of the device was in the low kiloton range and the detonation again occurred in the atmosphere."

The term "low kiloton range" was not specifically defined. In the 20-kiloton (one of TNT) is spoken of as a "nominal" nuclear weapon. Possibly, the language used in the AEC statement meant the new explosion was in the neighborhood of that size.

U.S. Soldiers Use Tear Gas Against East German Police

BERLIN (Reuters) — U.S. troops hurled tear gas at East Berlin police early today for the first time. West Berlin police said.

The report said the tear gas was loosed after an American patrol—an officer and a soldier—were sprayed with a water hose by East Berlin police "without apparent reason."

West Berlin police said the American soldiers were in a building near the East - West Sector of Berlin when the tear gas canisters were thrown at them.

The incident came as Russia prepared to hand over a protest note containing a veiled threat to the western allies that the power safety centre that controls the Berlin air corridors.

Meanwhile, it was learned two American women tourists were detained by East Berlin police Monday for taking photos in East Berlin.

West Berlin police said the women were held for 21 hours and had their film confiscated.

The Soviet message to the American commandant of the centre accused the U.S. "of assisting West Berlin provocateurs" in hindering the normal work of Soviet personnel at the centre.

The centre is responsible for all air traffic in the Berlin air corridors leading into West Berlin.

The Russians warned that such action "could have very serious results in the activities of this organization."

90 FATALITIES ACROSS CANADA DURING HOLIDAY

Water Mishaps Take 20-Lives

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Canadians celebrated their last long holiday of the summer during the weekend, but it was marred by a near-record toll of accidental deaths.

Fatalities, mainly in traffic crashes, occurred at the rate of about one every hour in the 78-hour period from 6 p.m. Friday to midnight Monday.

A Canadian Press survey listed 37 dead in traffic mishaps and 16 other fatalities for a total of 81. There were a record 90 deaths, 62 in traffic, for the same period last year.

More than half the dead were in Ontario and Quebec. Road deaths were 22 here in Ontario and 17 in Quebec. Eight persons were drowned in Ontario and four in Quebec.

From Around World Come Protests At New Nuclear Tests by Russians

LONDON (Reuters)—The non-Communist world today condemned Russia's continuation of nuclear tests despite a British-American appeal to end all explosions in the atmosphere.

Newspapers and campaigners against nuclear tests used such terms as "callous," "brutal" and "disgusting" to describe the new Soviet test Monday.

In Jakarta, the Indonesian ministers for religious affairs, Wahib Wahab, postponed a scheduled trip to Russia on orders from President Sukarno and said it was because he had "misgivings" about Russia with the resumption of nuclear testing."

Three young campaigners for nuclear disarmament marched to the Soviet embassy in London carrying placards reading "another test—cynical and brutal" and "new test contempt for humanity."

Police made them leave the placards outside as they delivered a letter of protest to each embassy officials.

In Oslo, the Norwegian Peace Council delivered an appeal to the Soviet embassy asking Russia "for the sake of humanity" not to make any more nuclear tests.

A column of 150 Japanese women made an orderly march from the Soviet embassy compound in Tokyo today to protest the new tests.

Meanwhile, the Dutch Foundation for Anti-nuclear Bomb Campaigns sent a cable to President Kennedy and Prime Minister Macmillan urging them to extend their negotiations of a ban on tests in the atmosphere to underground tests as well.

The official Soviet Tass news public newspaper Al Gombouria in Cairo supported the decision of the Soviet decision to resume tests. It was the first Cairo press comment on the Soviet move.

Meanwhile, the Soviet public still had not been told of the Russian tests last Friday and Monday. Tass, the official press make any mention of the tests by Kennedy and Macmillan to Nikita Khrushchev to end atmospheric tests.

The press also went unmentioned in the Communist Chinese press, which printed only selected comments from other Communist countries hailing the Russian decision to resume tests.

CAN SYNCHRONIZE MUCH OF WORK THROUGH COMMITTEE

As the result of a co-ordinating committee, which meets every month, being set up including the city's public works and public utilities boards and the Lakeland Gas and Bell Telephone firms, much of the work being done by these organizations has been able to be synchronized, city engineer Malcolm Turnbull said this morning.

This has resulted in a number of projects being undertaken jointly by the services involved at a saving in time, expense and inconvenience to both the public and the participating services.

Now being planned are some 30 projects, which will be undertaken in this fashion in the near future.

Belleville Rink Wins Shaw Memorial Cup

It was hot and that is grossly understated but bowlers are a hardy lot and the Shaw Memorial cup tournament held at the bowling greens on the holiday was an unqualified success. Ideal weather accomplished by the generosity of the sponsors and the untiring work put into the tournament by Orb Smith and his committee over the years. The late William Shaw of Shaw's Men's Wear, the sponsor in honor of his father and mother, who were long and enthusiastic members of the Lawn Bowling Club, has consistently donated valuable prizes for this tournament, and it has developed into one of the best tournaments held in this district.

In the first year there were about 30 entries and in the succeeding years increased until yesterday there were 64 rinks in play and they came from Belleville, Peterborough, Whitby, Trenton, Picton, Brighton and the local club and probably before they leave the green will enter the local bowlers kept many of the main prizes in this city. Special kudos accomplished excellent and lightning fast and there were no complaints only from the host, which was the most intolerable. The bowling was exceptionally fast and some good scores were racked up during the day. One oddity of the game can be found in the scores when the team that won the two-game high score counted more points than some of the rinks that won three games.

Gordon Walton and Mel Watkin won the trophy and the individual prize for third place with a score of 54 plus 11, while Mr. and Mrs. Percy Gray, Picton, were defeated with a score of 53 plus six. During the first game Mrs. Graham was taken ill and Mrs. Quigley received medical attention and Mrs. Graham was able to continue. Mr. and Mrs. William Dunican of Kingston won 49 plus four, Miss Betty Pogue and Laurie Mitchell of Peterborough with 48 plus five and Mr. and Mrs. Dick Exley of Kingston with 46 plus two.

Mrs. C. Hyde and her son Jerry" won the two-game high count with a score of 46 and 20 while Miss Marge Sherman and George McGee won the one-game high with a count of 46.

In the draw for those steps who did not win prizes and also during the day, Scotty Johnston and his partner, Miss Winnie Smith, held the winning ticket.

During the day the members of the women's section of the club sold sandwiches, pastries and coffee and did a land office business. It was a most successful tournament and Mr. Smith received many entries for next year for visitors who attended their way homeward.

In a recent treble tournament held on the local greens by the women's section of the club Mrs. Miss Rosa Spry of Stirling with a rink of Mrs. Mary Dorno and Mrs. Alma Fox, Harold Smith, honors. Mrs. Phyllis Graham with a rink of Mrs. Ethel Wardhaugh and Mrs. Millie Wright won the two-game high score and a rink of Mrs. Ruby Baker, Mrs. Pearl Carr with Mrs. Rachael Grimshaw of Trenton won the one-game high.

On Thursday last the rink of Mrs. Chris Hoard, Mrs. Laura Hyde with Mrs. Rita Lloyd as skip won the Ladies' Invitational contest. The ten bookmakers for this social hour were Mrs. Lil Mascaro, Mrs. Hazel Boyle and Mrs. Grace Pearce.

School Safe Carted Away But Not Opened

Too little and too soon!

That was the way which authorities at Quinte Secondary School described last night's unsuccessful attempt to rob the school safe.

The would-be safe crackers carted away the 350-pound safe and took it to the school grounds where attempts were made to smash it open with crowbars and sledge hammers

They were forced to give up the attempt but not before the safe had been damaged.

As it turned out there was no money in the safe, anyway.

New Form Of Road Surface Being Applied

Public work crews have been engaged in the application of a new form of road surface known as Dix-seal this past Thursday, Friday and Monday to various streets in the city. Those sections of Bridge Street East lying between Church and Mercer and between William and Victoria and Victoria Ave. between Victoria and Bridge, Prince of Wales between College and Dundas and also Division and North Pay between College and Donald were treated with the new surface.

City engineer Malcolm Turnbull advises that the Dix-seal process lays down a thin layer of specially composed mix, not asphalt, which is claimed to give a five-year service period. Considerable interest has been shown in the process by municipalities in this part of the province and a number of visitors were present to examine the process in the past few days.

The widening and improvements on College Street between North Front and Bidney have been progressing well and are almost completed. This provides for the widening of the street, the installation of storm sewers and catch basins and the improvement of the gravel sidewalks.

Storm drainage improvement on Valleyview Crescent are proceeding well as are the alterations being made just east of the Dickson Hill plant.

The improvements recently outlined by Mayor Haig and Lee Grills, City Clerk-Statistician for the front of the Federal Building on Station Street are now being carried out and it is hoped to have them completed in the near future.

At city hall the department of works staff has been busy with the planning necessary for the 1962 budget submission. Work is also underway on the revision of the five-year capital budget. Elsewhere in the department normal maintenance work is being carried on.

Mark 'Boost Trenton Week', Commerce Chamber Project

TRENTON — At the suggestion of the Trenton Chamber of Commerce, this week has been named "Boost Trenton Week."

Trenton residents have been asked to wear "I'm a Trenton Booster" buttons and newspapers and radio station CJBQ have been asked to highlight the town.

The 1961 official count, as compiled by the assessment department, sets the population of Trenton at 12,314. The town sprawls over 2,464.46 acres and the general elevation is 336 feet above sea level.

Trenton has a mayor and six councillors; a police chief with an 18-man staff, a fire chief with eight regular firemen and 18 volunteers, a Board of Health, a welfare department, a public utilities commission and numerous other governmental departments, if

The affairs of six public schools and a high school are guided by the Trenton Board of Education. The town boasts two separate schools and a Christian Reformed Church.

Trenton Memorial Hospital has grown steadily since its building more than 10 years ago. This month the new $800,000 addition to this hospital will be officially opened.

13 CHURCHES

With at least 13 churches of various denominations, Trenton can provide each newcomer with a place of worship in the faith of his religious convictions, and each church has a staff of quota of women's organizations, men's clubs and youth activities.

This year several of the local churches have embarked on extension programs.

The Trenton Board of Parks Management is not only concerned with keeping the town's many fine parks and playgrounds in ship-shape order, but also has long-range plans for park development within the town borders and in the areas under consideration for annexation.

TORONTO STOCKS

TORONTO (CP) — The traditional post-Labor Day market surge got off to a good start in light morning trading today when the industrial index jumped 1.35.

Paradoxically, wide spread fractional losses actually brought the market down, but gains among the 30 stocks which make up the industrial index produced the rise. Burlington Steel had the most notable gain, up 1% to a new high of 36 on a volume of 3,781 shares.

Losses among utilities and banks and financial institutions were responsible for much of the decline. In utilities, Bell Telephone, BC, Power, CPR, Great Lakes Power, Quebec Natural Gas and Shawinigan were all down as much as ¾.

On index, industrials gained 1.35 to 203.38 and base metals .12 to 205.94. Golds fell .94 to 80.97, western oils .14 to 96.05 and the 11 a.m. volume was 289,000 shares compared with 340,000 at the same time Friday.

Gold trading was light with Bellinger and McIntyre Porcupine both off ⅛ and ¼, respectively.

The base metals market was weak with Geco, Gunnar and International Nickel all down ½ to ¾.

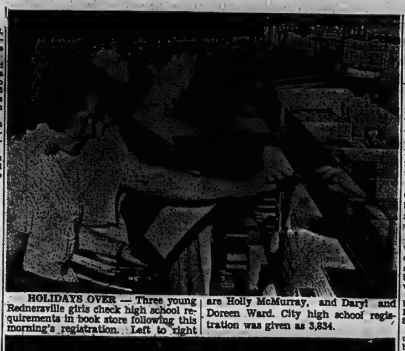
Storm Builds Force Toward Hurricane Level



MIAMI (AP)—Tropical storm Carla built up toward hurricane power today as she followed a nine-mile-an-hour course through the Caribbean Sea, aimed at the border between Yucatan and the crown colony of British Honduras.

The threat of Carla developed, hurricane Betsy jogged a little to the west during the night and enough to indicate that she might ever menace the United States mainland.

The Miami weather bureau reported that Carla's highest windspeed increased to 80 miles an hour and there was a possibility they would grow to hurricane force of 74 or greater during the day.

BACK TO SCHOOL — Cash registers in local school supply store played a merry tune this morning as students from the city's three high schools converged to purchase requirements for the school year. City high schools reported record registrations for the 1961-62 school term which commenced today.

4,509 Register In City's Public Schools

The late arrival of some public school scholars spoiled what would otherwise have been a perfect calculation by public school authorities, regarding the 1961 enrolment estimate. This estimate, which was set at 4,481 students, was realized in the first report submitted by public school system administrator Lawrence Kells this morning.

Unfortunately a few tardy types, 28 in number, boosted the Bayview school's registration from 269 to 297 pupils and the total city enrolment to 4,509. The enrolment in the other schools is: Avondale — 158, Harry J. Clarke — 286, Hillcrest — 204, King George — 405, Prince Charles — 356, Prince of Wales — 433, Queen Alexandra— 457, Queen Elizabeth — 477, Queen Mary — 464, Queen Victoria — 537 and Sir Winston Churchill — 438.

This fall sees the opening of the new Harry J. Clarke school on Rollins Drive on schedule and all reports indicate that this new school is functioning quite well. There have been 30 new staff members, in the form of replacement teachers and additional members of the public school teaching force.

GIPSIES PROBLEM

LONDON (CP) — Housing Minister Henry Brooks has been asked by Norman Dodds, a Labor MP, to look into Bellais's gipsy problem. At 58, Albans Hertfordshire, a four-foot trench was dug around a heath so gipsies can't park their caravans there.

3,834 Registered at Three High Schools in City

An all-time record in registration at the three city high schools was reported today at noon with a total of 3,834 on the three seats of learning.

The registration at Nicholson College was given as 180, compared with 140 grade 11, 12 and 13 pupils last year.

Belleville Collegiate and Moira Secondary Schools were considerably up over last year while at Quinte Secondary the registration was "slightly up" at 833.

The Collegiate registration was 1,102, over 100 more than was expected while at Moira the registration was 839, up 100 from last year.

At the Belleville Collegiate Principal A. E. Orr said there were three reasons for the vastly increased registration.

One of these was the unemployment which was seeing numbers of students returning to school who were unable to find jobs. Another reason for the increase at the Collegiate was that this school is taking the overflow from Moira Secondary School where a building program is planned.

The third reason for the increased enrollment at the Collegiate was given as an influx of residents from outside the area having moved to the city. Many of the unexpected registrations are children of air force personnel.

Truman Glad Neutral Lands Receive Jolt

NEW YORK (AP) — Former president Truman said today that Russia's resumption of nuclear tests during a test ban committed nations a jolt which they deserved.

"The only thing that pleases me," Truman said of the Soviet action, "is the jolt the neutral nations got. They got just what was coming to them. They ought to take the side of the free world if they want to survive."

Truman, taking his morning stroll during a visit here, remarked to reporters that the neutral nations are free "because the free world made them free. Russia didn't do it."

Brilliant BCI Student Drowns In Quinte Bay

Robert Wesse, 19, brilliant young Belleville Collegiate Institute graduate scheduled to enter Queen's University this fall, was drowned in the Bay of Quinte Monday afternoon, when he fell from the deck of a small motorized surf board.

Yesterday police and firemen unsuccessfully searched for the boy's body and the hunt was resumed this morning. Skin divers aided in the search.

After being thrown into the water about 300 yards off Hershimer Avenue, the youth swam a short distance but disappeared before help could reach him. He was not a strong swimmer.

The accident was witnessed by the boy's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. Blake Wesse, 85 Pine Street.

Winner of nine firsts in recent upper school examinations, Robert was the winner of the Thompson Products Ltd. scholarship of $2,400. He was to study applied science at Queen's.

In addition to the Queen's scholarship, he also won an Ontario Scholarship worth $400.

CNE Attendance Short of Mark Set by Officials

TORONTO (CP)—The Canadian National Exhibition closed its gates for another year Monday in a blaze of fireworks and the annual hockey-book mass from the midway.

The 2-day fair ended on Labor Day, much earlier than in previous years when it ran a full week later.

Final - day attendance was 344,930, bringing the 15-day total to 2,872,350. Last year's over-all figure was 2,939,200.

It was a day full of odd highlights. Someone threw a box of soap into the huge Princess Margaret fountain causing suds to overflow.

Later, Douglas Campbell a ban - the - bomb demonstrator, spoke in front of the Hockey Hall of Fame building until police ushered him away telling him he was breaking a CNE bylaw.

UNIONISTS MARCH

A parade of 7,700 union members attracted many to the CNE grounds. And for the 43rd time the Toronto Firefighters unit won the Grand Challenge Trophy for marchers. Early in the evening the RCAF put on a spectacular air show featuring their precision aerobatic Golden Hawks team.

Officials were pleased with the results of the Canadian-centering grandstand show which attracted more than 180,000 persons to 14 performances. It made $375,000 at the box office, $67,000 more than last year.

In general there was little new at the CNE this year—the same cars as are on sale now, the highways were shown in the automotive building, except for three new English-made models.

Though crowds stretched right out into the street to get into the birth-of-a-baby exhibit at Medicenque, the opposite show may not be held here next year. Ontario Medical Association officials are looking for a permanent home for the exhibit outside the CNE.

Claims Steel Raids Sudbury Mine-Mill Local

TORONTO (CP)—A secession movement in Sudbury Local 598 of the International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers (Can.) is in fact a raid by the United Steel Workers of America (CLC), counsel for Mine-Mill's national executive said in court today.

Counsel Aubrey Golden was arguing for a declaration that a trusteeship imposed by the national office last month was legal and for continuance of a temporary injunction barring interference with its administrator by a faction opposing the national group.

The hearing was before Chief Justice J. C. McRuer of the High Court of Justice, with the local executive calling for lifting Hall of Fame building until police ushered him away telling him he was breaking a CNE by-law.

LATEST ACTION

The court action was the latest development in a long fight between the Mine-Mill national executive and its rebellious Sudbury local officers, which culminated 10 days ago in an attempt by the national group to seize control of the big and well-headed local and its bank accounts.

School System — New or Old?

The changed curriculum in Ontario's secondary schools, announced last week by Hon. John Robarts, Ontario's Minister of Education, ought to receive the consideration of every thoughtful resident of the province, and not just that of students and parents of students.

Until a full analysis has been provided by those professionally qualified to evaluate the significance of different aspects of the program, we ought not to be too hasty in making final judgments.

That does not mean, though, that a preliminary inspection of the program cannot be undertaken at once. First we note that, when the system is in full operation, all secondary school students will be classed in one of three categories, taking courses designed to fit them for work, or further study, in arts and science, or business and commerce or engineering, technology and trades. Immediately it strikes one that this division bears an obvious similarity to the present division of courses, general, commercial and technical.

In this connection it is interesting to note that J. R. H. Morgan, superintendent of Toronto's secondary schools, says that, aside from the fact a student would have to make a choice of careers in Grade 9, the program seems to follow a practice common in Toronto for thirty years.

We suggest that, in actual fact, there is a greater similarity between the future program and past policies than even this remark by Mr. Morgan suggests. The thirty-year period mentioned by him takes us back to 1931. Prior to that time there was, in some schools in the province, a three-course program which had even greater similarity to that now proposed, in that technical schools then offered a course which equipped the graduates to enter university. Although such technical school graduates would be expected to be interested in applied science, in one of the engineering courses, they could enter arts courses if they desired. This option in the technical course was later dropped. It now appears as if it, or something closely approaching it, is to be restored, since each of the three proposed divisions will offer a five-year course leading to higher education and training.

There may be some surprise in the grouping of sciences with the arts in one course, and engineering with technology in another, under the proposed program. This is the result of the custom of regarding engineering as a science, paying too little attention to the qualifying adjective, "applied." On the whole, though, the new grouping appears more reasonable. The theoretical scientist probably has more in common with the student of the arts than with the practical engineer.

Mr. Morgan, we think, has placed his finger squarely on the most questionable part of the program, judging it from the little we know of it so far. He has called "startling and dramatic" the requirement that students choose their life-work in Grade 9. As we have shown, this is not without precedent, many of the students now being required in some Ontario schools in the twenties, but that does not lessen the validity of Mr. Morgan's objection. He has called for "crossrungs on the ladder" to allow students a chance to change courses without a loss of a year of schooling. Other school superintendent has since said that the new program will not indeed provide greater opportunities for course switching than does the program now being followed.

The new program, we are told, will throw special emphasis on counselling. There is evident here the influence of the cult of vocational guidance, whose effectiveness we do not have been grossly over-estimated. It may well be that the ever-increasing trend towards specialization makes an earlier choice of a lifework necessary, in spite of the marked lengthening of the overall period of training now taken by most young people before they actually start working. But if this is so, it is an evil. Further decisions of this nature at the age of 14 can only be justified by necessity; the early decision ought never to be regarded as desirable in itself.

The adventurer is within us, and he contests for our favor with the social man we are obliged to be. These two sorts of life are incompatibles; one we hanker after, the other we are obliged to. There is no other conflict so deep and bitter as this. — William Bolitho.

Discount Stores Popular

In the United States, discount houses—stores that sell products at prices well below those prevailing in regular retail shops—are invading the field of general merchandising in much the same way as chain organizations have overwhelmed the food - selling business. Already in 1940 sales by discount houses were estimated at $2 billion, equal to about a third of all department store sales, and any remaining doubts about the respectability of this type of shop will surely be removed when a large eight-storey building on New York's Fifth Avenue opens its doors for discount selling.

As they grow in popularity, discount stores are changing in character. Originally they were hole-in-the-wall affairs where goods were sold below the retail prices set by manufacturers. But with the gradual erosion of retail price maintenance laws in most of the states the courts have tended to find that they violate the anti-trust laws) discount houses have come out into the open They rely on a large turnover and a minimum of "frills" to enable them to cut the retail mark-up on their products to possibly one-half that of the department stores.

In pre-war days discount selling was confined to relatively few consumer products, with household appliances a top favorite, and individual stores usually concentrated on a single line of goods. Now they handle everything, from patent medicines to toys. Similarly, while from shoes to automobiles, can be bought at a discount house, and many of the latter now offer a full range of products under one roof.

Today's discount stores still keep their overhead down relatively low, but price is by no means their only selling point. Indeed, one department store recently converted part of its business over to discount selling, importing all the trappings (open shelves, customer self-service, cash and carry instead of salesgirls) but kept the store unchanged; the customers flocked in with the attractiveness of Pavlov dogs.

There is no doubt that the very words "discount store" produce a flutter in the American shopper's breast. For, like over the love of personal service, the average person likes to prefer to rummage at leisure through open shelves and racks without a salesgirl looking at their elbow. (They also tend to buy more when they do not have to contemplate a full day's haul reach the cashier at the exit.) Even more appealing are the discount stores, which are operated by very small staffs, keep their doors open for long hours, particularly at weekends when families get a chance to shop together.

The question of what is and what is not a discount house is increasingly unclear. For one thing, discount houses are getting more and more department stores every day. One of the main sources of supply for the discount operator has been that he has supplied relatively little in the way of service — no wrapping, no delivery, no credit and often no returned articles. Now one chain of discount stores has announced its intention of providing many of these services and others are looking in this direction.

Right in fact, discount stores have chalked up further economies on store overhead by many of their prices to competed directly with the discount houses.

Still others are setting up their own discount stores, or, more likely under a different name. As discount houses take on more of the characteristics of the department store, room may even be created for the re-emergence of the old hole-in-the-wall operator to discount the discounters.

Swordfish Lucrative

Halifax Chronicle-Herald

Years ago swordfish were regarded mainly as a trophy prize for our Hemingway sweepstakemen with rod and reel, but a number of progressive commercial fishermen in Nova Scotia have changed all that. Indeed, these fighters of the sea have provided such a lucrative addition to the trade industry that the Fisheries Research Board is deep in a study of the species to determine whether or not the harvest can be increased.

In the past decade, the catch (confined on the Canadian Atlantic coast to Nova Scotia waters), has doubled to $1,400,000 annually, and, for the scientific and swordfish catches are now run into the open They rely on a large turnover and a minimum of "frills" to enable them to cut the retail mark-up on their products to possibly one-half that of the department stores.

STRENGTH FOR THE DAY

DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS

IF WE DO OUR JOB

After Jesus had been crucified and had risen from the dead, He fellowshipped with His disciples for a period of forty days. During that time He talked with them of the things concerning the kingdom of God. And what happened at the end? After listening to what He had to say about the world-wide universal spiritual kingdom of God, His disciples inquired of Him eagerly, "Lord, wilt Thou at this time restore again the kingdom to Israel?" After forty days dwelling upon that great and universal spiritual kingdom and their application to the disciples were still thinking in terms of the restoration of their nation. They did not say, "Lord, when will the kingdom come?" as they should. They said, "Lord, will Thou at this time restore again the kingdom to Israel?"

The Lord's answer was, "Ye shall receive power," with that power (which we call the Holy Spirit) the preaching of life, individual, national, world-wide would be worked out. You and I do not know what God has in store for us; but if we open our hearts and receive "the Spirit" then we will be led into the ways of truth.

Jesus left only one commandment with His disciples: Be My witnesses. In other words, live your Christian faith in such a manner that others may see

Wants to Know What's Wrong With the World

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

"What's wrong with the world?" the young man asked me yesterday.

I'll tell him what what's wrong with the world. It's simple — depressingly simple. I don't use the seat belts on my car.

That's what's wrong with the world. One could write a hundred books on the subject and the core of the trouble would still remain — I don't use the seat belts on my car.

I have other habits, of course. I brought the car. Everyone should have them. They are small and the protection great. I even suggested that seat belts should be made mandatory on all automobiles as an essential safety measure.

But I have never used them — not once. On short trips I don't bother to pay my respects. On long trips I want to feel uncontrolled. In medium trips — well, I just don't.

Is this a trivial matter? What does it have to do with "what's wrong with the world?" Everything, I think. For what is wrong with the world is don't you intelligence we have. Our knowledge of the habits to our actions.

I had enough sense to put seat belts in the car. Every time someone says to me, "Don't you use them?" I answer, "Yes, of course." But my brain does not obey me when I climb into the car.

A certain part is undisciplined, instead by a vague complex of feelings — fear — over distrand or at all control. I'm led by apathy, insolence and a few other habits. I am sure that if I acknowledge the danger or driving or by using the belts, I may provoke the fates into causing an accident.

These are all irrational sentiments — foolish, frivolous and perhaps fatal. Yet they are the masters of my intellect. Sitting at my typewriter, I am absolutely sure that I will not crash when I ignore them.

And is this not a true representation of the world itself? Doesn't the human race have enough intelligence and the ingenuity to create a world of peace and prosperity?...Doesn't everybody everywhere on earth want fundamentally the same goals?

But we do not use that intelligence we have. In 3,300 years of civilization, there have been 8,000 wars. There is much designed to prevent war — and each has lasted an average of two years. All except maniacs want peace; but we will not wear the belts that will help us prevent war.

What is wrong with the world is lying right in my car, immaculate, unused, and waiting for the inevitable smash-up.

We Should Be Moderate In Total Fat Consumption

By Joseph C. Meisner, M.D.

"Dear Dr. Meisner: An article on cholesterol was the main topic of conversation at our bridge-luncheon, so much so that our newest grandmother had no opportunity to show us the baby's pictures.

"One woman insisted that substituting oleomargarine for butter would lessen the forming of cholesterol. Is this true? — Thu Monday Club (Per G. N.)"

Not exactly.

Ordinary margarine and butter are essentially the same in fat content and calories.

However, there are special margarines now available that contain a large amount of "unsaturated fats." It is these saturated fats which are currently thought to be one — and only one — of several factors in the cholesterol problem.

Anyway, the problem of cholesterol isn't nearly as easy to solve articles make it out to be. It isn't the presence of cholesterol in the diet that damages, because cholesterol is a vital substance and we all have it. The important question is this: What makes it accumulate on the walls of the arteries?...After all, people who live solely on vegetables also have cholesterol in the blood stream, because the body's adroit chemistry creates cholesterol from whatever is available in the line of food.

The question isn't answered yet.

My own conclusion, based on such information as has been accumulated, is simple enough.

First, it is a very obvious thing, which is to avoid obesity. Substantial overweight certainly does as much harm as cholesterol — and maybe more. So why not put forth a little effort? Second, I think it might do some good and certainly will do no harm, if we all try to limit the habit of eating less in the way of animal fats. Third, we need to avoid them entirely, but just to cut down. Nowadays obesity in the world de people eat a diet so high in fats.

Third, which is corollary, why worry about butter or margarine, when some moderate but daily attention to cutting down on the fat from beef, pork, ham or lamb will take as much cholesterol out of the diet as is represented by all the butter or margarine we eat?

The basic, simple, well-known fact is that the way to achieve moderation in total fat consumption rather than to quibble over whether this or that fat shall be spread on the bread is a little better or a little worse than some other fat.

In short, on this cholesterol birds-diet business, I'm afraid we all are being led astray, and are acting too much like the overwrought people of the effect. keeps insisting. "Put me on a diet — but make it a diet so I can eat all I want of everything I like."

"Dear Dr. Meisner: I have eczema inside both ears. Is there any cure? — Mrs. L."

Most likely. The probable basis is a fungus infection, which produces scaling and itching. Often there may by secondary infection.

These fungus infections may follow swimming in water that happens to carry the fungus. It can be quite stubborn to control.

A mixture of alcohol and boric acid, half and half, soaked in a pledget of cotton, may help. Better still, have a skin specialist check to determine the exact nature of the trouble. (Eczema outside the ear canal is most likely to be an allergy, due to cosmetics, jewelry, etc. Inside, fungus is more likely.)

Japs Like Blonde Dolls

Stratford Beacon-Herald

One valuable thing about having a blonde face and horizontal eyes, is that when you visit the land of the Rising Sun, the Orient; it becomes an instant passport to fame. From the point of view of a Japanese child, it seems, with its love for pink cheeks has the attraction of a transparent somewhat unappetizing doll or a gollywog has for children of European descent.

An enterprising Canadian firm, the Dee and Cee Toy Co., has realized this and is to a fair way to cash in on this kind of preference for foreign features. It is now organizing the export of its Canadian-made dolls to Japan where it has found a ready-made demand for Caucasian - style beauty. Incomes and living standards are rising in Japan, and the foreign dolls are sold to have for the Japanese, some of the status value which the baby talk sale of French perfumes and English china in Canada.

The deal for distribution in Japan, it is reported in Financial Post, is being made in develop when a Japanese businessman, on a buying trip to New York, came to the Toy Fair Toronto to investigate the Canadian toy industry; this baby talk made it easier to do business with him was the recent lowering of the Canadian tariff of the Canadian dollar; it made Japanese money cheaper in Canada than it would in the United States.

Whether or not export effort is a refreshing change from all the weeping and wailing that has been done about Japanese imports. One way to deal with competition is to take a choke it off, and the other way is to compete harder ourselves.

THE PACKSACK

I was astonished yesterday to see a pair of twins in a costly double perambulator, each with one of those rubber teats on it that we used to call "comforters," stuck in their mouths. It was customary to shoo the flies off the comfort before inserting it in the baby's mouth.

Seventh Largest Congress Union Is Expelled

PORTSMOUTH (CP) — Britain's Trades Union Congress ended three years of soul-searching yesterday and established the Communist-controlled Electrical Trades Union from the Labor movement's fold.

The ETU, seventh largest union in the Congress, was expelled by a 10-to-1 majority for failing to comply with TUC demands that it should clean up its affairs.

Expulsion of a union is a drastic measure for the British congress. Since it was founded in 1868 it has always maintained a policy of preserving labor unity at all costs.

The move came after persistent public criticism of the ETU. This was brought to a head in a recent high court judgment that found members of the union executive guilty of ballot-rigging in ETU elections.

CAN RETURN

The TUC's general council has announced that the union can return from the wilderness when its Communist leaders obey some of the instructions contained in the TUC ultimatum which followed the court case.

An alternative to this would be a victory for the union's anti-Communists in the vital executive election to be held next month.

The basis of the charge against the ETU is that some of its leaders have fraudulently conspired to keep the union's executive under Communist control.

In a crisp, 45-minute speech he accused the electricians' union of being "ambiguous, contradictory and evasive" in its dealings with the congress. He emphasized that expulsion was not the result of a Communist witch-hunt.

ENGAGED IN FRAUD

"We are not criticizing men because they are Communists but because they were engaged in fraud," Woodcock said. "You have got to deal with it. You are the conscience of the British trade union movement."

Frank Foulkes, Communist president of the ETU, said expulsion was unfair because the union is still in the process of appealing the high court decision.

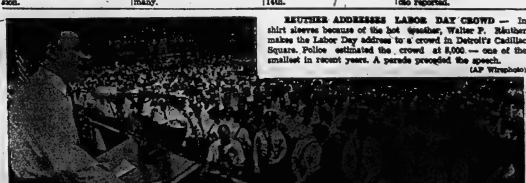
Sir Winston Did Not Fall, Only Stumbled

LONDON (Reuters)—Sir Winston Churchill, 88, arrived home last night from a Riviera vacation with his secretary, Anthony Montague-Brown, who insisted that Churchill merely stumbled — but did not fall — while descending a ramp at Nice Airport.



Montague-Brown said reports that Churchill fell as he prepared to mount the gangway to the French Caravelle jet liner were "nonsense."

The secretary's statement was supported by passengers. One said: "there seemed to be nothing wrong at all."

After the mishap at the foot of the gangway, Churchill regained his stance immediately and smilingly turned to wave at local officials.

Five Little Rock Schools to Take Negro Students

LITTLE ROCK (AP)—Four years after the first school was integrated under the protection of federal troops, Little Rock today is integrating a fourth racial high school and four junior high school with no disorder reported.

As a precautionary measure, police will stand guard at a total of 46 Negroes enter the schools, but officials say there is no indication of recurrence of trouble such as marked the integration of Central High School in 1957, Governor Orval Faubus called out the state militia to block integration and federal troops were sent into enforce it.

Faubus closed the schools in 1958, and police broke up a demonstration in 1959. There was no disorder last year.

Also during the week, public schools will be integrated for the first time in Dallas and Houston, Tex.

Police measures similar to those that accomplished orderly desegregation of four Atlanta high schools last week, will be in effect in New Orleans where angry demonstrators marched admission of four Negro girls to two elementary schools last year.

These schools, which were largely boycotted by white students last year, will reopen on a desegregated basis Thursday. Fewer than 10 Negroes will be admitted to four other white schools at a later date as yet not disclosed.

No trouble is anticipated in Florida as Miami desegregates nine more schools and two Negro girls begin attending school with white children in Daytona Beach today.

Man and Woman Swim Channel

CALAIS, France Reuters — There was a flurry of channel swims here today and two men began driving an amphibious car across to England.

Monique Berrut, a 27-year-old Spanish woman, stepped ashore here at 1:48 a.m. after coming from Dover, England, in 16 hours and 35 minutes. In 1956 she swam successfully from Calais to Douvres.

Nilindra Ray, a 31-year-old Indian from Calcutta, made the crossing in the other direction in 19 hours. He was the first man to do it this season, although four women have done it.

Irish vegetarian Jack MacClelland and Australia swimmer Carlee Larriera meanwhile failed to make a similar crossing despite doses of grape juice and glucose. MacClelland gave up after two hours and Larriera quit after four.

The German, who started out at the same time as the Spanish lady, was only a quarter of a mile away from the French shore when he was forced to quit.

Weddings

RICHARDS—COLE

FRANKFORD — A pretty wedding was solemnized in the Frankford United Church on Saturday, August 12th, at 2.30 p.m., when Pearl Ida Cole of Trenton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Cole of Wooler, and Howard Lester Richards, R.R. 1 Frankford, son of Mrs. Lester Richards and the late Mr. Lester Richards, were united in marriage. The Rev. Charles Judd of Frankford officiated at the double-ring ceremony and Mrs. Sidney Martin rendered the traditional wedding music.

The bride was charming in a light blue silk shantung street-length jacket dress, with portrait collar and a lace bodice, and wore matching accessories. She carried a purse corsage of baby pink roses and wore the gift of the bridegroom, blue rhinestone jewellery.

The bride's only attendant was her sister, Mrs. Harold (Helen) Ireland, who chose a gold-tone jacket dress with guipure lace trim and mink-brown accessories. Her corsage was bronze-shaded roses.

The bride's gift to her attendant and organist were beaded evening bags, to the bridegroom gold cuff-links and tie-pin set.

Mr. Harold Ireland of Hilton brother-in-law of the bride, acted as groomsman. Ushers were Mr. Keith Richards of Belleville and Mr. Carl Richards of Frankford, sons of the bridegroom.

The bridegroom's gift to the groomsman was a vanity case set.

The reception for about 50 guests was held at Maple Inn, Bloomfield. The toast to the bride was proposed by Mr. George Greene of Trenton and responded to by the bridegroom. During the dinner a telegram was received from friends of the bride who were holidaying at Vancouver, B.C.

The happy couple left immediately following the reception on a tour by way of Sudbury and Sault Ste. Marie, crossing at Mackinac Bridge into Michigan, returning via Port Huron and Sarnia.

Prior to the marriage, the bride, who is a teacher on the Trenton Public School staff, was honored with a shower at the home of Mrs. George Greene, Coleman Drive, Trenton. Among the gifts received was a chrome canister set and dispenser.

Following her marriage, friends of the bride in Brighton, where she had taught previously, entertained her at a shower at the home of Mrs. Norman Cheer, presenting her with a bone-handled carving set.

MacDOUGALL — GILL

A lovely double-ring wedding was solemnized at 4 p.m. on August 26, 1961, at the home of the bride's parent, when Elizabeth Ann Gill, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Donald J. Gill, Belleville, became the bride of Ewen Edward MacDougall, son of Mrs. Ewen MacDougall and the late Rev. Ewen MacDougall of Charlottetown, P.E.I. The Rev. Norman Hutchinson of St. Columbs Presbyterian Church officiated at the service. A large basket of white and pink gladioli were placed before the fireplace. An altar was set up and decorated with gleaming white candles, white carnations and pink rosebuds.

Mrs. Mac'Oliviero, Belleville, presided at the organ. The bride descended the stairs on the arm of her father to the strains of "O Perfect Love." The hymns, "The Lord Is My Shepherd" and "He Leadeth Me," were sung by the guests.

The bride was radiant in her floor-length gown featuring a bodice of white Alencon lace with skirt of organza over white taffeta. The long sleeves ended in lily points over the wrists. Her headdress was an arrolet of pearl flowers and a finger-tip veil of illusion tulle. She carried a cascade of pink Sweetheart roses and stephanotis. She wore a sterling silver chain with a black diamond drop, the gift of the bridegroom.

Miss Susan MacDonell, Buffalo, N.Y., a cousin of the bride, was maid of honor. She wore a waltz-length gown of apricot chiffon with a tango sash. Her headdress was a tango Dior bow and she wore matching shoes. She carried a crescent of white carnations.

Mr. Ralph Dunning, Ottawa, brother-in-law of the bridegroom was best man.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held in the garden. The bride's table was prettily appointed with white damask and centred by a two-tier wedding cake, topped by two doves holding wedding rings.

The bride's mother received the guests, wearing a sheath of blue silk with matching shoes, white hat and gloves. She chose a corsage of red roses.

Says Women Buy Cheap Furniture

VANCOUVER (CP)—A home-planning expert says Canadian women have lost their sense of values in furnishing their homes.

Alan Campaigne, home planning editor of Chatelaine Magazine, said in a speech at the opening of a model Chatelaine "Home '61" in West Vancouver it is apparent "that the average Canadian woman cannot see the value in buying good furniture."

"They are reluctant to spend much money in the furnishing of their home, which becomes obvious when I visit the average home," he said. "The booming success of the discount store also supports this.

"Furniture from discount stores is cheap in construction and design. It is in bad taste. Why are women satisfied with this cheap furniture? I believe the answer to this is that somewhere we have lost our sense of values."

When families bought a new car it 'had to have the latest equipment and price-wise the sky was the limit. Cars were replaced every two or three years. But a good sofa would last a lifetime.

"A well - designed piece of furniture may be likened to a work of art. It is timeless. It is something we will never tire of.

"The time is definitely overdue when we must have an upgrading in the purchasing and decorating of our homes."

Mr. and Mrs. Karl Sine Celebrate 50th Anniversary

The hall was tastefully decorated with baskets of gladioli and asters. The linen covered tea table was centred with a three-tier anniversary cake beautifully decorated for the occasion. Presiding at the tea-table were Mrs. Frank Potts, Campbellford, Mrs. Alex Milne, Campbellford, Mrs. Mildred Hagerman, Stirling, Mrs. William Wannamaker, Colborne; Mrs. William Donald, Stirling; Mrs. George Haggerty, Stirling; Mrs. Edith Haggerty, Stirling and Mrs. Gladys Elliott, Stirling.

Plaids That Flip Lads Style for Teen-Age Girls

WINNIPEG (CP) — "Plaids that flip the lads; mile-stashes is ready"—that's the word this fall for teen-age girls who want to be in style.

Commentator Ardith Paxton, a teen-ager herself, is telling 1,000 young ladies all about it at the teen fashion shows at a Winnipeg department store.

Among those at a recent showing were Jan Carter from Yorkton, Sask., Flin Flon and Thompson in Manitoba and from the Ontario centres of Atikokan, Elliot Lake and Sarnia.

The girls were representatives of newly - formed teen fashion councils in their home towns. Back home they will help on genuine fashion shows as well as doing some commentating and modelling.

The A-line, featured in adult fashions, is being promoted for the youthful crowd. It flows outward from the shoulder or waist in panels and flounces that are always controlled but definite.

The models displayed the new leading color, glowing magenta. There were also shades of cool green, spicy brown, high-toned golds, blue and pink.

Plaids and stripes were sometimes combined in one costume, the plaids ranging through big windowpane, shadow, checked and other patterns.

The traditionally popular knife-pleated skirt gets a after style — the flat - pleated skirt. Bold, fine-sewn with ballsy sweaters that have saucer collars and shorter sleeves.

A smart school outfit was a slate grey skirt topped with a blouse in magenta, pink and grey. Over this was a double-breasted velvet blazer in pink.

Dresses for fun and dates after school were mainly underslated shirtwaists and two-piece ensembles with blouses tops that were collarless, loose-fitting and barely hip-length.

MAIL CALL

Question — My daughter is to be married in such a whirl over wedding arrangements that I'm afraid she'll never get all her thank-you notes written before the wedding. Could I acknowledge some of the gifts for her? Or can she finish them up after her wedding trip? They'll be away for two weeks. — Mrs. L. M., Newark, N.J.

Answer — The bride should always write her own notes, so no help from mother, please. Thank-you notes should be in the mail within three weeks at a month, at most, after the wedding, so any remaining notes can be penned when the returns from her trip.

Question — I was shocked to arrive at a party the other night and discovered that the child in the family was in bed with measles. The mother said the child was recovering, so she felt there was no reason to call off the party. Was it proper to expose others to the possibility of contagion? — M. N., Bayside, N.Y.

Answer — As long as there was an fever and the spots were fading, the danger of contagion was past. Since the mother said the child was recovering, this probably was the case. It would have been unfair, though, to ask the guests that the youngsters and the measles and to have given them a chance to beg off if they so desired.

Women's Institutes

MELBOURNE W.I.

MELBOURNE — Mrs. A. Long opened her spacious home for the August meeting of Melbourne W.I. and 36 ladies availed themselves of the privilege of attending.

In the absence of the president, the 1st vice-president, Mrs. M. Lasker, presided for the opening exercises and the business period, during which time the secretary, Mrs. R. McLaren, reported on the bus trip to Upper Canada Village in July. Mrs. D. McLaren and Mrs. T. Howard were appointed leaders of the girls' club, whose project is "Bedroom Accessories." The members are deeply appreciative of the splendid work these ladies are doing.

The "Stationery Course," which was recently applied for, will be held in February, 1962. Mrs. G. McCreary gave an up-to-date report of the plans for entering at the Flowing Match, and a committee of Mrs. W. Embury, Mrs. J. McLaren, Mrs. N. Clarke and Mrs. D. Thompson, was appointed to arrange details for the institute.

It was decided to enter a display, "Let's Prepare for Christmas in September," at Shannonville Fair and Mrs. L. McLaren kindly offered to arrange same if articles are left at her home.

At this stage, Mrs. J. Sherman took charge of the following program, which had been prepared by Mrs. G. Stratton, convener of home economics and health. Community singing was enjoyed by all, after which Mrs. J. McLaren gave a reading, "Her Hat was the Craziest Read Over Her Head," which, in an amusing way, compared persons of 1913 with those of today.

Mrs. O. Stratton gave the topic, which emphasized the fact that if one gets anywhere in life one must work for it. "Don't envy others, add up to what you had when you started and you'll conclude that you never would do it alone; a good wife and family and good friends all played their part. We remember too easily the ones we helped. What we must keep asking is, 'Who carried us all those years?'"

Mrs. Genge's followed with an interesting summary on "Survey of Farm Accidents," after which Mrs. Sherman gave a reading on "Poison Control" and emphasized the great importance of keeping poisons in proper containers and out of reach of children. A jumbled word contest on streets in Belleville was won by Mrs. S. Demille.

The meeting closed and refreshments were served by the lunch committee.

The Giant Cloche

By TRACY ADRIAN

Prophetic of fall's silhouette is this enormous new cloche designed by Halston. It features a deep lampshade brim and a tall, rounded crown.

Made of grey velours, it has a sueded belting waistline trim which is toned to match the color of the hat.

THE FAMILY COUNCIL

Mr. N. A. — He shouldn't tie up with a man whose reputation is spotty.

Harvey Z. — I'll be in charge. It's only his money that's involved.

* * *

Mr. N. A. — My son-in-law has approached me with a proposition to launch him in a new business venture. If I lend him one-fourth of the capital, a man he knows will put up the other three-fourths and make him a fifty-fifty partner. According to Harvey, the project is a sound one in a stable field.

The fly in the ointment, however, is that his associate has an unsavory reputation in the business world. His word is not his bond; his promises are not to be relied upon. To him, little white lies in business are flat — just laughing matters.

* * *

Harvey Z. — Newton, my father-in-law, doesn't understand that this friend of mine would be very much in the background of the business. Not even his name would appear on the letterheads or in our ads. I'd be the one to run the business and make decisions. That's what he wants me for. He respects my experience as well as my unblemished record.

I've made it clear to my prospective partner that I'll insist on the highest business ethics in our operation. I expect him to abide by them. They were conduct I set.

This is the sort of break a man looks forward to — being set up as the boss of a business he knows inside and out. It's my big chance. Newton should not throw cold water on it.

* * *

The Council — Call it the grapevine, southeast, lowdown or whatever, Harvey; every one of you knows one must be wary of the investiture of a method of keeping it alive — indeed, growing — for years and years.

Seeds of the tender salad greens are mechanically sprayed into small plastic containers packed with sterilized peat moss.

After four days' growth in greenhouses, the packaged crate is shipped by refrigerated truck and boat. Refrigeration inhibits growth in transit, but the crate resumes growth when brought into warm air.

Famed Mustard 'n' Cress Now Ready for Distribution

MONTREAL (CP)—The first consignment in Canada of Britain's famed "mustard 'n' cress" has arrived in Montreal for shipment to stores across the country.

Its export was made possible by the invention of a method of keeping it alive—indeed, growing—for days and days.

After four days' growth in greenhouses, the packaged crate is shipped by refrigerated truck and boat. Refrigeration inhibits growth in transit, but the crate resumes growth when brought into warm air.

Britishers' affection for "mustard 'n' cress" is tied up with tradition as much as taste, since most school children's first biology lesson consists of cultivating the seeds on damp blotting paper and watching them germinate and sprout.

During the strict food rationing of the last war, the British government made cress a compulsory crop and householders were issued with instructions on how to use it in cooked foods and salads to ward off the dangers of malnutrition.

It is particularly good in sandwiches and enlivens the flavor of egg, ham, cheese and fish fillings. It can be used to garnish almost any dish.

Varied Carried Lunches

By Mary Moore

Even missing kindergarten is an important operation these days. In the spring of the year that you plan to start your child to school in the fall you register him at his local school, birth certificate in hand. During the late summer he has to have a medical exam. Then comes the big day (today) when he embarks on his life at school.

I am the grandmother of a little kindergartner as of today. He is a city boy and can walk the two blocks home for lunch but the majority of Canadian school children, from grade One on, I am told, eat their lunches at school and most of these are carried.

Since lunch comprises ¼ of a day's food consumption the food that goes into these carried lunches for active little people is of vital importance. It must not be a package of white bread. Proteins and bulk foods are imperative for growing children.

Old adages such as "Better-nurtured is better-natured" and "You cannot fill the mind when the stomach is empty" are still true.

So if you are a lunch packer take your job seriously.

paper or saran wrap; whole banana; cup custard; cookie; milk.

3) Vegetable soup (vacuum); buttered date bran muffin; 2" piece of process cheese; cole slaw in covered plastic container; ½ cantaloupe (well wrapped) or banana; oatmeal cookie; milk.

A good sandwich spread to fall back on when all else is gone is this

SAVORY SANDWICH SPREAD

This will keep for weeks in the refrigerator.

Four eggs, ¼ pound of butter or margarine, 2 tablespoons mustard, ½ teaspoon salt, ¾ cup vinegar, ½ cup granulated sugar, 1 tin or Hamilton (2 oz 3 oz.), ½ small onion, 2 sweet green peppers, ½ pound (1 cup) grated cheese. Cook the first 6 ingredients in a double boiler until thick. Then add the pimentoes, onion and pepper, which have been put through meat chopper, and the grated cheese. Cook again until the cheese is melted. Put in jelly glasses and seal. Store in refrigerator.

TUESDAY

SUGGESTED LUNCH BOX MENUS

1) Peeled hard-cooked egg, in wax paper or saran wrap; cheese and olive sandwich on whole wheat bread; celery apple or peach or pear (in season); thermos bottle).

2) Cream of tomato soup (low vacuum with open mouth which you must hold the same things precious, above all else. These two don't.

Every day the newspapers carry accounts of the difficulties husband men get into, dragged down by an unbending grasping associate. One feels sorry for them. They were caught in a net too fast to get out. But Harvey's eyes are wide-open. If he walks into the adult's parlor, it will be deliberate. Getting out will be his lonely problem.

Mr. Z. would be a millstone around Harvey's neck. His father-in-law is right to throw cold water behind the suggestion.

Successful Living

Threat to Disinherit

DORIS CLARK

DEAR DORIS:—My grandfather was an early settler in Western Canada who made his money in wheat. The third generation is still enjoying the benefits of his fortune. Sometimes I wish they weren't, even if it has meant a nice life for me, with pretty clothes, interesting holidays and so on.

Because now I am going with a grand boy, my aunt (who raised me) does not approve of, all on account of his so-called poor background. He went to high school with me but left in the middle of third year to work in a radio store as repair man. My aunt says that I will not have any of her money if I become serious with him. Is this fair?—MAM.

* * *

DEAR MAM:—Your aunt has a point — but she makes it tough for you to separate the chaff from the wheat.

Her gold standard is wrong and confuses the issue. But if poor background includes a difference in outlook in education, in serious interests, the argument deserves attention. However, could be your radio man is headed for an interesting life and a fortune to match your grandfather's.

Try to keep detached enough to make your own decision, by playing the field for a while.

* * *

DEAR DORIS:—I think it is high time someone wrote about people who visit and bring along their pets without so much as by your leave.

My grandmother has a pet dog which she fondles all the time, with the result that the dog jumps with utter abandon of anyone who happens to be in the same room. She always brings him.

I like dogs but that doesn't include entertaining them, or cats or other pets, when I invite a friend to dinner. I had another guest turn up at a dinner party the other night with a baby kitten in a basket. He was quite surprised when I asked him to put the kitten in the basement instead of in the dining room while the rest of us ate our dinner.

If it's youngsters, now, even if they're spoiled I'll take them on and make them welcome for their parents' sake.—SALLY H.

* * *

DEAR SALLY H.:—Agreed. A dinner invitation does not include pets unless this is stipulated or thoroughly understood.

Guests give a hostess more work and often much anxiety they are not aware of when they bring along their pet. He belongs in his own back yard.

* * *

DEAR DORIS:—I would appreciate so much if you could give me information as to where I could take a course or attend classes where they train telephone operators, cashiers, filing clerks, or perhaps fancy salad and sandwich making.—LENNA.

DEAR LENNA:—Telephone companies train operators for work on switchboards of local firms. Some business colleges and technical schools will train cashiers or filing clerks in special classes or at night school.

Fancy salad and sandwich making is part of a home economics course and may be obtainable at your technical school. Local branches of the Y.W.C.A. have Adult Education classes, and points they know one group beginning hours into this fancy sandwich making this fall. Try them in autumn.

But first I would suggest a visit to the Special Placements Branch of your National Employment Service, where you can get help in deciding which occupation is right for you and in locating training.

* * *

DEAR DORIS:—I have been married for nine years, and we have two nice children ages eight and five. Two weeks ago my wife left me with the children and went away with another man, a woman-chaser, who likes women with money. When the money is finished he kicks them out.

My wife is young, and she fell for him, but I want her to know that we are still waiting for her. My one child is ill and I have to nurse her because there is nobody to help.—PHILIP.

* * *

DEAR PHILIP:—If things are really what they seem to you, your wife will be back, sadder and wiser. "Two nice children" — means they have had the care of two nice parents for several years. When the glamor of her amour wears off, let's hope your child-wife will begin to miss her little ones.

Meanwhile, your child care agency can help you cope. Get in touch with your Children's Aid Society, 53 West Moira Street, Belleville.

Steamships Provided Base For Molson Fortune, Money Turned Into Many Breweries

by GERRY McNEIL
Canadian Press Staff Writer

MONTREAL (CP)—The cyclopean walking beam breathed near the walls of old Montreal.

"Archaeologists can easily locate the spot as the brewery is still there," wrote Stephen Leacock.

The big Molson brewery in Montreal—still the hub of the family's interests—now belches out 1,500,000 gallons of beer and ale annually.

Molson's moved outside Montreal in the 1950s, building a 300,000-barrel brewery in Toronto.

The company took over breweries in Regina, Prince Albert, Sask., Edmonton, Lethbridge, Alta., and Vancouver in 1958, and the Fort Gary Brewery Limited in Winnipeg in 1960.

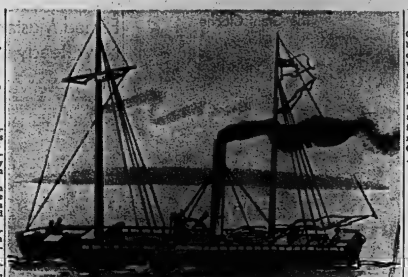
Production in 1786 was about four hogsheads weekly—a mere hiccup alongside today's volume but enough to satisfy the ale-loving British soldiers and settlers who couldn't reconcile themselves to French wine or Yankee rum.

BUILT RAILROAD

Molson poured his profits back into the brewery and his retailers nature goaded him into sidelines — lumbering, banking and finally steamboats.

Though the Accommodation lost money, the Swiftsure grossed about $150,000 in six years of operation and later Molson steamships did even better despite competition which started in 1816.

The last enterprise financed and spurred by John Molson was a railroad—the Champlain and St. Lawrence. It was Canada's first and ran along 14½ miles of wooden rails topped by strips of iron.



It's main purpose was to portage freight on St. John to Montreal.

John Molson died a few months before the first official run July 21, 1836. He was 71.

He considered himself a brewmaster to the end.

"My principal objective is to bring the quality of my brew to perfection," he once wrote.

Whether he and the four generations that followed him achieved that end is still a subject of debate in Canadian taverns 175 years later.

FIRST CANADIAN STEAMBOAT — The Accomodation was the first steamboat to operate in Canada and the third in North America. Launched in Montreal in 1809, the 85-foot vessel made the trip from Montreal to Quebec in 36 hours. Its operation lost money for owner John Molson, founder of Molson's Brewery, but was the forerunner of a fleet that led to a profitable shipping business. (CP Photo).

WILL IGNORE TREATY

FULDA, Germany (AP)—Germany's senior Catholic bishop, Josef Cardinal Frings of Cologne, said Friday the Vatican will ignore any separate Soviet peace treaty with East Germany. He said the Vatican would neither recognize such a treaty nor change any diocesan boundaries to conform to it. A number of German dioceses span the iron Curtain border.

NOT SO HEAVY

LONDON (CP)—A recent government survey has some of the weight off Londoners' minds. It reported the blanket of smoke over the city is thinning out. Ten years ago there were 300,000 tons of it in the air. Now it weighs only 2,000,000 tons.

CREDITED WITH SWAP — Air Marshal Hugh Campbell, chief of air staff since 1957, is credited with originating the idea of a Canada-United States plane swap in order to re-equip the RCAF with the American Voodoo jet interceptor. A native of Salisbury, N.B., Air Marshal Campbell, 53, is a graduate of the University of New Brunswick. (CP from National Defence).

Air Marshal Hugh Campbell Held in High Esteem by Staff

By DAVE McINTOSH
Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA (CP)—Under the regime of Air Marshal Hugh Campbell, chief of air staff since 1957, the RCAF, it might appear, has replaced the navy as the "silent service."

Air Marshal Campbell never seems to venture into the public speeches he carefully rephrases air policies and programs long since announced by the government.

In winning recently, for instance, he said in a speech that the RCAF air division in Europe, which is formerly commanded, would change its role from high-level interception to low-level interdiction.

At last, some reporters thought, a new policy statement by the chief of air staff. But it had all been announced by the government in 1959.

Air Marshal Campbell is not running in any public popularity contest. But where it counts—in the RCAF itself—he has probably accomplished more than any other chief of air staff, at least in peacetime.

The air force today is better equipped than it ever has been. This, by itself, would make the chief of staff popular in the service, but the esteem in which he is held rests on more than that.

HURT IN CRASH

Here are a couple of examples:

In 1952, the year he became commander of the air division, Air Marshal Campbell was in a bad crash of a light transport plane near Zwettbruecken, West Germany.

He suffered a serious back injury and later had to be taken to hospital. But he refused to leave the scene until all other passengers and the crew had been looked after.

Another time in Europe, he and his wife were his headquarters and drive to the airport to welcome a very senior general. To the horror of his aides, his staff car wouldn't start. With a grin a mile wide, Air Marshal Campbell climbed into the cab of a truck for the airport journey.

The 53-year-old native of Salisbury, N.B., graduated from the University of New Brunswick with an electrical engineering degree. He joined the RCAF in 1931 and has devoted his entire adult life to its advancement.

GOT NEW PLANES

Judging by his accomplishments in the last four years, Air Marshal Campbell must also hold a degree in how to make friends and influence governments. His powers of persuasion are confined, of course, to the very non-public chiefs of staff committee and cabinet defence committee.

It is the prime job of a chief of staff to obtain the best possible equipment for his service.

In 1959, after cancellation of the Arrow interceptor, Air Marshal Campbell went to work on getting new aircraft for the RCAF air division in Europe.

More than one of his staff thought he was off his rocker. They held the government would never re-equip an air force built to formerly commanded, would change its role from high-level interception to low-level interdiction.

At last, some reporters thought, a new policy statement by the chief of air staff. But it had all been announced by the government in 1959.

ers, they would choose the Steelworkers.

This statement drew an ovation.

Mine-Mill was expelled from the old Canadian Congress of Labor in 1956, technically because of a jurisdictional dispute with the Steelworkers but basically because of Communist influence.

Following last weekend's violence, which was ousted by reading of the Hird Act, Mine-Mill's national office signed a mutual aid agreement with the Independent Teamsters Union.

A petition was circulated Sunday night asking for the removal of national president Ken Smith for signing the pact.

Saturday's meeting accused two dissident local chiefs of "disruption and raiding."

Anyone who attacks the agreement with the teamsters "is attacking the most fundamental principal of trade unionism—that in unity there is strength," Smith said.

Smith was commenting on a telegram sent to him Friday by James Babirad, president of the Port Colborne local, asking him to "step down and stand trial on charges of conspiring to create Mine-Mill members' ship to the Teamsters."

Cold War Only One of Many Issues in Brazilian Crisis, Army Opposes Goulart

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The military traditionally plays a key role in Brazilian politics, but this is only part of the explanation behind the current presidential crisis in the country with nearly half the area and population of South America.

It is not only a struggle of military against civilian. Involved also is a fight pitting anti-Communists against Communists and other leftist forces in Brazil's long-standing history of regional politics is another factor.

Personalities almost unknown outside Brazil have come across the stage in the drama of this country with its great potential for riches, afflicted with poverty, inflation and economic chaos.

In the last week the spotlight has focused mainly on Joao (Jango) Goulart, the vice-president under Janio Quadros, whose sudden resignation from the presidency after serving seven months set off the crisis.

Brazil's three military chiefs — War Minister Marshal Odylio Denys, Navy Minister Vice-Admiral Silvio Heck and Air Minister Brig. Gabriel Grum Moss —opposed Goulart's advance to the presidency on the grounds he is pro-Communist.

Goulart says he is no Communist. But he has a reputation as a tough leftist who hates U.S. capitalism. Although a wealthy rancher, he is the leader of the Brazilian labor class.

Much of his strength is based on two factors—he is from the state of Rio Grande do Sul in the south, and he is the indirect heir political heir of dictator Getulio Vargas, who committed suicide in 1954. Vargas also came from Rio Grande do Sul.

For a long time that state was the centre of a powerful faction and had no great influence in federal politics. Prior to 1930, political bosses in the big states of Sao Paulo and Minas Gerais virtually ruled Brazil, passing the presidency back and forth in succeeding elections.

But in 1930 Sao Paulo politicians upset the applecart by successfully putting up a Sao Paulo man to succeed a Sao Paulo man. Vargas claimed Brazil. He and his supporters started a successful civil war from Rio Grande do Sul.

While Vargas ruled, the politicians from Rio Grande do Sul never had it so good. Most of from that area want someone from their state in the executive chair again—regardless of any taste of right against left.

Why did Quadros resign?

He quit in the heat of a clash with former supporters over his independent foreign policy. It is generally believed he became incensed over opposition among close friends who felt he was going too far in a leftist policy that warmed up to the Soviet Union, Cuba and the Communist satellites.

In elections last year Quadros proved himself the greatest vote-getter in Brazil's history. There was some, speculation that he might quarrel with the law of riding back to office quickly with a popular vote and that the powers increased by public mandate.

Predicts Small Cars Will Soon Be Obsolete

OSHAWA (CP)—R. S. (Sam) McLaughlin, approaching his 90th birthday but still active as chairman of the board of General Motors of Canada, predicts that small cars will soon be obsolete.

In 1907 Sam McLaughlin made another prediction. He turned out a motor car in Oshawa—he McLaughlin — and said he'd make a fortune. The big manufacturers laughed.

But Sam McLaughlin made his fortune.

In 1918 he sold the business to General Motors and took over as Canadian president. Fifteen years ago a severe illness forced him to quit. But he found he couldn't stay away from the office so he became chairman of the board.

He still puts in six hours a day at his desk in his spare time he fishes or shoots pheasant.

Those who know him say he looks like a man of 70, thumps his chest ("hard as iron") like a man of 30 and talks like a man of 40.

"Never felt better in my life," he said.

"And if I were a young man again I'd go straight back into the motor industry—there's a marvelous future ahead."

'Almost Sure' Youth Innocent

MONTREAL (CP) — Quebec Provincial Police are "almost sure" Gilles Frenette of Cap de la Madeleine, Que., arrested in Toronto on a charge of car theft, had nothing to do with the disappearance of Denise Therrien, 1mp. Jean Gaghler said Sunday.

Frenette, 19, was arrested last Friday and questioned by two OPP officers following speculation that the Shawinigan, Que., girl might have run away with him.

Denise, 16, has been missing since Aug. 8 when she went to meet a man who had advertised for a baby sitter.

Insp. Gaghler said police checked the car Frenette was driving for photographs of the missing teen - ager but found none.

"We found a lot of photographs," he said, "but there were none of the missing girl."

Shawinigan, Denise's father, Henri Therrien, said the family had never heard of Frenette before reading his name in the newspapers.

"I don't believe my daughter would know him either," Mr. Therrien said. "All this business about Frenette and Dentse eloping is silly."

Frenette, and Gerald Bergeron, 19, of Montreal will face car theft charges. A Toronto man was released. The three were arrested here Friday by a police cadet who recognized a stolen car.

A charge against the three of possessing a stolen car was dismissed Saturday.

SUSPECTS CAPTURED — Yvon Lalonde of Montreal, one of four suspects in a $185,000 bank robbery at Verdun, Que., is dejectedly after his capture by police at Millbridge Saturday. Arrest of three more men Sunday climaxed a three-day manhunt by Ontario Provincial Police in the Bush area north of Havelock during which shots were exchanged. Lalonde is guarded by Constables Mel Schultz (left), and Bruce Shaw.

Timing of Nuclear Tests Bad From Russian Point of View

By ROD CURRIE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Premier Khrushchev's decision to resume nuclear tests, reveals the question of whether he is preparing for a spectacular show of might or has made a colossal blunder.

It is early unbelievable to Western observers that he could not have foreseen the unfavorable effect his announcement would have on world opinion.

The timing was particularly bad from the Russian point of view, coming as it did when the so-called uncommitted nations were in session at Belgrade. A result was that for the first time most of, there nations appeared to veer to the side of the West.

If Khrushchev was willing to throw away many of the diplomatic advantages he has gained lately in the eyes of the neutrals, it gives strength to the theory that he's planning a demonstration to show Russia has achieved supremacy in nuclear arms.

It seems unlikely he would show such open contempt for world opinion simply to continue normal experiments or less, in fact, he did make a serious miscalculation on the degree of bitterness his decision would make such a miscalculation appears to Western observers to be highly unlikely.

It may be that the Russian leader has reached the conclusion that it is better to impress the neutrals by brute force rather than woo their support in his cold war with the West.

Whatever the Russian leaders thinking may be, many see his action as offering a fine opportunity for the West — particularly the United States—to turn it to their own benefit.

The Observer, a London Sunday newspaper, comments:

"Only one thing could now dissipate this advantage — an American decision to follow Khrushchev's lead on nuclear tests."

The paper also suggests that Kennedy do even more and announce that the U.S. will not resume the race and will devote the money saved to help the underdeveloped nations.

Unless Khrushchev still has an ace up his sleeve, it would seem he has paid highly in the field of diplomacy for any nuclear prestige he might gain.

Five Injured In Ship Fire At Sarnia

SARNIA (CP) — A two-hour inferno, touched off by an explosion in a gasoline - laden tanker, sent five men to hospital Monday and burned out the ship's stern section.

Windows around the dock area were shattered and 150 feet of dock splintered by the blast aboard the Imperial Oil tanker Imperial Hamilton. The 2,959-ton ship is 250 feet long.

More than 100 Imperial Oil refinery employees fought the blaze for nearly three hours. The tanker, had just been loaded with 50,000 gallons of gasoline when the fire started with a roar of flames in the engine room.

The fire exploded vapors trapped under the wooden dock, shattering windows in buildings several hundred yards away. A section of nearby control house collapsed.

Three on the ship's engineers were burned and two cooks suffered minor injuries.

SEE BIG DAMAGE

Western diplomats stressed that Moscow's decision to resume testing, and the nuclear blasts in Siberia that followed, made it plain that the Soviet Union is no longer out to woo the non-aligned countries over to Moscow's position on testing.

They said Premier Nikita Khrushchev may instead decide to stage a gigantic nuclear blast to impress upon the world the horrorrecit threats that his nuclear superbomb can be delivered by Soviet rocketry to any spot on the globe.

Some sources say it would be technically feasible for Russia to launch a rocket into a wide orbit around the earth, send it toward the moon, and then set off the nuclear warhead for all the world's wavering states to see.

Three diplomats say the Soviet government may think such a demonstration of rocket power would stampede the non-aligned countries into bringing overwhelming pressure on the Western allies to give the Russians a peace treaty with East Germany and Berlin rather than risk a world - devastating nuclear war.

Majority of CBRT Delegates In Montreal Solidly Behind The New Democratic Party

MONTREAL (CP) — A union local leader's dispute with the national executive may get an airing today at the annual convention of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers (CLC).

The dispute is between Harry Stockwell, former president of the CBRT's Local 26 in Toronto, and President W. J. (Bill) Smith and other top executives of the 35,000-member union.

The debate ended with the convention supporting the national officers' slate of delegates —all dressed in Keily green uniforms—but a union spokesman said Stockwell might be given a chance to present his fight against dismissal from office to the full-convention today.

Stockwell was removed from office in June after a hearing before a three - man board on charges that he violated the union constitution with his vigorous public c a m p a i g n against its leaders for their support of the new Democratic party.

Stockwell said his supporters claim he was unjustly dismissed and were busy handing out broadsheets setting out their views Monday.

The crux of the matter, probably the question of whether the union should give official support to the NDP and there there was little doubt Monday that the majority of the more than 400 delegates are solidly behind it.

They stood to applaud NDP Leader Hazen Argue when he arrived in Saskatchewan as he rose to address them, and stood to cheer once again when he finished his "hard sell" for the party's platform of a planned economy.

The Saskatchewan premier made a straight political speech, sticking almost "exclusively to domestic issues as he urged Canada to mobilize its financial, material and human resources "to make war on poverty, ignorance and disease" as it did to fight tyranny in 1939.

He said the Canadian economy is like an old-fashioned cream separator in which the socialists sit with their mouths at the cream spout and the farmers and laborers "take turns at the skim milk."

"I don't want to steal the separator from the capitalist. I just want to get my hand on the crank so it will produce homogenized milk," Mr. Douglas said.

Speakers at the opening day touched on what are perhaps the twin themes of the convention — politics and the CBRT's bitter battle with the Seafarers' International (Ind.).

National Vice-President Elroy Robson set the tone in the SIU, ejected last year from the Canadian Labor Congress largely as a result of CBRT efforts, as "a disgrace to the union movement" — a union which functions through fear and fear alone . . .

"It rules the seamen with a dictatorship that is hard to believe," Mr. Robson said.

Ernest Secondi, national secretary - treasurer, described the CBRT's activities as organizing workers in fields other than the railways.

Though about 25,000 of its members are still railway employees, the union has moved into trucking, clerical, marine and institutional employment to make a steady decline in the total number of rail workers.

Think That Russia Put Over Space A-Blast in Outer Space

GENEVA (AP)—Western diplomats at the Geneva test ban conference fear Russia may be about to unleash a campaign of nuclear terror in outer space to the world's uncommitted nations.

They said Monday's meeting in the conference left little hope that the Kremlin will accept the U.S.-British proposals by the United States and Britain to ban all nuclear explosions in the atmosphere without any system of control machinery.

Soviet delegate Charles Stelle and Sir Michael Wright of British ambassador Semyon K. Tsarapkin, who represented Russia at the conference, until next Saturday to reply to the Western offer. The implication was the 34-month - long conference would collapse unless Tsarapkin showed some interest in the proposal.

Tsarapkin's initial reply lasted a Soviet rejection. He read into the record the 6,000-word Soviet statement he made last Thursday explaining Moscow's reasons for resuming the nuclear tests. Tsarapkin said the statement) "Tsarapkin will study the Western answer to the statements which were made by the Western powers today."

SEE POLICY CHANGE

Western diplomats stressed that Moscow's decision to resume testing, and the nuclear blasts in Siberia that followed, made it plain that the Soviet Union is no longer out to woo the non-aligned countries over to Moscow's position on testing.

They said Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev may instead decide to stage a gigantic nuclear blast to impress upon the world the horrorrecit threats that his nuclear superbomb can be delivered by Soviet rocketry to any spot on the globe.

Sierra Leone Fears Russia May Veto Move

By DAVID DANCIA
Canadian Press Staff Writer

OXFORD (CP)—Dr. John Karefa - Smart, a lanky African from Sierra Leone who once served in the Canadian Army, will be New York bound this weekend in an effort to make his country the 100th member of the United Nations.

"I'm not so sure we'll make it," Karefa-Smart, the country's external affairs minister of the former British colony, said in Oxford. "You see, the Russians may veto our application."

Karefa-Smart said Sierra's bid to join may be blocked by the East-West conflict over the application of Outer Mongolia and Mauritania.

Karefa-Smart Chairman of the UN Security Council, said: "Under the rules of election, Russia likely will block Mauritania—and probably Sierra Leone.

Karefa-Smart was in the university town to attend an international seminar on world tensions.

STUDIED AT McGILL

Karefa-Smart's contacts with Canada go back to 1940, when as a young man of 25 he began medical studies at McGill University.

During his five years at McGill he achieved the degrees of medical doctor and master in surgery. He also served as a cadet in the Canadian Army Medical Corps and for a while was posted in the Bahamas.

Following his discharge from the Canadian Army, Karefa-Smart went to Harvard University, where he obtained a diploma in public health as final preparation for what was to be a career in public service.

His career in politics started in 1951, when he was elected to Sierra Leone's legislative assembly. That year he led the delegation to London which negotiated the all-African executive council. He was a member of the delegation to the 1960 constitutional talks in London which eventually paved the way to independence.

BITS BEAT HIGH

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The temperature reached 101 degrees in downtown Los Angeles Monday, equalling the all-time high for the date in 1913. What made it bearable was the fact that the humidity was only eight per cent and there was no smog.

Strike Deadline Nears With No Settlement Seen

DETROIT (AP)—The United Auto Workers Union and General Motors go back to the contract bargaining table today amid persistent but unconfirmed reports that GM is planning a new wage and fringe benefits offer.

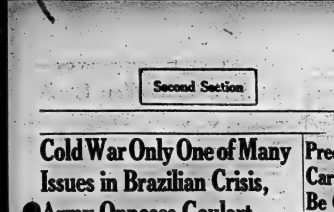
Company spokesmen declined to answer questions speculating on this.

Asked if there had been any indication in six hours of Labor Day bargaining that a new proposal might be in the offing, UAW president Walter Reuther said there "was no change in the economic position of either party" but added it is "always reasonable to expect developments from time to time."

One side or the other must budge or a strike is certain. The strike deadline is 11 a.m. EDT Wednesday. A walkout would make idle 325,000 GM production workers in 71 U.S. cities.

Reuther was standing on his demand that GM give the wage and fringe benefit improvements granted Chrysler and Ford Motors Aug. 26 in a new agreement that they have negotiated. The UAW, however, backtracked on a demand that GM also share profits.

MADE JOINT OFFER



The Big Three — GM, Ford and Chrysler — made a parallel three-year offer five days before the American Motors agreement was announced. GM vice-president Louis Seaton said it would add $1,000 in three years to individual paycheques of GM workers.

Reuther rejected the offer as "woefully inadequate" and the union withdrew Monday its GM workers, instead of gaining $1,000 would lose $89 in three years.

Contracts with the Big Three ran out at midnight but were extended on the last-minute request of the federal mediation and conciliation service to give UAW said, however, it wouldn't work an hour past 11 a.m. Wednesday as GM without a new contract.

POLITICIAN DIES

PERRY, N.Y. (AP)—Joe R. Hanley, 85, Republican lieutenant-governor of New York from 1943 until 1950, died Monday. Hanley, a lawyer and former Methodist minister, spent more than 25 years in public life. He was defeated for the U.S. Senate by Democrat Herbert H. Lehman in 1950 and withdrew from politics.

OFF TO SCHOOL TODAY — For the first time, one young lady, escorted by her anxious mother and canine friend, cross the street under the watchful eye of O.P.P. Constable A. F. Tuelling. To protect all our boys and girls, Ontario's Minister of Transport, H. L. Rowntree has announced a comprehensive program of child traffic safety aimed at parents and children alike. This program will stress the six basic rules of child traffic safety: Look both ways before you cross the street . . . Keep out from between parked cars . . . Ride your bike safely, obey signs and signals . . . Walk, when you leave the curb . . . Play games in a safe place, away from traffic . . . Walk facing traffic where there are no sidewalks. Over 10,000 kits containing posters and instructional material for teachers are being sent to Ontario elementary schools by the Ontario Department of Transport in co-operation with the Ontario Department of Education, and parents are urged to help their children memorize these rules.

Columbus Clinches First Flag

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Columbus Jets clinched their first International League flag since joining the triple-A circuit in 1955 with a 4-2 victory over Richmond Virginians Monday night.

The second - place Charleston Marlins, 7½ games out of first with seven to play, went down fighting as they defeated Jersey City Jerseys in both ends of a doubleheader, 14-5 and 4-0. Buffalo Bisons clobbered Rochester Red Wings 11-4, Toronto and Syracuse split a pair with the Maple Leafs taking the opener 8-2 and the Chiefs grabbing the nightcap 3-0 behind Ted Sadowski.

Richmond starter Fred Klipp set up a pair of two-run rallies with his wildness. A single by Johnny Mahoney, two walks and two wild pitches enabled the Jets to take a 2-1 lead in the fifth. They added the winning margin in the next frame on a hit batsman, a double by Bob Oldis, and a single by Mahoney. Pedro Gonzalez had three of Richmond's seven hits and drove in both runs with a single in the fourth and another in the eighth. Fred Green won his sixth game.

Leroy Gregory slapped out four of Charleston's 10 hits as he coasted to his 13th victory in the opener. Carl Warwick hit a three-run homer for the Marlins, who scored seven times in the fifth inning. Dean Stone tossed a five-hitter in the second game for his 11th triumph.

Injuries Plague N.L. Coaches

NEW YORK (AP) — Veteran fullback Billy Price, hospital of landing a first - string job with Baltimore Colts after five years of waiting, has been added to a growing list of playing National Football Football League coaches.

Price's knee injury, suffered in a 35-34 exhibition loss to Dallas Cowboys Sunday, has forced the Colts to put him on the waiver list and compounds their fullback problem with the season opener less than two weeks away.

The former Oklahoma standout was the No. 1 candidate to replace Alan Ameche, forced to retire due to injuries after breaking Price on the bench for five seasons. Only veteran Joe Perry acquired from San Francisco 49ers, and rookie Mark Smolinski are available at fullback.

It was a tough weekend for fullbacks. Ken Webb, who spells Nick Pietrosante for Detroit Lions, suffered three fractured vertebrae while trying to recover a fumble against St. Louis Cardinals and will be lost a month to six weeks.

CARDS HARD HIT

The Cardinals have also been hampered by quarterback Sam Etcheverry's shoulder trouble. He is just beginning to round into form after missing early exhibition games. The Cards have lost leading ground-gainer John David Crow for a good part of the 1961 campaign with a broken leg.

Among others on the sidelines are halfback Herb Adderley, a No. 1 draft choice with Green Bay Packers, Gene Hickerson, a guard with Cleveland Browns, and Bob Khayat, a fine place - kicker with Washington Redskins.

Adderley broke his collarbone in an exhibition against Chicago Bears. Hickerson probably is lost for the year with a broken leg and Khayat is out for the season due to illness.

The fourth game is in Brampton Wednesday night.

Palmer Nipped in Dallas Open

DALLAS, Tex. (AP) — Home pro Earl Stewart won a glittering stretch duel with Arnold Palmer Monday to win the $30,000 All-Star Open. He had 278 for 72 holes with a one-over-par 71 Monday.

Stewart also had to beat off a mighty finish by Doug Sanders, who blistered the 6,800-yard Oak Cliff Country course for the low round of the tournament—a four-under - par 66.

Gay Brewer, who also was making a great dash for the big money, called a penalty stroke on himself on the 14th hole and wound up with a 67 and a tie for second place at 279 with Palmer and Sanders each won $2,233.

Palmer had a 71 for the day.

Injured Mick Hits Pair Of Homers

NEW YORK (CP)—Mickey Mantle's New York Yankees teammates have nicknamed him B-and G — Blood and Guts.

Mantle, who has a long history of ailments, ran true to his nickname Sunday. Playing when he shouldn't have, Mickey slammed two home runs with guts and both of the American League season—to help the Yankees to an 8-6 triumph over Detroit Tigers.

Mantle strained a muscle in his left forearm while batting Saturday. He stayed to although he could not swing without excruciating pain. In his one remaining time at bat, he hunted for a single.

However, the injury kept Mantle out of the lineup against Washington Senators Monday. The arm stiffened up and he couldn't straighten it.

Manager Ralph Houk left Mantle's game off the programme lineup Sunday but Mickey insisted on playing and told Houk the arm didn't hurt.

"He was a liar," Houk said, "but he told me the truth." Houk said, and told him, "Don't be a hero, stop giving me the bull. The arm's all swollen. I frankly don't see how you can play."

In between his two home runs Mantle struck out twice. Once, when he missed, the bat fell out of his hands.

"He was in pain I guess," said Houk.

Mickey, me more when I missed than when I hit the ball," said Mantle. "I had to cut down on my swings. Those times I struck out, I swung harder than when I hit those homers.

"It's probably the best thing that happened to me. By getting hurt, maybe it'll force me not to swing too hard."

Western Football

Eskimos, Bombers Win

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

The underdogs came close but couldn't hang up to win in Labor Day action in the Western Football Conference.

The undefeated Edmonton Eskimos needed a last-minute field goal by Jackie Parker to preserve their record with a 10-9 win over Calgary Stampeders.

Winnipeg Blue Bombers came from behind in the last quarter on Leo Lewis' second touchdown of the game and edged Saskatchewan Roughriders 17-15.

Edmonton is in first place in the conference race with six straight victories for 12 points. Winnipeg is second with 10 points. Saskatchewan third with four. Calgary fourth with two and British Columbia Lions trail with only one point.

Parker's field goal on the second-last play of the game from about the Calgary 39-yard line hit the cross bar and bounced over.

MISSED CONVERT

Three minutes earlier, rookie Quarterback Jerry Keelan pitched a touchdown pass to end Ernie Warlick to put the Stamps ahead 9-7. The convert, which might have given Calgary a tie, was missed.

The game was essentially a defensive battle. Both clubs made back-to-the-wall stands in the early going, with the Calgary line being especially impressive as it held the powerful Eskimo attack in check.

There was no score for better than 40 minutes before the Eskie George Hanse kicked a field goal to put Calgary ahead.

Johnny Bright belied over-the-hill tag to score Edmonton's touchdown, with Sid Tully kicking the convert, to put the Eskis ahead 7-3 early in the fourth quarter. Then Keeling directed the Stamps in an 86-yard march in 10 plays for their lead touchdown.

LAST SECOND WINS

At Regina, the Riders led 1-0 after the first quarter, 7-3 at the half and 11-0 after three quarters. The Bombers came back in the scoring last second touchdown and Gerry James added the point on a field goal attempt to pull out the victory.

James also kicked a field goal and a convert. Saskatchewan's points came on a touchdown by halfback Ray Smith and a field goal and convert by halfback Ted Whitehouse.

Quarterback Kenny Ploen went all the way at quarterback for the Bombers, while rookie import Mich Thornton handled punting duties in the absence of injured Charlie Shepard.

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By Geo. H. Carver, Sports Editor

HALIFAX — Nostalgia closed in as the crack CNR Ocean Limited eased around the curve of Bedford Basin. A thick fog rolling in from the Atlantic was flattening the smoke spears of industry. Water lapped at the rock-chunked shores of the Basin.

Nostalgic mist bridged the chasm of time. It was near here that a teen-age veteran of world war one had reeled while the TNT-laden lime had tugged gently at her anchor chains. A few hours later she slowly moved toward the narrows where she gave the kiss of death to the steamer Mont Blanc. 1,200 died and over 8,000 were injured in the ghastly holocaust of explosion.

Memory leaped across a gap of twenty years. The Basin was polka-dotted with sturdy freighters loaded to the plimsoll mark, awaiting the hoarse call of sirens to form convoy. Through the narrows and in the outer harbor lay trim destroyers, frigates and corvettes, guardians of the Allied lifeline that stretched across the Atlantic.

Downtown Halifax resembled that fateful December 11, 1917 a few hours before death shrank viciously from a blue clear wintry sky. The streets were crowded with the armed services of the Allies. Peppering the French sailors' berets were the Yankee caps and the flat-back Tam of Canada and Britain. Khaki-clad troops no less bold, eyed uniformed WACS and others of the distaff side of the services.

But this was a new Halifax. Through the closing mist I saw the beautiful arc of the new Angus MacDonald Bridge that links the ancient city with Dartmouth. The train rolled through the north end, that was purged cleanly by the explosion, and through new housing developments.

The Northwest Arm, where once I pulled a "four-oar" for the Jubilee Club, is the same picturesque ribbon with the famous Dingle and Tower — but — progress has dangled up with it. It's beautiful green slopes (followers Settlement) now teems with a bustling Populous. It is purely residential. Across from our old cottage site the "Wagwellie" sat stately and snooty as ever.

Downtown all was bustle and hurry. One eye-catcher is the new Infirmary. The Public Gardens, with its century plant is more beautiful than ever. Proud St. Mary's Basilica thrusts her granite spire links the sky at the corner of Barrington and Spring Garden Road. The old Majestic Theatre has a new name "The Capitol".

Ackers Theatre where Mike McTigue fought "Kid" MacDonald has disappeared. So has the "try" on Hollis-Barrington. Point Pleasant Park is strolled moon-eyed with not a few maidens, is as becoming as ever. The Royal Nova Scotia Yacht Squadron brought back memories of many a race to Bedford Basin as a crew member of the yawl "Vagrant," and Saturday night dances at the Bedford Yacht Club.

The tourist eye-catcher is the new Nova Scotia tartan, a background of blue with varying colors. You can buy glengarries, shirts, blouses, skirts, jackets, etc. in Colwell Brothers shop, a gents furnishing store, I believe I saw one of the shirts with the collar tabbed "Deacon Brothers, Belleville", Local pottery is popular — if you can afford it.

City "shanoozes" probably won't like it, but I was plainly disappointed in today's Halifax. Perhaps I did not expect the Grand Old Lady of the eastern gateway to Canada to keep up with the Jones of progress. Perhaps it is because the last times I saw Halifax she was not dressed in civilian garb.

I remember a proud determined city, stricken to her knees in a World Wars One disaster, rising nobly from her ashes to again stand guard against the foe that lay just outside her gates.

I remember a gay post-war city of the Roaring Twenties that sang "Yes, We Have No Bananas" and danced to the "Darktown Strutters Ball." The "Blenoes" and her gallant skipper and the schooner races. The rumrunners in from St. Pierre et Miquelon for "repairs". The twelve-mile limit off New York and "old rope" at twelve dollars the case.

And I remember Second World War Halifax of 1942-43, Sturdy, grim defiant she nurtured and sent forth those who took the torch from the hands of gallant World War One heroes.

Today's Halifax! The sturdy old deep-rooted oak has sprouted a pattern of progress tendrils dressing herself in modern civilian attire. I guess I am too old-fashioned.

Tigers Trail By Six

By ED WILKS
Associated Press Staff Writer

"If we're as close to the Yankees Sept. 1 as we are now, we'll beat 'em."

It was manager Bob Scheffing talking, appraising Detroit's chances in the American League pennant race a week ago. The surprising, second-place Tigers were hot. They had won 10 of 11, and they were just 1½ games behind New York.

With a three - game, showdown series ahead in New York, Scheffing's remark was a challenge.

Now, a week later, it sounds like a voice from the grave.

It's Sept. 5, the deadline set by Scheffing, and the Yankees lead by six — the biggest bulge of the season in the A. And if the Tigers aren't dead, they're going fast.

After losing all three games in New York, the Tigers dropped their fourth in a row, for their longest slump of the year, at Baltimore Monday, 6-3, and were loafin' 6-1 after eight innings when the second game of the twi - night doubleheader was called because of curfew.

WON FIFTH STRAIGHT

The Yankees, meanwhile, made it five in a row with a 5-3 and 3-2 Labor Day sweep over Washington. Although Mickey Mantle was sidelined by injury and Roger Maris was hitless.

Chicago White Sox split a pair of 2-1 decisions in a day-night doubleheader at Minnesota, Cleveland beat Boston 7-3 and Kansas City divided a doubleheader with Los Angeles, winning 13-7 after the Angels had taken the opener 4-3.

The Yankees, powered by Maris' 24th homer, overpowered the Tigers 7-2 Saturday. Roger's record - shipper ran his season total to 53. He is five games ahead of the pace set by Babe Ruth when he belted a record 60 in 1927.

Mantle blasted two homers as the Yankees defeated the Tigers 8-5 Sunday. He has 30 this season and is tied with Ruth's pace.

In other Saturday engagements, Boston edged Minnesota 2-1, Chicago defeated Washington 12-7, Los Angeles beat Kansas City 6-3 and Cleveland and Baltimore split a twin bill. The Orioles won the opener 3-2 and dropped the second game 6-0.

Boston defeated Minnesota 8-4 Sunday, while Baltimore edged Cleveland 1-0 in 11 innings. Chicago took a doubleheader from Washington 5-4 and 4-1. Los Angeles at Kansas City was rained out.

RELEW LEAD

The Tigers' out - hit Baltimore 9-7 in the first game but blew a 2-0 lead when the Orioles tagged loser Paul Foytack (10-9) for four runs in the fourth inning. Jack Fisher (8-11) was the winner, with relief help.

In the suspended game, to be completed tonight, errors by Rocky Colavito, Bill Bruton and Dick Brown of the Tigers led to the Orioles' first three runs off Ron Kline. Detroit scored off Billy Hoeft in the sixth on a single by Al Kaline and a double by Colavito.

Johnny Blanchard, subbing for Mantle in the Yankee outfield, was 4-for-4 in the opener and broke a 2-2 tie with a home run in the eighth inning off loser Bennie Daniels (5-10). Rookie Hal Reniff (3-0) was the winner with two innings of perfect relief. In the nightcap, Clete Boyer homered for the Yanks' first run and drove in the winning run in the seventh with a sacrifice fly as New York once again came from behind. Bud Daley (10-14) was the winner and Pete Burnside (1-7) the loser.

HAS 29 HOMERS

Mantle also may miss tonight's game because of a strained arm muscle, which prevents him from batting. Maris, with 53 home runs, is five games ahead of Ruth.

Big innings decided each game at Minnesota. The Twins built a 5-0 lead in the opener for Al Schroll (3-3). Harmon Killebrew's 29th home run, off loser Frank Baumann (9-13), and a six - run fourth inning in the nightcap, Roy Sievers drove in two runs with a double as the White Sox came from behind against Jim Kaat (7-14) with five runs in the fourth for an 8-5 lead. Joel Horlen, just up from the minors, was the winner in relief.

Willie Kirkland drove in two runs with a pair of singles and a double for the Indians while Jim Grant (14-8) was the loser.

The A's, held to six hits as Jack Spring (1-0) beat Jim Archer (8-13) in the opener, collected seven hits in an 11 - run fifth inning in the nightcap that included home runs by Norm Siebern and winning reliever Joe Nuxhall (5-8). Art Fowler (5-7) was the loser.

Tiger-Cats Nip Argonauts 21-19

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

It's a topsy-turvy year for Hamilton Tiger-Cats and Toronto Argonauts in the Eastern Football Conference.

The Cats, last-place finishers in 1960, kept their 1961 record untarnished by edging the Argos 21-19 in the East's only Labor Day game. The Argos, who finished first last year, have only one victory in four games.

Their 4-0 record keeps the Tiger-Cats in a tie for first place with Ottawa Rough Riders, who are 4-1 after squeaking past Montreal Alouettes 25-24 Saturday.

The Alouettes, improving steadily have only a tie in five starts, but they came close to upsetting the lackadaisical Riders Saturday, thanks to a two-touchdown effort by halfback Don Clark.

DUBBER HAUNTS ARGOS

Hamilton unveiled a new end against the Argonauts—ex-quarterback Tom Dublinski. The 30-year - old Dubber, whose first football in Canada was played with Argos, grabbed a 14-yard pass which kept one Hamilton march alive and took another for Tiger - Cats' third touchdown-the eventual winner.

Ralph Goldston and Bernie Faloney scored the other Hamilton touchdowns, and Don Sutherin converted all three.

The Argonauts played their best football of the year in the second half. What looked like a game-winning touchdown drive was stopped late in the game when Garney Henley intercepted a Tobin Rote pass in the end zone.

Dave Mann had a second-quarter touchdown for Argos, beating five defenders after taking a Rote pass at the Hamilton 19 on the Argonauts' first play.

In the third quarter Cookie Gilchrist, who had one field goal attempt blocked, tried another which went for a single. Then Rote went one yard for a touchdown after an 88-yard march. Gilchrist added a fourth-quarter field goal. Two converts, the single and the field goal gave Gilchrist a salute for a total of 19 and the lead in the Big Type individual scoring race.

CROWD HITS MARK

An attendance record for Hamilton was established when 26,-709 paid to see the game. The old mark of 26,330 was set two years ago by the same two teams.

In Ottawa Saturday both the weather and the Alouettes were hot. A sweat-soaked crowd of 16,000 saw each team score three converted touchdowns and a field goal. Gerry Nesbitt's 33-yard single in the fourth quarter was the difference.

Long Rider marches resulted in two touchdowns by halfback Joe Kelly on short line smashes.

COSTLY FUMBLE

The other Ottawa touchdown was a gift. Montreal quarterback Don Allard fumbled the ball in his own end zone early in the game and Ottawa centre Jerry Selinger flopped on it for a major.

Gary Schreider kicked three converts and a field goal.

Despite his fumble, Allard showed to good advantage. He threw an eight-yard touchdown pass to Marv Luster near the end of the game.

The next games in the East will be interlocking contests with Western Conference teams. Edmonton is at Saskatchewan Roughriders are at Montreal Friday and Edmonton is at Ottawa Saturday.

TORONTO (CP)—Henk Jansen of Toronto captured the black belt title in the Canadian National Exhibition judo championships which attracted 175 entries Saturday. Rick Richardson of Ottawa was second. The junior crown went to Shelly Sax of Wilson Heights. Mike Scorcline of Niagara Falls was third.

EDMONTON (CP) — Will tournament favorites, George Homeniuk of Winnipeg hung on with a three-over-par 74 Monday to capture the Alberta open golf championship with a 54-hole total of 211. One of the pre-tourney favorites, Ken Knudson of Toronto, finished in a three-way tie with Frank Fowday to capture the Alberta open title at Calgary and three-time winner Harry Martell of Edmonton, all with 220s.

Kenmors Whip Petes 10-1

BY PETER CARVER

PETERBOROUGH — The Belleville Kenmors are finally back in the swing of things and they couldn't have picked a better time to start belting the ball than here last Sunday afternoon.

Their bludgeons boomed a total of 15 hits off the Peter' fastball ace, Bob Gatfield, as the Kenmors breezed to a 10-1 victory in the first game of their best of three Junior Major "A" series with the Peterborough Juniors.

The next game will be back in Belleville at the Fairgrounds this Sunday afternoon and if a third game is necessary it will be played in Peterborough on Wednesday, Sept. 13.

Larry Soden was the Bellev- ville hero as he pitched and hit his team to victory. He tossed a neat three-hitter at the losers and connected for three key singles, good for 2 R.B.I. His control was excellent as he caught nine Petes looking at third strikes while allowing only two to reach first on walks.

The Kenmors showed no mercy on Gatfield as they clubbed him around for 15 hits, although only two went for extra bases. The first lefty whiffed seven and walked three over the nine-innings route.

Peterborough took a second-inning lead as Mahoney doubled and scored on a close play at the plate when Meagher singled.

This lead looked big for three innings until the Kenmors broke loose in the fifth. Singles by Vaughn and Follwell and a walk loaded the sacks. Duffy Follwell drove two runs across with a single. Back-to-back hits by Goyer and Soden produced two more runs to end the winners' scoring at four. However they were far from finished.

Follwell's double and a pair of errors plated another Belle- ville run in the seventh. Clarke's single, a passed ball, an error and Goyer's long single brought two more across in the eighth.

Soden capped the nine-run with a walk and scored on Murray Hunter's powerful home run. Pat Asseltine followed Hunter with a single, advanced on an error and scored on Clarke's ground out.

The Kenmors retired the Petes in the last of the ninth with a neat double play.

Soden led the winners with his three singles while Hunter homered and singled. Bob Follwell had two hits, including a two-bagger. Rickey Locke, Gary Goyer and Glen Clarke had two hits apiece while Asseltine and Gord Vaughn each contributed singles.

Terry Mahoney with a double and Bill Meagher and Gatfield with singles were the only Petes able to solve Soden's slants.

The teams:

KENMORS: Locke cf, Follwell lf, Goyer 2b, Mavety c, Soden p, Hunter ss, Asseltine 3b, Vaughn rf, Clarke 1b.

PETERBOROUGH: Driscoll 2b, Shrubb ss, Leahey 3b, De Noble c, Hill 1b, Mahoney rf, Meagher cf, Byrne rf, Rose lf, Gatfield p.

Lead Series 2-0

Joyces Whip Cobourg 7-5

By GARRY ALEXANDER
Staff Writer

Bobby Hall's second home run of the season, one more aboard in the eighth inning, gave Belleville Joyce Real Estate a 7-6 victory over Cobourg Merchants before a large crowd in Cobourg Saturday night.

The win gave Joyces a 2-0 lead in their best-of-seven E. and D. Softball league play-off series for the Bill Ott Trophy. The third game is slated for the Fairgrounds here tonight at 8.15.

Hall, who cleaned on the mound with Cobourg's Jim "Sleepy" Dawe, smashed a line drive between the right and centre fielders with two out and one on in the eighth. That shot gave Joyces a 6-4 lead.

Back in the second frame, Hall had belted a tremendous homer with none aboard. In the fourth Hall hit another line drive down the left field foul line that would have been a home run in any other park. The ball struck a picnic bench along the left field beach and it was ruled a ground rule double. He scored later on an Austin Bonnell hit.

Joyces went ahead 1-0 in the first on perfect bunt single by Dave Rogers, a walk to Larry Austin and a wild pitch. After Hall homered in the second Carr singled, stole second, and scored on Goyer's base hit to make it 3-0.

Cobourg Merchants picked up a walk to Dawe with a terrific home run belt of his own to cut the lead to 3-1 in the second. After Hall had scored to make it 4-2 in the fourth, Cobourg came back to tie it in the seventh. Singles by Thompson and Dawe and a walk filled the sacks. Sharpe's infield single got one run home and a two-out error plated the tying run. The Merchants protested, without results, when Taylor was called out on a third strike over his head in the middle of the rally. Cobourg cut the lead to 6-5 in the bottom of the eighth on two walks and Church's base knock. Joyces' insurance run in the ninth came on Austin's double, a passed ball and Faulkner's ground out.

Cobourg's last rally of the night came in the ninth when Faulkner hit a single through left field. Sharpe's infield single got one run home and a two-out error scored another. Dawe struck out to end the game.

"Dawe threw a heavy ball and I was ruled a ground out on that third strike over his head in the middle of the rally," Taylor said after the game. "I'm looking for the 1962 season."

Joyces' insurance run in the ninth came on Austin's double, a passed ball and Faulkner's ground out.

'Food Supplements' Most Important Says Cummings

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—"Robert Cummings would rather talk about his vitamin, nutrition and positive thinking than about his new show," said a member of the Hollywood press corps of correspondents. "No matter what you ask him, he'll get over to his pet subjects somehow."

A few days later, Cummings finished a comedy scene in one of the segments of The Bob Cummings Show. Then he walked over to talk as the crews set up the lights and camera for the next shot.

One of the problems of creating a character is that often you don't really know who he is," he began. "When I did 'My Hero in 1952 I never really knew the character I played," Beanblossom. Maybe that was the trouble. He was just there, without any background — no home, no family.

WROTE BIOGRAPHY

"So I called him. I sat down and wrote a long biography for Bob Carson, the fellow I play. He started out as a lawn-mower expert who could fix those engines and went on to become a general engine expert. In the war he was a member of the Flying Tigers, was shot down and landed in an Indian village. He said the Indians were on his side in the war and because of that, they were going to give him the wisdom of the ages that knows no race, creed or national boundary.

"You can say anything you want in the universe by calling it as if you already are, as if you had already accomplished it," the older statesman told him. 'But you must also do three things: tell no one, be sure you want it, and always give thanks for it.'

"So when our series opens, Bob is a positive-thinking man who owns seven airplanes, has plenty of money and spends his time doing what he wants to do —flying around as an adventurous troubleshooter."

On the set a man walked up to him with a box and Cummings reached out and took a capsule.

"Food supplements," said the youthful looking star when is his 50s. "They are very important. They're what you eat, an actor the one tool I have is my body. It has to be kept in shape because I must be ready to deliver it in perfect condition when it is needed. And is true that I have to know foods and nutrition. It is the food you don't get that hurts you."

Reed Ousts McKinley, Canucks Win

FOREST HILLS, N.Y. (AP) Whitney Reed of Alameda, Calif., rocked the national championships Monday by eliminating defending champion Chuck McKinley, the Wimbledon runner - up, 6-3, 9-7, 2-6, 6-3, in the men's singles.

Reed, a court scrambler who jests that he trains on "Coca - Cola and late hours," tore down McKinley's powerful aggressive game with an assortment of "popcorn balls" and dinky shots that several times sent McKinley sprawling over the slippery grass.

Earlier, seventh - seeded Jack Douglas of Santa Monica, Calif. survived one match point, played a rousing comeback by Vic Seixas and won 6-4, 2-6 2-6, 9-7, 6-4.

The British girls played with a vengeance, as if out to atone for their recent Wightman Cup defeat. Angela Mortimer, the Wimbledon champion and No. 2 seeded, crushed Lynn Haines of Dallas 6-0, 6-0. Left - handed Ann Haydon, seeded No. 7, beat Sheila Marcobick of Brooklyn, also 6-0, 6-0.

Alan Ladd Training Son To Be an Olympic Diver

By JAMES BACON

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Alan Ladd says he knows how to deal with child actors. Because he learned the hard way.

Alan is the father of David Ladd, one of the hottest of the juvenile stars.

Producers are constantly sending David scripts.

"He could be working all the time," says his father, "but he only works in the summer vacation. I'll keep him normal or else. He doesn't know how much money he makes — and Im really training him to be an Olympic diver."

In Alan's mouth, he was one of the best divers in southern California. An injury prevented him from trying out for the 1952 Olympics.

"That was the greatest disappointment of my life. Now I find that David is an exceptional diver — and I'm not the ex-Olympic stars coaching him."

Alan and Mrs. Ladd, former actress Sue Carol, are trying to give the 14-year-old star of Misty and Dog of Flanders as near normal a school and home life as possible.

"There are two things in my favor," says David.

"First I started out in this business very poor—even hungry."

"Second, I worked with Brandon de Wilde in Shane."

De Wilde, now grown up, was a child star who made with Hollywood for Shane, the western many believe one of the finest ever.

"Possibly the most dramatic event in my life comes when, my job done, I leave the family to ride off again: I even cried in the film—something I seldom, if ever, have done.

"The scene was tough enough but everytime I spoke my farewell to Brandon, he crossfist his eyes and duck the longest out at me."

Ladd, who had scared off all the heavies in the picture, said he couldn't scare Brandon.

"So I called him, I did. I said: 'Make that kid stop or I'll hit him so hard he'll end with a brick. Brandon's father started looking Brandon across the set with hell-and-gone eyes were no more crossed eyes."

Astrological Forecast

By CARROLL RICHTER

Wednesday, September 6, 1961

General Tendencies: This is certainly your day when you can think big and get big. Make a point to contact the most influential persons with whom you have any contact whatever and see that they operate in close harmony with you in deciding just what avenues of expression and what broad principles can unite all concerned for the future. Tonight get out for a fun evening. Play.

Aries (March 21 to April 19) You have every opportunity to impress the right people favorably with your particular knowledge, talents, specialized achievements, P.M. fine for whatever type of amusement appeals to you. Be affectionate with those who are loyal to you.

Taurus (April 20 to May 20) Take time today to do something that will make your friends and family ties happy. Don't forget to bring home little goodies that delight in fun. Then take it easy at own hearth and really get to know your own kin. Grow.

Gemini (May 21 to June 21) Be sure to co-operate more with associates today so that there is added efficiency and harmony and don't neglect to buy any mechanisms that will make work less tedious and more profitable. P.M. step out with good friends for fun.

Moon Children (June 22 to July 21) — Do everything in your power to increase income and have a true abundance. Begin by collecting any monies that are owed to you. P.M. set up a new budget that will prove more efficient and flexible. Take the health treatments you need.

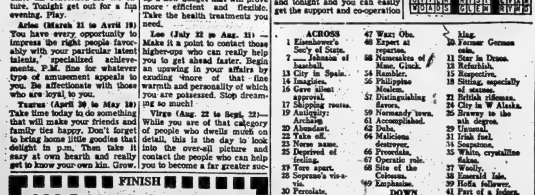
Leo (July 22 to Aug. 21) — Make it a point to contact those higher-ups who can really help you to get ahead faster. Begin an upswing in your affairs by emulating some of that fine warmth and personality of which you are possessed. Stop dreaming so much!

Virgo (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) — While you are of that category of people who dwells much on detail, this is the day to look into the over-all picture and contact the people who can help you to become a far greater success than you have been in the past.

Libra (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22)—Ideal day to contact the right people, both in business and social life, and be very co-operative so that the future becomes more successful and happy. P.M. make the acquaintance of that exciting person you admire.

Scorpio (Oct. 22 to Nov. 21)—You would do well to follow the ideas of higher-ups today if you want to get ahead faster and make a far greater success of things than has been possible in the past. Go to them for advice and get their respect, also. Expand.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) — Every opportunity is yours now to add to your circle of friends and also garner the information that is important to you right now, in any sphere of your endeavor. However, be broadminded for greatest benefits accruing.



Capricorn (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Look to the experts for the advice and data you require at this time. Go to them confidentially and be sure you carry through with their ideas ,precisely. Evening is then ideal for any romantic notions you may have. Be charming.

Aquarius (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Higher-ups and highly efficient, charming people are interested in you and your welfare today and tonight and you can easily get the support and co-operation you need, to expand and grow richer. Be enthusiastic and grateful. Think big.

Pisces (Feb. 20 to March 20) A fine day to really get ahead faster in either personal or business, creative fields that most interest you. Strive for greater efficiency in all that you do and the rest comes naturally and easily. Impress the right people. Grow.

If your child is born today — he, or she, will be that type of person who quickly grasps the full panorama of any venture or situation and thus also possesses the inner ability to bring such a picture into early materialization. Be sure you give a combined course of learning that will include the ethical as well as the academic, practical. Teach to be precise. Wonderful chart for the medical profession, especially, or the artistic.

Fishing for Bass in the Fall

Bass — large, adult bass — are temperamental creatures. They feed when and if the spirit moves them. Seeking the answer as to why big bass are so unpredictable is a frustrating, intermittent feeders, I once asked a well-known ichthyologist about it. He explained it this way.

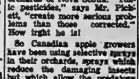
A growing bass, he said, needs about 10 pounds of natural food in order to add one pound to his weight. This small bass, like small anything else, are apt to sample just about anything that comes within strike. Conversely, adult bass, who already have done their growing, feed only about one pound of natural food to keep one pound of their weight happy and healthy for an entire year. This means that they need to feed only now and then, when they happen to be hungry.

There are two times of the year when this feeding rule does not necessarily apply — in the spring, directly after the spawning season, and again in the fall. In the spring, the bass is still in the vicinity of the spawning beds in the shallows and will strike readily any lure which encroaches upon their chosen territory.

In the fall, nature warns the bass that winter is approaching. In the northern parts of the country, winter means ice and snow. Some of the bass go into hibernation, taking up their winter quarters in a hollow submerged log or buried in the mud. Others, usually the larger fish, take up residence in deep water. In the south, cool temperatures cut down the available supply of natural food. In either case, the bass must live, to a greater or less degree, on an accumulated fat, laid on during the time of plenty.

As soon as the cool days and frosty nights of fall arrive, the fish — all of them — go on a feeding spree. They pack in all the fat-producing food they can find, storing up that valuable extra nourishment which must sustain them during the months of food scarcity. Usually this is at the time of the fall hunting season, but the wise bass fisherman generally can find time between hunting trips to get in some good bass fishing.

No matter whether we are fishing for smallmouth or largemouth, in lake or in river, we arrange our fishing according to the seasonal periods. During active feeding periods, we fish artificials — plug or bass bug — in the shallows, along shore lines, bars, or the "fans" at the tails of the pools in a bass river. Between feeding periods, we go to live bait, drifting with the bait and rarely anchoring to fish one spot.



Usually in northern waters, bass — both largemouth and small mouth — prefer such baits as crayfish, helgramites or stone catfish. In the south, we use minnows. But in the fall, the bass are inclined to scorn this menu, preferring one of the club or shiner varieties. These have a higher fat content than the summer foods and the fish seem to know it.

THE CANADIAN WAY

Our good neighbor, Canada, has come up with a brand new look at the problem of poison sprays. From what I have seen of the methods used in the United States, they seem to come under the general theory that if a little is good, more is better. You know what the result has been — dead birds and animals in the fields; dead fish in the ponds and streams.

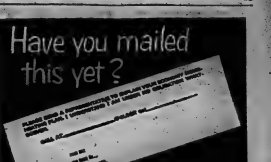
Not so long ago, Mr. A. D. Pickett, of the Canadian Department of Agriculture, wrote to a grower on his article which was published in the Journal of Economic Entomology. For 15 years he had been studying the influence of poison sprays in the apple orchards of Nova Scotia. "Toxic pesticides," says Mr. Pickett, "create more serious problems than those they corrected." How right he is!

So Canadian apple growers have been using selective sprays in their orchards, sprays which reduce the damaging insects but which allow the predatory insects to survive. Something like having your cake and eat it too. The program, admittedly in its infancy, is working out quite well. United States sprayers might do well to take careful note. Already far too much damage has been done with our shotgun spraying methods.

ON THE DISTAFF SIDE

Up in New Brunswick last October, my guide and I noted an automobile parked beside the road. On the fenders of this car were two freshly killed deer, expertly dressed out. Getting out of the car was a woman in hunting clothes. Standing beside the road, similarly dressed was another woman, rifle in hand. Down in the brush some distance from the road was a third woman, rifle in hand.

"That's one for the book", I said to my guide. "Three women and deer dressed and bringing home the bacon."



"Shucks," replied the guide, "nothing new about that. Those three gals hunt together every year and always bring in their limit of deer. Then they share and wrap the meat for the freezer."

And here's another kindred spirit from Winchester, my friend. Last fall two middle-aged United States ladies drove through the Cache Creek Check Station in British Columbia. Behind the car they were towing a trailer.

"You two ladies alone?" asked the warden.

"That's right," one replied. "We left our husbands at home so we could enjoy a hunt in peace."

In the trailer, each had a moose.

Vilhjalmur Stefansson – Conqueror of Canadian Arctic

Vilhjalmur Stefansson, anthropologist, prolific author, dauntless explorer, courageous ambassador of Canada's north. In 1912 and again in 1918 Stefansson came out of the Arctic, after being considered dead, to find himself an international hero: interviewed, feted and famous on three continents. The tall young explorer had captured the imagination of people everywhere. Famous Arctic experts had said it was impossible to travel over the sea ice without supplies, to live only by hunting. Whaling captains, with years of experience in the northern seas, agreed. Even Eskimos refused to accompany Stefansson on his "suicide trip". Nevertheless, with complete faith in his own theories, he set off into Canada's uncharted Arctic regions. For six months there was only silence from the north; Stefansson was given up for dead. Then news of his return burst upon the world. He came back in triumph, with vast stretches of unknown land explored and mapped, five new islands discovered and named, a living proof of man's ability to live, hunt and travel on the sea ice. Stefansson made headlines around the world, with publication of his own story, he became an international celebrity. Today, 26 books, 400 articles, innumerable lectures and interviews later, he is renowned as the man who found the north "friendly". The image of the valiant and indomitable explorer still captures the imagination of the old – stirs the blood of the young. Vilhjalmur Stefansson – fearless explorer, Arctic hero, a living legend.

Stefansson, author of My Life with the Eskimo and The Friendly Arctic, demonstrated that the Arctic can be a comfortable and completely sustaining environment by almost singlehandedly supplying his various expeditions with meat. How to hunt seals, how to shoot a herd of 27 caribou with 27 shots – all are detailed in his books. Photo above is typical of his role as last of the great explorers before the advent of the aeroplane. On three expeditions to the Arctic, Stef found new land, mapped old, went where even the Eskimo dared not go.

A legend in his own time, children now study Stefansson in history classes. Ronald McConnell and Kathleen Newton examine bust by Emanuel Hahn in Canada's National Gallery. In background, statue of Victoria Island Eskimo by Frances Loring.

Stefansson today lives in a comfortable New England cottage near Dartmouth College. His wife, Evelyn, whom he married in 1941, is librarian of the Stefansson Collection at the college. The Stefanssons eat an almost all-meat diet, result of Stef's experience in the Arctic with fat meat as a cure for scurvy. Here, Mrs. Stefansson tries her pemmican stew on a world expert.

'Resources for Tomorrow' Conference in Montreal Will Seek Answer to Problems

By BEN WARD
Canadian Press Staff writer

OTTAWA (CP)—If a power dam on a Canadian river threatens the destruction of sports fishing should the dam or the fish be ruled expendable?

If expansion of a prairie farming area requires the drainage of wetlands vital to nesting waterfowl do the farmers or the birds get priority?

What if aerial spraying to battle timber-killing insects has a serious effect on fish and wildlife? Or a new mining operation threatens to pollute a boil-day lake with wastes?

These problems are posed in a series of papers prepared for study at the "Resources for Tomorrow" conference in Montreal Oct 23-28.

The conference of provincial and federal officials will seek the answers in a plan for future management of Canadian resources.

Experts who have prepared the conference's study papers stress that multiple-use forest management can solve most of the difficulties.

"EXPLODING DEMAND"

That term means simply that management of wilderness areas should not be done on a single-interest basis but for the mutual benefit of all groups involved.

G. Tunstell of Ottawa, a member of the Eastern Rockies Conservation Board, writes:

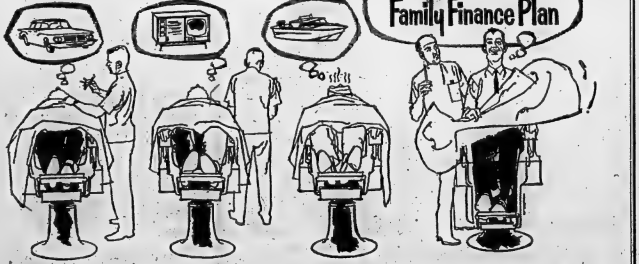
"The exploding demand for recreational areas, the rapidly growing interest in deposits of minerals and fuels, the phenomenal rate of recruitment to the army of hunters and anglers, and, in some areas, the critical need for watershed protection, all make it abundantly clear that the forest industries are going to have to share their wilderness areas on a scale undreamed of a generation ago."

He urges a crash program of research and planning with all the forest interests taking part. A national policy should be evolved to control the future development of the wilderness.

It is no longer enough, he says, to administer a certain land tract for lumber operations, or another for a game preserve. Hunters and anglers should be entitled to harvest the wildlife surplus in the logging area and the cutters allowed to take the forest harvest in the preserve.

A study paper on Atlantic salmon management by C. J. Kerswill of the fisheries station at St. Andrews, N.B., points up the disastrous results of unplanned industrial activity in the forest.

Aerial spraying of timberlands with DDT, started in 1952 to fight a spruce budworm blight, has killed millions of young salmon in New Brunswick and Quebec rivers.



Mr. Kerswill reports that the kill of young salmon had reached a severe stage before it was discovered that a lower concentration of DDT in the spray would do the same worm-killing job and spare most of the fish.

Power development on some salmon rivers has curbed spawning, he adds, and there is an added danger in mining. A reopened copper and zinc mine last year spilled wastes into the Northwest Miramichi River which chased out all the salmon for miles until action was taken to stop the pollution.

Proper management co-operation would have solved these problems before they occurred.

Several papers deal with the problem of comparing values in such controversies as dams versus fish. All stress that the commercial value of fisheries is only a small fraction of the value to sports, recreation and the tourist industry.

KENNEDY ORDERS U.S. NUCLEAR TESTS

Strike Deadline For Car Workers Set For Monday

Parties Report Progress After All-Night Session

DETROIT (AP)—General Motors Corporation and the United Auto Workers union reported early today that "significant progress" had been made during the night in negotiating a new contract.

As a result both parties agreed to extend their expired contract until next Monday. The union's 125,000 GM members were to have gone on strike at 11 a.m. EDT today. Now the deadline has been postponed until the same time Monday.

The GM-UAW announcement said:

"GM and the union have mutually agreed to an extension of the termination date of the Aug. 1, 1958 agreement to Sept. 11, 1961, at 11 a.m. (11 a.m. EDT)."

Neither side would give any details. However, Walter Reuther, UAW president, said the night's work represented "substantial progress on broad economic challenges" and that progress toward meeting the needs of GM workers.

HURT SOLVE PROBLEMS

Louis Seaton, GM vice-president and the head of the company's negotiating team, said: "There are many problems which have to be settled at the local level."

Reuther left the impression that substantial understanding had been settled and that only minor differences remained. He said local work rules remained to be worked out.

The negotiations recessed until 2 p.m. EDT today.

The UAW has concentrated on GM in the past. It has been the UAW practice to win a contract at GM that is the pace-setter and then negotiate to bring the other two into line.

Presently, the Ford Motor Company and Chrysler Corporation will go along with the contract date extension.

Reuther, who said he felt "quietly hopeful" "moved over the night's work, was optimistic that the union can get from GM about the same things he got from American Motors Corporation when he gave the union a profit-sharing plan. GM has rejected "You sell the details later."

SAYS SPECULATION

Reuther, asked on a similar question, he said, "you reflects speculate very safely."

GM has rejected profit-sharing proposal.

Talks got under way in the early morning hours after an all-night session at the bargaining table.

Except for two brief breaks, the negotiators sat at the bargaining tables at the GM headquarters here since 10 a.m. Tuesday.

Strike preparations were started on the local level at several GM plants Tuesday with GM employees in 19 states on call to strike.

President Kennedy Tuesday wired a plea to GM and the union for "industrial statesmanship" that would avert a strike.

"Our country at this juncture in our affairs can ill afford a shutdown in this important segment of our economy," Kennedy said.

More Southern Schools Accept Negro Students

DALLAS, Tex. (AP)—Negro first graders, without police escort, prepared today to integrate the largest segregated school system in the United States.

School officials told parents of the Negro children there would be no police escort for the youngsters. Some estimates placed the number of Negroes at 96.

Dallas was the largest U.S. city in a 14-state region to begin integrating schools under a federal court order. Largest one is Memphis, Tenn. Dallas was the 16th largest in the 1960 census and Memphis was 22nd.

The city operates 136 elementary schools with 68,300 pupils. About 17,000 are Negro.

Federal court orders to Dallas to integrate call for 1-grade-a year plan beginning with the first grade. There are an estimated 3,100 Negro first graders this year out of 14,000. ALSO INTEGRATED

Galveston, another major Texas city 305 miles south of Dallas, also scheduled its first public school integration today. The Galveston school board announced 30 Negroes had been awarded all-white first grade and kindergarten classes. A Galveston Roman Catholic parochial school integrated with eight Negro students Tuesday without incident.

The Dallas citizens council, made up of business leaders, announced it has sought to relieve all groups in Dallas with the theory that racial disorders are criminal and that integration is the law and must be obeyed.

Meanwhile, in Little Rock, Ark., five more schools — a co-technical high school and four junior high schools—were integrated quietly Tuesday in contrast to things that developed when desegregation began four years ago.

Negroes were admitted for the first time to white schools in Fort Lauderdale and Daytona Beach, Fla. Police guarded the Little Rock and Dallas schools and no crowds formed.

School integration spread to seven Richmond, Va., communities. Integration of four Atlanta high schools, started last week, resumed calmly under watchful eyes of police.

New Orleans schools opened a two - day registration period for the lawsuit-spawned integration which starts Thursday. A newly formed mothers' committee called for prayers for private schools in New Orleans and said a plan to signify in Episcopalists "is a sham for cowardice."

EASES PENALTY

WINDSOR (CP)—City council Tuesday night eased the penalty for contractors who do not employ Windsor residents or taxpayers on winter works projects. Council originally proposed that contractors lose 10 per cent of tracts if they did not observe this employment rule. Under the new policy, contractors will be required to dismiss within 48 hours workers who do not have residence or taxpayers' qualifications.

THE WEATHER

Synopsis: Cloudy weather with a few showers has pushed northward across Lake Superior. This weather will gradually spread into Northern and Central Ontario. Mainly sunny weather is forecast for southern parts of the province, with temperatures rising to near 80 during the day.

LIVING COSTS EDGED UPWARD IN PAST MONTH

Was First Rise In Five Months

OTTAWA (CP)—Higher prices for food, gasoline and profes-sional football game tickets helped increase Canadian living costs in July, and the consumer price index for Aug. 1 edged upwards one-tenth of a point to 129.1.

The increase, reported today by the Bureau of Statistics was the first rise in five months. The index, based on 1949 prices equalling 100, had been steady at 129 for three months. The index now is 1.2 points above the level of 127.9 on Aug. 1 last year.

Most fresh vegetables were cheaper, but the budget of food costs rose by one per cent.

Consumers had to pay more for transportation, due to higher gasoline prices, and costs of school prices generally were higher too.

The only areas of consumer costs to show decreases were clothing and health care.

WAGES RISE

The rise in living costs followed increases in industrial wages during June. The index of average industrial wages and salaries at July 1—latest date available—was 162.9 compared with 161.6 a month earlier and 176.3 a year earlier. The index is based on 1949 wages equalling 100.

This wages index, computed from a survey of 16 major industries, covers a wide range of industrial employment, representing an average of total wages paid.

The largest item in the consumer price index — housing costs—remained unchanged at 126.0 on Aug. 1. Prices were higher for fuel, floor coverings, textiles and household supplies, but unchanged for the prices of furniture and power lawn mowers.

The index of clothing prices dipped to 124.1 from 112.2 largely because of sale prices for women's clothing.

Britain Is Not Planning New Nuclear Tests

LONDON (CP) — Britain will continue its moratorium on nuclear tests despite President Kennedy's decision to resume U.S. tests.

The British office spokesman said Britain was not considering resuming tests—"not even safety tests."

The spokesman would not disclose whether a British decision had a French government announcement Tuesday that it would resume nuclear tests following President Kennedy's announcement.

Both the British and the French spokesmen said their governments' new policies were a result of the breakdown of the disarmament discussion.

British newspapers said the resumption of American tests came as no surprise in view of the latest Soviet test within a week.

Major-General Tried to Influence Election Says Defence Secretary

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. Defence Secretary Robert McNamara said today he regrets major-general Maj.-Gen. Edwin A. Walker was based in part on a finding that Walker tried to influence the 1960 congressional elections.

Walker was relieved of his command of the 30th infantry division in West Germany last April pending an investigation of troop education and indoctrination policies he sponsored.

The inquiry led to an official reprimand which Walker denounced Tuesday and led some Democrats to demand that some Republicans be censured.

McNamara said Walker was reprimanded for two reasons:

First, his conduct of a indoctrination program which violated army regulations and made "distasteful and derogatory statements" about past public officials including former president Harry Truman.

Second, he tried to influence the troops of the 30th division and their families in their voting in the 1960 congressional election in an election Aug. 31.

Halt Preparations for War Plead 25 Non-Aligned Lands

By EUGENE LEVIN

BELGRADE (AP)—The conference of 25 non-aligned countries ended today with an appeal to the United States and Russia to halt the "preparations" and start negotiations at once to head off nuclear destruction.

A communique summing up the five-day parley was unanimously approved at a winding meeting that ran until 1 a.m. Besides calling for peace, it dealt mainly with colonialism and—

1. Declared the U.S. naval base at Guantanamo Bay "affects the sovereignty and integrity of Cuba."

2. Called Algerian rebel claims to French-held Sahara "peaceful and legitimate and necessary" and offered to aid the Algerians in their struggle with France.

3. Demanded immediate evacuation of French armed forces from Tunisian soil.

4. Demanded immediate freedom for Portugal's black-torn African colony of Angola.

Never before, said the conference sponsors, has mankind been threatened with so "ominous a danger" and warned that that would "inevitably lead to devastation on a scale hitherto unknown in the world and unlimited."

The communique also demanded non-intervention in the Congo and the end of race segregation in South Africa.

Speck of Solder Delays U.S. Man-in-Space Plan

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP)—The United States manned space program has been delayed by a speck of too much solder on a small transistor connector.

The firing of the first Ranger deep-space probe recently was delayed 24 hours because one spacecraft received an erroneous signal and began functioning 24 hours before launch pad —just as though it were seeking the moon or outer space.

Missile count-downs here often are interrupted or postponed by minor technical troubles with the rocket, bad weather, malfunctions in ground support or tracking equipment and occasionally because a fishing boat wanders into a forbidden area in Atlantic Ocean safety zone around the Cape.

But the last few weeks have brought a rash of unusual reasons for delays, including those listed above.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration announced an attempt Aug. 22 to hurl an unmanned project Mercury capsule into orbit for the first time. Several hours before launch, however, a speck of solder on a transistor pilot device on the Atlas booster's air rocket revealed something wrong.

The trouble was traced to a tiny blob of solder on the transistor. It was touching another solder blob, the package, causing a short circuit.

General Dynamics-Astronautics, which makes the Atlas, found other transistors with extra solder at its San Diego, Calif., plant. All were made by one of six sub - contractors which supply General Dynamics with this type of transistor.

The blobs of transistors are placed in various systems on each Atlas. Technicians had to check all of them, as well as leads on the Cape Canaveral pad and remove those made by the one company.

This forced postponement of the Ranger exposed a problem which the space agency hopes to try again early this month. But precious time was lost in the effort to orbit an astronaut by the end of the year.

Ranger was harassed by a number of problems when scientists tried several times to fire it over an eight-day period in late July and early August.

Soviet Union Repudiates War Says Mr. K.

MOSCOW (AP) — Premier Khrushchev said Tuesday the Soviet Union repudiates war as a means of settling international disputes and wants more than anything else "general and complete disarmament under effective control."

The Soviet premier made the statement in a written statement during the opening of a Soviet industrial exhibition in Vienna.

(The message was released by the Tass news agency shortly after Adlai Stevenson, U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, disclosed in Washington that the Soviet Union had fired another nuclear blast—the third since it resumed testing last week—and just before President Kennedy announced resumption of U.S. nuclear testing underground and in laboratories.)

Khrushchev made no mention of a nuclear test ban treaty with the Soviets agree to a ban on atmospheric nuclear blasts.

Fisherman Hooks Bat, Is Bitten

PETERBOROUGH (CP) — An Ohio man fishing north of here hooked a bat and the bat retaliated by biting the angler.

Leslie and Everett Jeffries said the man was fishing at night on Chandos Lake near Apsley, Ont., when the bat, flyaround, when he felt a tug on his line.

"He reeled in to find the bat on the hook.

"He outgrowed bat bit the angler on the thumb, eventually was killed and is being mounted.

Department officials coupled their telling of the story with a warning that rabies cases are reported by Congress.

Dr. Ralph Horio Alegre, capital of his home state of Rio Grande do Sul in the south, said Tuesday that the bat was probably a vampire.

GUN HOLSTER, CLOTHES FOUND IN DENSE BUSH

Five Suspects Remanded Week

PETERBOROUGH (CP) — Provincial police combing nearby bush country for $181,000 stolen at gunpoint last Thursday from a Havelock bank have found a gun holster and clothes possibly belonging to the bandits.

Staff Sgt. Stan Palmateer Tuesday led a search party of 14 OPP men and local volunteers, on the start of a 75-mile trail followed in a search for five men who have since been charged and remanded without bail.

The five, arrested in a four-day manhunt which covered 35 square miles of bush, were remanded in magistrate's court Monday for a week.

Jailed were Yvon Lalonde, 30, Roger Poirier, 31, Claude Lalonde, 23, Roger Martel, Montreal, and a man who identified himself only as Wilson. Police believe his real name is Lemieux.

Police said the items recovered Tuesday included a pair of blue coveralls and rain coat, besides the gun holster.

Goulart Begins Talks Designed To Pick Premier

BRASILIA (AP) — Vice-President João Goulart began talks today with Congress and political leaders to organize a new government for Brazil. Some were reported urging a coalition regime to give a voice to all parties.

Although the date for his inauguration as a figurehead president has been set for Sept. 15, Goulart landed Tuesday night at Brazil's underground capital in the interior after his personal safety had been assured and military leaders ended their active opposition.

Goulart, assailed by military leaders as a dangerous leftist, will take over the position but will have his powers curbed by a new parliamentary system. "I think it will be impossible for Goulart to run for the establishment of an ideal regime," he told reporters.

Japanese React to Atom Tests With Emotions of Fear and Horror

TOKYO (AP)—Japan's reaction to Russia's resumption of nuclear testing has been a mixture of horror, emotion anxiety, fear and horror.

They are the emotions of a country that has been daily awakened from the nightmare of the atomic bombings that struck that fell on Hiroshima and Nagasaki 16 years ago.

Japan does not want testing of any kind—in the atmosphere, underground or under the United States decision to resume testing also can be expected to raise Japanese opposition to higher pitch.

Already the Japanese foreign office has urged the U.S. not to carry out its plans for resumption of tests underground and in the laboratory. Previously it had protested the Soviet tests.

Anyone who has not seen an atom-scarred girl, a twisted child or maimed man or woman may find it hard to understand Japanese fears and anxieties.

Much of the bitterness that followed the U.S. wartime victory has died down. But the Japanese are deeply against preventing a third bomb from being dropped here or anywhere.

They see the resumption of nuclear testing by another country, as a source of new danger to them and as a new loss of confidence and disease from radioactive fallout.

Japan is the most heavily affected by fallout from testing in the Pacific and in eastern Russia.

The mayor of Hiroshima summed up Japanese feelings:

"Our great fear of the atomic bomb is not because we have experienced it, but because the people of the world do not understand how dreadful it is, because it occurred in a small dot of the world."

No Other Choice In Meeting Duty To Free World

Will Test Underground To Eliminate Fallout

WASHINGTON (CP) — President Kennedy has ordered resumption of nuclear testing which, informants said today, may help develop new light-weight atomic weapons, step up work on anti-missile rockets and possibly examine the feasibility of a new mass-killer neutron bomb.

Ending a three-year moratorium in the wake of Russia's above-ground nuclear blast in five days, Kennedy Tuesday approved resumption of laboratory and underground tests — "with no fallout"—saying there is no other choice in meeting responsibilities to America "and to the security of other free nations."

Still open until Saturday is the British-American proposal that Russia join with them in an immediate ban on all atmospheric tests while negotiations for detection methods.

A Moscow broadcast — which claimed the British-American offer is just another excuse for justifying underground and atmospheric tests—indicated that Soviet Premier Khrushchev likely will reject the Western proposal.

CANADA APPROVES

Prime Minister Diefenbaker of Canada told reporters in Ottawa Tuesday that the British-American offer "represents the furthest bounds of reasonableness" and was a commendable step toward attainment of a nuclear agreement.

The Canadian government has never made clear that it is opposed to all nuclear testing.

John J. McCloy, the U.S. disarmament administrator, is arranged to meet in New York today with Valerian Zorin, Soviet ambassador to the United Nations, to resume talks on setting up a multi-nation disarmament conference.

White House Press Secretary Salinger said there were no details of the new ban other than that they will take place "at the proper time." Information they will be detonated in tunnels specially prepared in the Nevada Desert like the last U.S. tests. They emphasized there would be no danger of fallout, in contrast to Russian explosions contaminating the atmosphere. However, there is no confirmation that some radioactive materials would leak out from the American blasts.

The Americans are particularly interested in testing small atomic weapons for field troops; in developing a missile that could knock down long - range intercontinental ballistic missiles and in examining the feasibility of a neutron bomb that would kill or disable enemy humans without extensive damage to cities and towns in which they live.

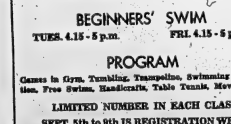
New 'Golfball' Typewriter Is Unveiled

International Business Machines unveiled their new "golf ball" electric typewriter for the first time in Canada yesterday at a product show held at the Hotel Quinte. The new machine eliminates the conventional individual type slugs for each letter or character common to the standard typewriter and replaces these with a single unit, very similar in appearance and dimensions to a golf ball, on which all the type figures are located.

This type head, operated through a standard keyboard, turns and tilts to align whatever character is selected by the operator. Its operation is extremely fast and will not allow jamming of the keys as is often experienced on a normal machine.

Another unusual feature of the new machine is that the carriage does not move. Instead the "golf ball" moves along a path parallel to the carriage returning to the beginning of the next line at the touch of a key. The adjustment allows five of the new typewriters to be set up in the same amount of space as is normally occupied by three standard machines now in the office or school applications.



Two other features of the new typewriter is the fact that the type head is quickly interchangeable, whether used with a different type face may be quickly installed in a matter of seconds. Interchangeable ribbon cartridges also allow for the quick changeover from one color to another, adding to the versatility of the machine.

The new machine, which is now in production, will compete closely priced with IBM's standard electric typewriters.

Also on display at the show for local offices and industries were the latest in dictating and electric typewriters, dictation machines and a small electronic computer, which has especial application to the smaller type of business which does not wish to invest in the larger computation machines.

that Russia had detonated her third atmospheric nuclear explosion over central Asia Tuesday. Kennedy notified Britain, France and West Germany of his decision before making it public.

Kennedy's announcement was immediately hailed by congressional leaders who fear Russia may overtake the reported big American lead in nuclear weapons, adding to Russia's leadership in powerful rockets and space technology.

But the decision was received with dismay by the smaller countries of the world fearful of nuclear-fleecing by Russia and the United States may engulf the world in a nuclear holocaust.

American atomic sources said the series of explosions which Russia started seem to be of a kind undertaken by the United States in 1958. They said that if this is the case, Russia may undertake many more detonations before the series ends.

Japan, target of American Second World War atomic bombing, today strongly urged the United States not to carry out the tests.

Foreign Minister Zentaro Kosaka said:

"We have long considered, from the humanitarian view, that the ban on nuclear weapon tests is one of the important steps toward the abolition of nuclear weapons as a whole."

CLOUD DRIFT

Japan reported new radioactive clouds drifting over western Japan today and said more fallout was eventually may extend over North America. So far Russian explosions have been on a relatively-low yield with no threat of any major contamination danger.

The danger is lessened by the fact that the first few years of the atomic moratorium much of the dangerous fallout has been cleaned from the skies. But U.S. Health Secretary Abraham Ribicoff observed that downward trend in radioactivity will be reversed if Russia continues aerial blasts, adding dangers to food, water and air.

Kennedy announced the resume testing, announced by White House Press Secretary Pierre Salinger, swept away a ban adopted by the United States when the U.S. - British - Russian parley on a treaty to forbid nuclear testing broke up in November, 1958. The last U.S. test was Oct. 30, 1958, in Nevada's Yucca Flats.

The Russians and British also declared self-imposed moratoriums in 1958. Some military men in all three countries pressed for resumption of tests. This year the Russians showed declining interest in the Geneva talks and last Wednesday announced they would resume tests. The British have not resumed.

KENNEDY'S STATEMENT

Kennedy made his announcement "in view of the continued testing by the Soviet government, having ordered the resumption of nuclear tests in the laboratory and underground with no fallout.

"In our effort to achieve an end to nuclear testing, we have taken every step that reasonable men could justify.

"In view of the acts of the Soviet government, we must now take those steps which prudence men find essential.

"We have no other choice in fulfillment of the responsibilities of the U.S., government to its own citizens and to the security of other free nations."

Salinger said Kennedy made his decision only after word reached here of a third Russian atomic explosion in Central Asia.

City Hall Changes Put End To Indoor Farmers' Market

This week carpenters commenced alterations on the upper floor of the city hall to provide more accommodation for a growing city hall administration staff. Local contractor Bert Illes is doing the alteration job which is costing just over $17,000.

When completed the renovation will have provided extra accommodation on the ground floor of the city hall for the welfare office, and will also have provided office space and store room for the city purchasing agent and for the city clerk, whose department will be moved to the ground floor.

On the second floor of the city hall the planning engineer's department has received what is now the clerk's office, while city assessment department will take over the space now being used by the planning engineer and purchasing agent.

So, with the city's progress, what had become almost an institution in Belleville has disappeared.

Two or three decades or more ago the Belleville inside farmers' market would be crowded on the Friday when the farmers came to town to dispose of their butter, eggs and poultry.

Then, as it began to be made on the market space.

The Belleville Shop took off one corner; then the city hall tax office was enlarged into another part of the market room.

And in more recent years another slice of the market space was taken up by the city welfare department.

Now the city has closed out the inside market completely.

Chief Denies Band to Rent Hunting Rights

DESERONTO — The story in the Friday issue of this newspaper stating that the Mohawk Band was contemplating selling hunting space on the reserve to white men in 1963 was vigorously denied last weekend by Indian Chief Melville Hill. Chief Hill declared that the Band Council is interested in conserving the ducks for breeding purposes and creating better hunting for members of the Band.

"It would be years before we could be sure that there would be more ducks than we could use," commented Chief Hill "and it would take time for us to determine that it would be advisable to allow the white man to hunt in this area."

The Chief emphasized that although Ducks Unlimited of Winnipeg is putting up the money for a dam to cost between $3,000 and $4,000, the group has no control or jurisdiction over the marsh area. The Department of Lands and Forests has also been a great help to the Band Council in this project, he stated.

The project is still in the planning stage with only the preliminary survey being made. The Chief could not give a date when the work would get underway. He stated that once the dam was built it would be necessary for the Band Council to pass a by-law to control the hunting in the marsh area.

N. Sprague Offered CofC Secretary Post

TRENTON—At a directors' meeting of the Trenton Chamber of Commerce last night, the executive members voted to ask Norlund Sprague to assume the position of secretary-treasurer of the group.

Mr. Sprague, who recently retired from business life, had stated that he would be interested in the position. He will succeed Herb Smith, who has worked in the interests of the chamber since it was formed more than a year ago.

Mr. Sprague will take over the running of the chamber tourist booth when it re-opens next summer and it was suggested that he might be interested in running next year's membership campaign.

The directors were asked to sell tickets to the chamber dinner-dance which will be held at the Trenton Country Club on Oct. 18. Bob Kreeze is in charge of the dinner-dance and he will be assisted by Walter Lachine.

Mr. Lachine reported that he and directors Arthur Partner and Ken Hall, photographers will be asked to supply pictures of community interest for the Trenton board. Ted Kinsella will be in charge of this project.

George Kempf pointed out that in 1960, $417,000,000 had been spent by tourists in Canada and that $700,000,000 of this had been spent in Ontario. Only per cent of this money went for alcohol in some form.

President Harold Pearce was in charge of the meeting. Miss Marion Baker acted as secretary.

Macmillan's Unenviable Role

Prime Minister Harold Macmillan of Great Britain has been under heavy fire from British newspapers for his statement, in an impromptu interview with reporters at a golf links in Scotland, that the Berlin crisis was "all got up by the press."

Now some Canadian papers are joining in the discussion.

As the Montreal Gazette observes, "If it (the Berlin crisis) has been got up by anybody, it has been got up by Mr. Khrushchev and the Western leaders, who have been repeating their serious disagreements over and over again in public."

The Kingston Whig-Standard, though, finds some grounds for Mr. Macmillan's observation, while it doubts whether he meant his words to be taken seriously.

"Perhaps he also meant to imply that provocation is not the exclusive property of governments; some news media are sometimes prone to stir up a little of their own," says the Kingston paper.

So far, however, we have not noticed any recognition of the fact that Macmillan, and all the members of his government, are bound by the force of events and the course of history in a most aggravating situation, such as would enrage a saint and dismay all but the most irresponsible and optimistic of men.

They are required to act, and talk, like the leaders of a powerful nation, sharing responsibility with the U.S. for defending the world against the fate of the non-Communist world.

Yet, in the final analysis, British leaders must depend solely on their persuasive powers and, if these do not carry the day, must bow to events and act as if they approve of U.S. decisions, with the only alternative being a rift admissible in the eyes of the world today only two first-class powers and a second-class power, no matter how close it may come to rivalling the giants, can play no decisive role.

There will be many who will dispute the accuracy of this analysis, and among these may be numbered U.S. statesmen. The British leaders, they will say, are too hard-headed, too realistic, with too long a history of wielding effective power, not to recognize the vast difference between actual power and mere influence.

Look at the situation cold-bloodedly. Britain possesses nuclear weapons. Thus she is far more powerful than any non-nuclear power. But these weapons are situated on a small island. Either Russia, with ballistic missiles, or the U.S., by the use of SAC and the Polaris submarines, could speedily make this island a wasteland, where any who escaped blast and fire were doomed to a slow death from the effects of radiation. But the vast spaces of Russia and the U.S. mean that any British efforts at retaliation would fall short of total destruction.

The H-bomb has succeeded where the Spanish Armada and the Luftwaffe failed; it has, in effect, dried up the English Channel, rendered the Royal Navy and the Royal Air Force obsolete.

Britain thus retains only the semblance of power and this solely by astute diplomacy.

If a nuclear war starts, she is doomed.

But that is not her only danger. If she misses one trick in the diplomatic game she will be stripped of the now meaningless trappings of power and revealed to the whole world as naked as the emperor of the fairy tale, whose invisible clothes were as imaginary as Britain's present appearance of a first-class power.

France, faced with the same dilemma, is trying to act like a first-class power, thanks to Gen. de Gaulle's delusions of grandeur, but no sane man considers his claims to equal voice with the U.S. as anything more than presumptuous.

Britain has steadfastly refused to conduct her affairs as if she were something she no longer is — although the mask slipped badly at the time of Suez. She has concealed this realism by invariably agreeing to the U.S. line at times of crisis — and indeed quite in her shrewd statesmanship this U.S. line in many, if not on all, occasions has coincided with Britain's own best interests.

This, though, is the kind of a game which cannot be successfully played for ever. Sooner or later there will come an occasion where Britain will have to follow one of two choices — stand naked before the world as a nation with integrity but little real power or hide her powerlessness by accepting as her own a foreign nation's policies, though she regard them as rash, stupid or even criminal.

Only a stupid man could face a situation like this without having his mind and soul lacerated and the reputation for stupidity which some attach to British statesmen was never properly earned. Like other men they have made mistakes, but history has proved them right on many occasions when their policies have been most fiercely criticized.

Franco Tyranny Mellows

By Richard Scott Mayerer in the Milwaukee Journal

At 28, the Franco dictatorship is showing age. It is slowing down. It is less harsh, less rigid, less uncompromising than it was 10 or even five years ago.

Or even the spies say so.

Almost imperceptibly it has become more easy going, more tolerant of openly expressed criticism. Vocal critics say that is, for the printed word is still pretty much a captive under close supervision.

Does this mean that Franco is losing his grip? A little, maybe. But as far as is still Spain's strong man. There is no question as to who runs the country. It is true that his regime is supported by the army and by the Roman Catholic Church of Spain. But Franco wields the power.

He can make or break generals. He can veto any army officer's promotion to the rank of colonel. He has a say in the appointment of bishops. He appoints Spain's ambassadors, civil governors, local delegates of the labor syndicates, and determines who shall be editor and publisher of Spain's heavily "orientated" press, which he "orients." He plots the course of the country's foreign policy, and he has shown canny skill in surviving his wartime associations with the fallen dictators Hitler and Mussolini.

* * *

Although the basic features of the Franco dictatorship remain, they have been eroded and blurred by the passage of time, by the force of exposure to influence from outside.

Censorship of press and radio, of book publishing and films is about as stringent as ever. But in today's Spain, people think and speak out more openly against the government than they did 10 or five.

Spaniards still get arrested and jailed for "crimes" that in many other countries are legitimate activities. But in general political arrests are not punished as harshly as they used to be. For more than 10 years there have been few executions for political reasons. All "political prisoners" used to be tried by military courts. Now they are usually shunted off to civil courts, except when Communists are involved.

* * *

Several months ago the government ordered the release of a Socialist leader, Antonio Amat, who had been held in prison without trial for nearly three years. Probably political considerations — the regime wanted to improve its standing with countries of the free world — rather than compassion, were behind the move. But still what is new is that a cabinet minister — Jose Solis, minister of labor — said his decision was based about. A few years ago that would not have happened.

Occasionally, and it is gruesomely heavy sentences are imposed on political offenders. Yet they have become the exception rather than the rule. Opponents of the regime still are intimidated and most of the time the regime lets them alone. But the intimidation is usually ineffective and because it's easier to keep an eye on them that way. The Communist opposition, however, stays well hidden, for where they are concerned the government tolerates nothing.

* * *

Under Franco there have never been free elections. But where limited elections have permitted Franco hedged in with safeguards that the regime risks nothing. Although the Spanish authoritist political expression have begun to emerge.

The fact is that Franco's Spain today shows signs of disintegration from within. Political forces that backed Franco at the beginning are splintering or withdrawing their support, and in some cases openly displaying their disagreements. Such elements cannot be slapped down as easily as the left-wing opposition.

Some monarchists, impatient to have a young heir on the throne, are openly restive, though others stand by Franco in the belief that their support will ensure orderly transition when the time comes.

The Catholic Church of Spain has mixed feelings about the regime. The hierarchy continues to support it but the lower clergy of the Basque country and in Catalonia has criticized the state's limitations on civil liberties. Priests in close contact with the people have expressed concern at the church's continued identification with the Franco state.

* * *

These trends, in monarchist circles, and within the Catholic Church, have contributed to the "softening" of the regime. But there have been other powerful influences.

The coming of Age of a New Generation, to whom the orders of the young people are not inhibited by dreadful memories of the civil war. They are less impressed very much by the regime's constantly reiterated claim that the Franco uprising of 1936 saved Spain. Four years ago Madrid University students circulated leaflets to the effect that they, "the sons of victors and vanquished" in the civil war, wanted more liberty in Spain.

Exposure to the outside world — during the civil war and throughout World War II, Spain was isolated. Then, after the Allies' victory, the United Nations voted political and economic ostracism of the Franco regime and Spain remained isolated from influences that might have complicated Franco's rule. It wasn't until 1953, with the signing of the aid for bases accords with the United States, that Spain became exposed to the contagion of foreign ideas. Spain got into the United Nations, into other international organizations and set about relaxing its controls.

The process is continuing. The effect has been to induce the Franco regime to hold back on the use of tough police as a means of government.

* * *

However, the current "softening" of the regime could be deceptive. The United States's "critical" illness, for example, is little by-easing up because the country is not in turmoil. The people are not in the mood that they want to hazard themselves in a move to topple the regime.

But should the right-wing Salazar dictatorship in neighboring Portugal collapse, should disorders spread to Spain, Franco's looking glass would tighten again, hard.

At the moment the gravest problem is the Franco succession. After him, what? Franco has said that Spain is a monarchy. He has implied that Spain's next king will be the son of Alfonso XIII, Don Juan de Bourbon, now living in Portugal. But Franco has also said when he proposes to-allow the 47-year-old pretender to become king, that Franco wants to perpetuate his regime in its basic form and to leave in on a constitution that it would, presumably, ensure this.

But what if Don Juan refused to succeed Franco as a figurehead, on Franco's terms? What if the Spaniards who have been denied participation in government for 25 years don't agree with Franco's plans? And what if Franco should die suddenly, leaving the succession problem is worked out?

More and more Spaniards are worried by these uncertainties. After 25 years of Franco rule, they sense trouble ahead.

Common Mart In U.S. Eyes

Buffalo Courier-Express

There seems a general disposition among commentators in this country to assume that, in charting their economic course, the British will simply the same tests which they apply to foreign policy and military alliances.

If that be sound doctrine for Britain, why is it not sound doctrine for the United States? If, in order to meet the challenge of the European Common and her Continental allies must pool their economic resources in the Atlantic Community market, why would it not be to our own advantage—and to the advantage of our Canadian neighbors—to expand this market into a Atlantic Community Union? Would not the vast industrial and financial potential of such a combination overshadow Soviet efforts to surpass the free world in economic strength?

Would not an Atlantic Economic Union, furthermore, open the way for solution of the vexatious problem which long has vexed the United States—how to bring about the Common Market—namely, that of Commonwealth ties with the United Kingdom by providing for adherence to the union by such non-Atlantic members of the British Commonwealth as Australia and New Zealand, even India and Pakistan?

All these questions, of course, are complex. But it would seem that what is sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander—that what is good, public policy for our British and Continental European allies is good, public policy for ourselves. The usual American answer is: "Oh, but we are in a different position."

Maybe so; maybe so. Certainly, we would find ourselves in a position quite different from that of our friends in the prospectively enlarged European Common Market if and when it were wielded, as The New York Times envisages it, "into an economic colossus which would unite 300,000,000 people and would be potentially even stronger economically than the United States or Soviet Russia" — colossus which, "with the combined gold reserve already exceeding that of the United States, could even displace the dollar as a world currency."

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FILES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

The War Efforts Committee of the Canadian Jewish Congress is equalled by no other organization, or group of organizations, in the matter of providing comforts for Canada's Active Service Forces, Col. C. R. Hill, Auxiliary Services Officer at M. D. No. 2 Headquarters said, in paying tribute to this body of men and women. He said that in the past eighteen months, this organization had spent more than $50,000 on behalf of the messes and recreation rooms in this military district alone, in addition to supplying radios, pianos and phonographs for the benefit of troops in the area.

Peaches and apples were featured on a rather slimly attended Belleville market this morning with prices revealing at last Saturday's levels. Peaches were quoted at 40 cents for specials, while apples of all varieties ranged at 25 cents per basket. Tomatoes sold at 20 cents the basket and at 75 cents the bushel, while potatoes were quoted at 35 cents per peck and $1.25 per bushel. Eggs, as one of the best specimens of its kind ever caught in local waters, a 9½-pound small-mouthed black bass bids fair to eclipse all records hereabouts. Hooked by Frank Fillen in Brighton Bay, the black beauty gave Fillen a rare battle before being hauled into the boat. The black bass appear to be plentiful for days and many fine specimens weighing between two and three pounds have been caught by anglers of the district.

Most Hostesses Fuss Too Much For Guests

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Purely Personal Prejudices:

One of the most ridiculous social habits in American life is transferring the fork from the left hand to the right when picking up a piece of meat.

Women who are habitually late for engagements unconsciously dislike and resent men, no matter how much they may primp for them.

It always depresses me to hear an amateur playing cheap music: the majestic sonority of this instrument should be used for nothing less than Bach.

Whenever we are about to tag someone as a "crackpot," it would be well to keep in mind Bernard Shaw's trenchant remark: "The reasonable man adapts himself to the world; the unreasonable man persists in trying to adapt the world to himself. Therefore all progress depends on the unreasonable man."

People who like to put monograms on their personal possessions are engaging in vulgarity under the illusion that they are displaying exclusivity.

The only trait more annoying than the conceited one is a young person who thinks he knows all the answers to the smugness of an old person who refuses to listen to new questions.

One reason the Russians are gaining on us may be that they are developing their mathematical powers by teaching them chess at an early age, while we waste these talented sets and further sterility their thinking processes.

Most hostesses fuss too much over their guests. The famous Arabic Socrates said, "The best of the perfect formula for making guests feel welcome is to be glad when they arrive, and glad when they took their leave," she said "Always!"

Women who are addicted to wearing dresses with plunging necklines should have little that's worth plunging for.

As a class, the only men I have found who are vainer than actors and writers are professional Army officers...

For anyone aspiring to write fiction, there are only two worthwhile books out of the hundreds that purport to give advice on the difficult art — "Aspects of the Novel" by E. M. Forster and "The Craft of Fiction" by Percy Lubbock. The rest are a waste of time and money.

People who say "we had a fine time" can have it without me.

Steroid Hormones Hasten Healing in Sarcoidosis Case

By Joseph C. Hollister, M.D.

"Dear Dr. Molner: My sister-in-law has had a persistent cough. The doctor says it is sarcoidosis, but does not give any further explanation.

"What is sarcoidosis? Where does it come from — chickens? Is there any cure?

"And please tell me what iritis is. — C. M. C."

Sarcoidosis is a disease involving the formation of many small lumps, known as "tubercles," and for a time it was believed to be related to tuberculosis.

Today the belief is that it is entirely separate disease. The cause isn't known, but it occurs in nearly equal amounts. Because of this various pollens and oils from trees are being studied as a possible cause.

Anyway, it is most apt to occur between the ages of 20 and 30 or 40; and, for no known reason, it occurs more often in women. Sarcoidosis used to be considered rare, but continued study and awareness of it proves it is fairly common.

Whatever the cause, it can leave almost any part of the body, but the places it is most apt to be found are the lungs, skin, lymph nodes, eyes, and bone. Sometimes it is only a favorite spot for the disease. cough, shortness of breath, and weakness are symptoms that lead to X-rays, very often with the idea that it might be tuberculosis, but instead it proved to be sarcoidosis. (Examination of the skin of the lesion, and certain chemical tests makes the diagnosis positive.)

Treatment there's no specific remedy, but fortunately, although it is chronic, in most cases tends to clear itself up in the majority of cases. The one medicine which has proved its value in hastening the healing process is cortisone, and more accurately, the various steroid hormones of the cortisone family.

The question at the end of the letter about iritis makes me wonder whether this happens to be a case where involves the eye as well—but from this is quite possible.

"Iritis" is a term meaning inflammation of iris, or colored part of the eye. Sarcoidosis is one of many conditions which can inflame this part of the eye and hence cause iritis."

If this is the case, the steroid (cortisone) drugs are used promptly, to control the disease before the iritis has had time to scar the eye and to interfere with eyesight.

"Dear Dr. Molner: I was told it's a state law to remove the appendix when you are operated on for other surgery. Is this true? — Mrs. M. S."

No. It's a not uncommon practice if the operation in question makes removal of the appendix a simple matter.

* * *

"Dear Dr. Molner: Every time between my monthly period I have a fever blister which comes on the same place on my lip. They last a couple of days before, and doesn't go away for a couple of days. What can be done about it? — Mrs. I. K."

This is a form of Herpes simplex or, in everyday language, a cold sore. Occasionally it is very worrisome if the same area, timing co-ordinated with menstruation. There plenty of theories as to precisely why it happens, and quite possibly more than one reason, but I'm right — but I don't know which one.

* * *

Oddly enough, one of the things which has proved to be helpful in some cases is for the doctor to give several vaccinations with smallpox vaccine. This does not mean that the cold sore has any connection with smallpox. Nevertheless by some odd quirk of viruses, this works.

STRENGTH FOR THE DAY

DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS

LIFE'S PATTERNS

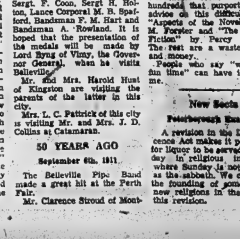
There are certain basic principles and assurances upon which we may base our lives. The first is that there is a lot of evil in the world and all of it will be well advised if we stay as far as possible out of its reach. The next principle is that there is a tremendous amount of good in the world. Both Christian believer and non-believer often amaze us by their willingness to sacrifice, by their kindness, by their devotion to good ends. The third thing we need to remember as we live our lives day by day is that life is a continuing struggle. God is under no obligation to make and keep our goals to achieve. This achievement may cost much in self effort and in gradual truth of all for us to keep in mind in our daily living is that if we put forth the best that we have and live, if we trust Him, if we try our best, then His blessing is promised and often we will fail we can be sure that a Power greater than ourselves will supplement our poor powers.

So be of good cheer. God fashioned us for triumph never for defeat. The God of Love can either help us overcome, or His part. Success and achievement are largely up to us.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

On the post office dock up in the resort country, I happened to sit down beside Professor Syria Benesly, one of the outstanding anatomists of this country; and I asked him a silly thing. I was sunburned from too much sailing, and I had a little touch of poison ivy on my left ankle, and I had broken a tooth off my dentures.



"Never mind," said Prof. Benesly. "Never forget your Hiss splendens!"

It sounded remarkable.

"When I first started to teach Human Anatomy," she said, "I discovered 100 Hiss splendens in an old obscure textbook. It lies within the spinal column, protected by bone and ligaments from all injury or even from destruction, in a groove on the spinal cord, and carries its magic message directly to the long switchboard that regulates most of our unconscious activities.

"It is made up of gossamer hopeless fibres, and the chemical polymers as strong as nylon. Nothing knew about it and about 99 per cent of humanity agree before man! This wonderful gossamer thread, which you can't see — how it must have glowed in the candle-light of the first anatomist to discover it!

"So, no matter how you fair" said Prof. Benesly, "just remember the linea splendens, the shining line, that ennobles you."

Weddings

ANDERSON — WILDMAN

RYLSTONE — A lovely wedding was solemnized in Campbellford Pentecostal Church recently when Clara May Wildman, daughter of Mrs. Mary Menzies of Havelock and the late Thomas Menzies, was united in marriage to Edson McKnown Anderson, eldest son of Mrs. Lily Anderson of Rylstone and the late Fred Anderson. The Rev. L. M. Horsby of the Pentecostal Church performed the ceremony.

The bride was lovely in a street-length mauve gown of nylon organza over nylon accordion lace over rayon taffeta, with a huge wide bow of nylon organza. She wore a large white picture hat and her corsage was of yellow roses with white stephanotis.

Her sister, Miss Birdie Menzies, of Havelock, was bridesmaid, attired in an apricot colored gown of flowered, embossed organdy over taffeta with a taffeta cummerbund. She wore a large picture hat of matching shade and her corsage was of mauve 'mums with white Pinochio 'mums.

After the ceremony, the reception was held in St. John's United Church parlors where the bride's mother received in a gown of mauve shade Arnel with an all-around pleated skirt, mauve hat and white accessories and a corsage of yellow 'mums. She was assisted in the receiving line by the groom's mother, who wore a brown-toned gown of Arnel with all-around pleated skirt.

Miss Margaret VanVolkenburg, niece of the bride, played wedding music while the guests were being received, and Miss Ruth Owens sang "Together."

Guests were present from Peterborough, Nephton, Havelock, Norwood, Lakefield, Rylestone and Springbrook.

On their return from their wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Anderson were entertained to a charivari and also at two showers in their honor, by the congregation of Campbellford Pentecostal Church and the Rylstone community.

BUSY LAWYER — Edythe MacDonald, 30, of Fort Garry, Man., studies law in her trade department office in Ottawa. A graduate of the University of Manitoba, she has been a lawyer for the federal trade and justice departments for the last four years. (CP Photo).

Woman Lawyer Making Mark In Two Federal Govt. Depts.

By DEIRDRE MUNGOVAN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA (CP)—Edythe MacDonald, a sparkling, hazel-eyed brunette, is making her mark as a lawyer in two federal government departments — justice and trade and commerce.

Since coming to Ottawa four years ago, a graduate of the University of Manitoba, she has found the field wide open for women.

"Provincially, women tend to be shifted to narrower fields," she said in an interview in her spacious office in the trade and commerce building. "But I thought government work would be more interesting. It involves most of the things done by lawyers in private practice."

Alternating between the two departments, the attractive 30-year-old woman has an opportunity to see most aspects of the legal profession from the criminal end to civil litigation and legal opinions.

In the justice department she works with the legislation section drafting laws for Parliament and regulations and ordinances for the Northwest Territories.

She occasionally travels outside the capital. She had drafted a child welfare ordinance to be presented to the summer meeting of the N.W.T. council and spent two weeks in Fort Simpson, living in a school hostel and attending meetings to help the department's legal adviser amend the draft.

There is only one other woman in the justice department's legal section and Miss MacDonald wonders why more women don't enter this field.

"I'm not a suffragette and don't feel I have to fight for my rights or anything like that. It's all a matter of using your head and women can use their heads as well as men. If you're trained to think legally, then you will think legally."

A native of Fort Garry, Man., she graduated from Manitoba as an honors arts student in English and history "with a minor sort of scholastic haul."

Her father, a retired Manitoba civil servant, encouraged her to take up law.

During her second and third years she won Imperial scholarships and in 1957 took the University Gold Medal and the Manitoba Law Society Gold Medal along with other awards.

Miss MacDonald was launched into the "intellectually stimulating working-out of legal problems" while articling with the law firm of Parker, Tallin and Company in Winnipeg.

Marriage would supplant her career but, she says, "I think every woman should have some sort of profession or training so that if by reason of circumstances she wants to return to the business world she has something to fall back on."

When not poring over legal books, Edythe MacDonald likes to whip exotic culinary treats to try out on friends. French onion soup au vin is her specialty — months parfait with wines and liqueurs are one of her favorite dinner menus.

She may be found putting to practice last winter's course in interior decorating. Her home, which she has furnished in a study in turquoise - walls highlighted by gold drapes, rugs and chesterfield.

An amateur dramatic actual-ist, she participates in short impromptu plays with her friends during the summer.

THE FAMILY COUNCIL

Rodney J. — She wants me to promise never strike your son.

Myrna J. — It's cruel and brutal. There are better ways to teach.

• • •

Rodney J. — Our baby is only 10 months old and can't sing us ragged. I realize he's still an infant and can't understand such things as day and night, meals and between-meals and the danger of putting your hand in a doggie's mouth.

Still, I think I could look forward to teaching Tommy a few rules of the game in a year or so. I had Myrna I'd use the method that worked on me — a slap or a spanking instead of a lot of talk. But Myrna is horrified. She says it's possible to raise an obedient boy without ever laying a hand on him. What do you do if he looks you in the eye and just says No?

• • •

Myrna J. — I think when a child knows you love him, he does what's right just to please you. You don't have to inflict pain on him to teach him. Love has tremendous power.

I want Rod to try raising Tommy my way, I don't see why, for example, he can't say things like, "Let's put the toys away now," instead of "Get those toys in the box before I spank you" as many parents do. And they usually put it to a child's toys away themselves in the end.

Tommy is a happy and intelligent baby. I want to keep him that way. He trusts Rod and me. It would upset him to have Rod force him to do things for no reason except that Rod's stronger.

• • •

The Council — Lucky little Tommy! At least his parents will present a united front, instead of undermining each other's authority in his presence. Boy are slugging it out theoretically instead of physically, which is the recommended course for dispatants, from nations on down to individuals. (Athletes, small boys and puppies excepted).

During Tommy's first year complete indulgence is doing him no harm and possibly a great good for he is storing up great gobs of that most precious boon for babies: a sense of safety. But before he's 6 his parents must provide the other essential a child is entitled to — a sense of direction. How then, do parents get across what Rod calls the "rules?"

Theoretically, Myrna's right. It should be possible to induce good behavior on a cause-and-effect basis that's purely logical. Tommy puts his toys away because he wants to find them tomorrow. Otherwise they may get broken or lost. But Tommy's no theory. He's a little boy who will say no. Why? He'll be overtired or ill. That's handled quietly.

He may be full o'beans at other times and testing h's parents. They have a choice of measures, best of which might be the deprivation of favorite things which "disappeared" because they weren't put away. Consequences must be as logical as possible, closely tied to the offence, and add up to an educational "experience" which induces subsequent compliance.

The rule of the thumb for Rod and Myrna is at least: Their goal for Tommy is eventual self-discipline. Enroute to that, discipline must be imposed. However, a lot of discipline comes "naturally." Tommy will learn, for example, that if he pushes his friends, they won't like him. Artificial discipline, through deliberate infliction of pain, may be justified only when the natural discipline would be too slow. Thus, a slap is preferable to letting a child find out that fire burns. Knives cut, cars run over and bees sting! Physical punishment is then a child's.

This modification on spanking — only against anger — may be hard for Myrna, but should ultimately satisfy all three of the J's.

The Experts Say

Timeless Basic Things Must Be in Trousseau

By EDNA BLAKELY

TORONTO (CP)—When a girl chooses her trousseau she should choose timeless basic things which will last the first few years of her marriage, advises shopping consultant Joan Sutton.

She offers this advice to September brides. Choose good accessories, they're the most important part of being well-dressed. Good basic jewelry, purses and belts are vital. "And never begin another outfit until the last one is complete," she says.

"This was probably the greatest fault of women shoppers. They bought on impulse without a sense of co-ordination and wound up with a cupboardful of clothes—none of them matching.

A trousseau, like any other well-planned wardrobe, should include a variety of styles. "Your man, women wear the same type of clothing all the time. There are days she feels tailored and days she feels like Brigitte Bardot and she should be able to express this in her clothes."

A wardrobe can be "pretty dreary" if it contains nothing but blacks, browns and greys, so she advises spicing it with color. "In fact, there's nothing the matter with having pink or any other color as the basic one."

The major trousseau investment should be the going-away outfit. A dress and jacket, suit and coat, or dress and coat "leads many lives and diminishes some of the packing problems."

A basic trousseau should include a coat, a knitted suit or dress, a dress and jacket in a fabric that goes from day to day to evening wear with just a change of accessories, separates and lingerie including one or two gowns or peignoirs.

This season's shoe fashions include a variety of toe shapes and there's a place for each. Pointed toes remain glamorous with evening wear and square toes are best for walking shoes. The shoe wardrobe should include a variety of heel heights too.

Colored shoes are fine, but not for short women, Mrs. Sutton says. "The color makes people look down and women under five feet should wear color on their head to make people look up."

An attractive going-away hat is a necessity and as a second hat Mrs. Sutton would choose a small cocktail hat with veiling "which is the most flattering thing a woman can wear."

When choosing her wedding dress, the bride should remember that most guests will see her in profile so she should strive for a beautiful silhouette. "And try for something that can be changed to a cocktail or evening dress later."

The bride should keep the satire wedding scene in mind and co-ordinate not only the colors that her bridesmaids will wear but those chosen by her own mother and the mother of the groom.

Mrs. Sutton advises girls to be practical about their wedding and not let it cause financial stress. "A small intimate wedding can have as much glamor as a large one."

(Second Weekly Instalment of Three)

Last week I gave you a Basic Many-Purpose Mix and added the recipes for Peach Cobbler and Pancakes, for which the basic ingredient is The Mix.

I promised to give you more variations in which The Mix can be utilized.

Now I have made two kinds of cookies and an applesauce cake.

COOKIES (2 variations)

Three cups All-Purpose Mix (given Monday, August 28th) 1 cup sugar, 1 cup quick-cooking oats, ½ cup chopped walnuts, ¼ teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon cinnamon, 1 egg, 1/2 cup water. Stir together Mix, sugar, oats, walnuts, salt and cinnamon. Beat egg and add water to it. Add to dry ingredients and mix well. This is a stiff cookie dough. Now divide it in half. Shape one half into 1" balls between your palms and place on greased cookie sheet. Flatten somewhat with floured fork. Bake at 400 deg. Fahr. for 8 or 9 minutes. This amount makes 30 cookies.

To second half of dough add: ½ cup cocoanut, 1 square melted chocolate. Mix well. Form into 1" balls between palms and place on greased cookie sheet. Flatten with floured fork. Bake at 400 deg. Fahr. 8 or 9 minutes. Makes 30 cookies.

APPLESAUCE (OR BANANA) CAKE

Three cups Basic Mix (given August 28th), 1 cup sugar, ½ teaspoon cinnamon, ½ teaspoon allspice, 1½ cups canned applesauce or unsweetened, beaten homemade applesauce or mashed and beaten ripe banana, ½ cup water, 2 tablespoons salad oil, 2 eggs. Add sugar and spices to Basic Mix and blend well. Beat the eggs and add water to them and the salad oil and applesauce (or beaten banana) and mix. Add half of this liquid mix to dry ingredients and blend well. Add remaining liquid and stir. Pour into 2 greased 8" layer cake pans, lined with wax paper and bake at 375 deg. Fahr. for 30 minutes (Or, bake in 9 x 9 x 2" pan about 50 minutes). Frost when cool. Either White Butter or Lemon Frosting is good: Cream ¼ cup butter or margarine and beat in 3 cups sifted icing sugar and 3 tablespoons cream and 1 teaspoon vanilla or lemon juice until of spreading consistency.

Next week I will give you more interesting products made from Basic Mix.

Widow First Woman in Que. History to Become Chairman

ST. RAPHAEL, Que. (CP)—Mrs. Adelard Jolin, a widow whose three children have died, is the first woman in the history of Quebec province to become chairman of a school commission.

She became chairman of the commission in this village of 1,100 as the result of a new women property owners to vote and to stand for election to school commissions.

Owner of a 100-year-old home in this Bellechasse County village, 30 miles east of Quebec City, where she and her mother were born, Mrs. Jolin stood for election and won. A few days later she was unanimously named chairman by the other commissioners.

A widow since 1955, Mrs. Jolin lost her third child, a 19-year-old daughter who had been an invalid all her life, last February.

"It was after the death of my husband and my two other children that I started to be interested in parish affairs," said Mrs. Jolin, a slim, bespectacled woman.

Mrs. Jolin is already president of the Federation of Farm Circles for Bellechasse and Dorchester Counties and secretary-treasurer of an old people's home she helped start.

She says she's not quite sure how she became president of the school commission whose function is to handle the administration end of education.

"To tell the truth, events pushed me towards one thing, then I was dragged towards another and all that I hope is that I will never fail those who have given me their confidence."

In office for a three-year term, she says the wants to see the village children receive more education and better facilities.

"There is an enormous task awaiting us, but the people of the village are well disposed to give us their entire co-operation."

Successful Living

By Doris Clark

(A Canadian Social Worker Helps with Human Problems)

The Boy Next Door

DORIS CLARK

DEAR DORIS:—A series of events in my life led me to see a psychiatrist. I have been going to him for a year and he has helped me quite a lot. The thing that has disturbed me through the psychotherapy is the fear that I might fall in love with him.

I have tried several times to speak about this but the conversation ends in shrugs or an "I don't know" attitude. I am now thinking of leaving him because of this. What is your opinion?—PSYCHO.

DEAR PSYCHO:—Grateful women have been "falling in love" with their male benefactors — be they doctors, lawyers, clergymen or cavemen — through the years.

You have poured out your heart to your psychiatrist. He has shown understanding of problems and made you feel worthwhile. He is a dominant male in your life — temporarily.

As he releases you from your fears, you will find yourself more able to accept life as it is lived in your own circle. You will once more see virtue and charm in those who share your diversions, your church, your work.

Since he is helping, stay with him until you are emotionally well.

* * *

DEAR DORIS:—I am a girl of 14 and I like a boy 16. He is going steady with my best friend. She knows I like him as much as she does.

They have broken up twice now, and he has asked me to go steady both times, but then he goes back with the other and makes me feel awful. I still like him as much as I ever did and I know he still likes me. What should I do?—JUNE.

DEAR JUNE:—How unsteady can steady be? Your gay Lothario is having it all his own way.

The trouble with both of you is that you need to have several friends. Next time he asks you to go steady tell him it's fashionable now to play the field. And try it. You can like others too.

SPEAKING of MANNERS

PATRICIA LEWIS

WHAT'S YOUR E.Q.?

When you go to the theatre, do you try to get into the act? Good manners make a show more enjoyable for everyone, whether behind the footlights or out front. How do yours stand up in the spotlight?

1. Do you arrive after the show begins?
2. If it's a musical, do you sing along with the hits?
3. If it's a drama, do you comment out loud on acting techniques?
4. If it's a comedy, do you roll in the aisle to prove you get the point?
5. If someone flubs a line, do you make a big toe-hee about it, so everyone will be sure to notice?
6. Suppose you do know one of the actors personally. Do you have to announce it out loud in the middle of his big scene?
7. Do you cough the minute the curtain goes up and continue to cough, and cough, and cough?
8. Do you rattle your program, or candy wrappers during a performance?
9. Do you sit stock still and let others climb over you to reach their seats?
10. If you don't like the play, do you compellin in a stage whisper up to the final curtain?

SCORING:

If you answer yes to every question, you rate a nasty review from both cast and audience. Half yes, half no? You still lack theatrical polish. All no? You deserve a standing ovation as a playgoer.

Judge's Decision on Union Affects $700,000 Control, Fate of 17,000 Members

TORONTO (CP)—Chief Justice J. C. McRuer today rules Lumber Local 2995 of the International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers (Ind.) or the union's national executive takes over the local's affairs.

At stake is the local's bankroll of some $700,000 and, for the national executive, possible loss of 17,000 members, more than half the 33,000 members of Mine-Mill in Canada.

Local 2995 officials under President Don Gillis have been dickering quietly with the Canadian Labor Congress and the United Steelworkers of America (CLC) on possible re - entry into the CLC. CLC officials have said that can only be done through affiliation with the Steelworkers, given Mine - Mill's jurisdiction when that union was ousted from the old Canadian Congress of Labor in 1956.

The national and local groups argued their cases Tuesday before the chief justice and he promised a decision for today. The squabble was taken to him after an injunction last week prohibited the Sudbury local's headquarters in no-man's land to the warring factions. The local's membership and dues accounts were impounded.

Today was the scene of violence 31 days ago when the national executive took over these accounts and set up its own office out of office and appointing an administrator to take over its affairs.

The national executive ordered the hearing Tuesday, asking that the administrator, William Keenedy, be allowed to handle the local affairs without interference.

Local 2995 asked that the takeover attempt be declared illegal and that its officers be allowed back in control.

Counsel for the national executive, Aubrey Golden, asked for local 2995 Sydney Robins.

On the question of Local 2995 joining the Steelworkers, a longstanding line of Mine - Mill, Chief Justice McRuer said he would not decide whether there could not be some way of finding out the wishes of the majority of the workers.

If the majority wanted to go to Steel why keep them in Mine-Mill? he asked.

Mr. Golden replied that they were free to walk out individually, but he suggested Mr. Justice should not be expected to participate in a move that could tend to destroy the union.

Mr. Robins said the appointment of the administrator was illegal because the order supersedes the election that was issued before they received a hearing. He said "there was a determination . . . disregard the rights of the Sudbury executive and of the membership."

Mr. Golden said the Sudbury executive's actions ahead at getting the local back into the CLC apparently was a raid by the Steelworkers.

Affidavits were introduced from Thomas Taylor, who signed 598 executive member, that a "secret agreement" existed between the local executive and such officials as CLC President Claude Jodoin, Steelworkers Director Bill Mahoney and Vice-President Frank Dodge, CLC executive vice-president, as telling one such affidavit, that Local 2995 could only get into the CLC by eventually becoming part of the Steel union.

Passenger Car For Every 4.5 Persons Report

TORONTO — The Canadian Automobile Chamber of Commerce's annual publication of automotive statistics was released today. The 1961 edition of Facts and Figures of the Automotive Industry reveals that more than 3½ million vehicles are in use including 4 million passenger cars. The handbook shows that the trend toward motor vehicle ownership and use continues to grow at a rapid rate in Canada in 1960. There is a vehicle for every 3.4 persons and a passenger car for every 4.5 persons.

Canadians bought more cars and trucks last year than in any other previous year, 447,771 cars and 75,417 commercial vehicles were sold with a combined retail value of $1.6 billion. Facts and Figures also reports that over 4½ million persons hold drivers and chauffeurs' licenses. They drove over 43 billion miles and all vehicles consumed 3.5 billion gallons of gasoline.

Among other highlights in the 44 pages of authoritative statistics on the automotive industry and highway transportation are:

Average monthly employment by vehicle makers was 32,223 and annual payroll was $168,460,894.

342,297 cars and 41,025 trucks and buses were scrapped.

67% of all households have one or more automobiles — 7% have two or more.

Provincial governments collected $370.8 million in gasoline tax revenues and registration fees.

340,025 vehicles were imported into Canada from all countries.

Highway and rural road mileage was 423,035.

Also available from the C.A.C.C. is a booklet giving 1961 provincial licence fees as well as safety requirements and size and weight regulations for commercial vehicles.

Columbia River Impasse Subsides Into Political Warfare Between Govts.

OTTAWA (CP)—The Columbia River impasse—temporarily at least—has subsided into political French warfare between the federal and British Columbia governments.

The lull may be short.

Premier Bennett of B.C. is busily consolidating his latest foray into the field of public ownership, the expropriation of the British Columbia Electric Company and the Peace River project.

The federal forces are sizing up their position accordingly, in the light of Mr. Bennett's parent' desire to forge ahead with the Peace River for provincial use while the $458,000,000 Columbia scheme of hydro and flood control would proceed only if the federal ban on big power projects is lifted.

The next step could be nothing more militant than another letter Minister Fleming sends Mr. Bennett—a dozen have been prepared. Probably Mr. Bennett would lob out right back as he has before."

The B.C. premier would probable if some views prevail with the over-all strategy designed to make any collapse of the Columbia appear to be solely Mr. Bennett's thing.

The government is still studying a report to Mr. Bennett on the economic feasibility of developing the Peace River at this time.

Informants said Tuesday that material is being collected to establish the theory that the Peace power can be competitive with the Columbia in cost, even granting some exaggerations in the positions of the federal large scale B.C. operation.

The Ottawa atmosphere is in contrast to the enthusiasm prevailing when the 60-year Columbia treaty was signed in Washington last January and quietly ratified by the U.S.

The failures of Prime Minister Diefenbaker and former President Eisenhower were barely dry when the rift widened in the positions of the federal an B.C. governments.

Mr. Bennett first rejected the federal offer of a $172,000,000 loan to help defray the cost of three storage dams on the Columbia.

Mr. Bennett wanted a direct grant and then moved to the position where the B.C. share of American power — down-stream benefits—would be sold to the U.S.

The federal government has stuck with its offer as a most generous one. There is no sign that it plans to climb the policy first followed by the Liberal government in banning large-scale hydro-power exports.

Essentially, the Ottawa view is that the Columbia impasse is a political one which assumes this appearance in the anti-Bennett campaign.

The B.C. premier's honor is at stake in pushing development of the Peace whatever happens to the Columbia, with fresh sources of power sought from power exports.

Mr. Bennett lacks the market potential or the economic facts and figures to justify export sales.

Finally, it is held, the federal government won't stand or fall on what happens to the Columbia River scheme. But its failure to materialize in B.C. would be a much more important political question for the Social Credit government.

Freedom of Speech Issue In B.C. Anti-Picketing Law

VANCOUVER (CP)—The Supreme Court of Canada was asked to decide whether British Columbia's 18 - month - old anti-picketing legislation represents an invalid restriction on the freedom of speech.

The issue arises from the case of Mercy Kozak, sentenced by court injunction from patrolling the sidewalk in front of a midtown Vancouver construction project carrying a sign which said: "Non - union men are working here."

Kozak is sometimes accompanied by an unidentified companion. There was no evidence that either belonged to a union.

The B.C. Court of Appeal recently by a 4-to-1 majority that although Kozak's conduct published by Kozak was true and no suggestion was brought that he committed, his action is forbidden by a provision of the 1960 B.C. Trade Unions Act, known as Bill 43.

Mr. Justice T. G. Norris, in a dissenting judgment, held that Kozak's conduct was exempted from the prohibition as an "important incident of Canadian citizenship" — the freedom to disseminate information of public interest.

CANNOT PERSUADE

The Trade Union Act says that except where there is a strike or lockout, no person shall "persuade or endeavor to persuade" anyone not to enter any employer's place of business, not to do business with any person or not to buy any of his products.

Kozak's counsel, T. G. Berger, dian citizenship."

Prairie Drought Advances Normal Marketing of Beef

OTTAWA (CP)—The Prairie drought has advanced the normal marketing date for beef by about three months with the resulting smaller sales so far, federal agriculture officials said today.

They were commenting on expanded receipts at stockyards and packing plants, up generally for the first 34 weeks of 1961 compared with the previous year.

But they said the big test will be this autumn when cattle rail. low balance their herds against available fodder. The only danger then, it was agreed today, is that the pipeline to market will finishing lots may become plugged unless discretion was used by beef growers.

Even at that, the North American cattle pool would anchor the price pretty strongly either now or next year.

Since the United States and Canada's beef cattle industries are closely interlocked, it will take much more pressure than the Prairie drought to change the price structure rasterially, they said. The U.S. was relatively unaffected by the drought except for isolated areas.

Up to Aug. 26, Canadian shipments to public stockyards and to packing plants totaled 1,195,500 head, an increase of 7.3 per cent on 1960.

Much steeper was the increase in cattle destined for pre-market fattening in Eastern Canada or the U.S. the 1961 total so far is 22.2 per cent on 1960.

Inspected slaughter classes also rose in the 34 weeks ending Aug. 26, totalling 1,304,900 head or an increase of 4.6 per cent. Eastern Canada actually declined but western sales were sharply higher.

Beef cattle sales to the U.S. totalled nearly 100,000 head or an increase of 2.6 per cent, most of the rise coming in the first few weeks. Feeder classes predominate as usual.

CBRT Turns Down Attack On Leadership

MONTREAL (CP) — The national convention of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers (CLC) today prepared to resume its regular business after a day taken up by an almost unprecedented attack on the national union leadership.

The attack was made during an appeal against expulsion from the CBRT by a former Toronto local chairman. Larry Stockwell spoke for more than five hours in a bid to have Union President W. J. (Bill) Smith repudiated and himself reinstated.

When he had finished, no more than two dozen of the 625 delegates present supported his stand.

Mr. Stockwell, originally expelled from the union last June after a three - man board appointed by the national office convicted him of five violations of the constitution, left no doubt in the minds of the assembling defence that he wanted the delegates to choose between him and the executive.

WANTS THROWN OUT

"Throw out the demagogues," he said. "Take away from them the cross of crucifixion where the machine has hung you."

He called Mr. Smith "dangerously stupid . . . a blunderer . . . a bungler . . . a coward" and the sort of man who "brought Hitlerism to Germany and Stalinism to Russia."

In reply, National Secretary D. N. Secord charged Mr. Stockwell with "an attempt to destroy the brotherhood . . . a campaign of vilification and destruction . . ."

Mr. Secord, he said, was a perhaps unknowing "stooge" of two "so-called unions" who oppose the CBRT—the Canadian International Union and the International Brotherhood of Teamsters.

In an interview after the vote, Mr. Stockwell charged any connection with either the SIU or the Teamsters.

THINKS FAIR

He said he thought he had received a reasonably fair hearing at the convention and that his decision on whether to continue the campaign against the union leadership would depend upon his supporters in Toronto Local 36, whose 1,500 members form the second-largest local in the 35,000-member CBRT.

Mr. Stockwell is the third man to be expelled from the CBRT in its 33-year history.

Veteran delegates likened his speech to the appeal made by onetime national secretary Jim McGuire in 1953, which ended in the same way.

Ironically, Mr. Smith himself was once expelled from the union for a brief period in the 1930s when he was charged with organizing for another union within the CBRT membership.

No Room for Complacency Despite Low TB Death Rate Now Existing in Canada

OTTAWA (CP)—Canada has one of the world's lowest TB death rates but there is no room for complacency, says Dr. G. J. Wherrett, executive secretary of the Canadian Tuberculosis Association.

One reason is that more resistence is noted to the antibiotics that have revolutionized TB treatment.

Dr. Wherrett will preside over the 16th International Tuberculosis Conference opening in Toronto Sept. 10, the first time it has been held in Canada.

Interviewed here before the conference, he said more than 200 papers will be read and more than 60 countries represented, including; it is hoped, the Soviet Union, Communist China, North Viet Nam, Korea, Japan, France and other European countries.

TB in economically underdeveloped areas of the world continues to be a major cause of death, Dr. Wherrett said. Perhaps 30,000,000 of India's 400,000,000 people are active cases, and one in seven is nine residents of Hong Kong is tuberculor.

PROBLEMS

Canada, with a TB record surpassed only by the Scandinavians or the Dutch and the Netherlands, had 823 cases in 6,345 new cases last year.

This constituted a death rate of 4.6 per 100,000. The highest rate—and the most spectacular progress in the past 20 years—has been among Indians and Eskimos.

The death rate in 1945 for them was 379.1 per 100,000 Last year it was 69.2—a 5½-fold rise about the level in all Canada 10 years ago.

Ambulant therapy—the use of antibiotics to subdue the TB bacillus—has replaced surgery generally in Western treatment but hazards remain.

Dr. P. E. Moore, director of the northern and Indian health services for the national health department, said the bacillus is building up resistance to some forms of antibiotics.

Secondly, treatment of, TB by pill after a period in hospital liswelled up to 1½ to two years of disciplined self - medication. There was no guarantee that TB patients would carry out the program properly at home, especially among Indians and Eskimos.

For this reason, Indian and Eskimo cases had to be "overtreated," kept for longer periods in hospital. Then doctors had to assume that adequate diet was followed when they returned home.

The big problem for non-Western nations usually is the same that faced Canada years ago—getting the incidence and death rate under control. Canada's work among its northern population provided valuable information for other countries, including the adaptation of x-ray equipment for handling and use in remote areas.

Record Fatality List Made Over Holiday

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

A record 82 persons died accidentally during the summer's last holiday weekend from 6 p.m. Friday to midnight Monday.

The total—swelled by late reports—surpassed the two the record set last year for the three-day Labor Day weekend.

A Canadian Press survey showed 62 died in traffic accidents—the same number as last year.

Seventeen drowned and 13 died in miscellaneous accidents including a plane crash near Brockville 5 (3); Manitoba five (1); Saskatchewan 3 (3); British Columbia 6 (4).

The list does not include natural deaths, known suicides or industrial accidents.

Uncommitted Nations Pick Crucial Time for Appeal

By DAVE OANCIA
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The uncommitted nations could hardly have picked a better—or more inopportune—time to use their influence to move international relations out of the gun-toting stage.

It should only be a matter of weeks before the results of their efforts become apparent. The prospects are hardly encouraging.

The Soviet Union this week exploded the latest nuclear device of a new series deep in the wilds of Siberia. It has so far given no indication of easing the pressure of—as Prime Minister Diefenbaker called it—the "neurasgic point" of Berlin.

It was against this background that the 25 nations meeting in Belgrade put the finishing touches to Premier Khrushchev and President Kennedy pleading with them to reduce the danger of nuclear war over Berlin.

Their appeal essentially will be that the East-West tensions should be subject to the rule of international law.

Peace between the major powers now is precariously based on a balance of terror backed by nuclear weapons capable of wiping out the largest cities with a single blow.

It's an uneasy peace compared to the gun-pointed justice of the wild West. Then the most powerful, the quickest on the draw was the most ruthless and made the rules that often took advantage of their weaker brethren.

It was a gradual process, but in the 19th century the system took over, the weapons were put away, a society was developed in which the strong and the weak were made equal before the law.

This goal is the hope for the world expressed in the final speech of the Belgrade conference.

In his Winnipeg speech last week, Prime Minister Diefenbaker observed that the true expression of legal supremacy was that the framework of freedom and security is firmly laid nationally when law operates to limit power and maintain justice.

"It could be equally true internationally if nations could agree to settle disputes by the arbitration of law," he said.

The company said Tuesday the plant will be built on a 20-acre site in the Scarborough area and will be ready for operation in the spring of 1963.

The new plant will replace the company's present facilities in Toronto and will employ about 1,000 persons.

Maris In Slump

Mick Likes Big Stick

By JOE REICHLER

NEW YORK (AP) — A heavier bat and a lighter swing have powered Mickey Mantle back into the home run race for Babe Ruth's celebrated 60.

The Yankees outfielder, in a dramatic return to the theme Tuesday night, hammered the first pitch served him by Washington's Joe McClain for a tremendous home run. It was Mickey's 52nd of the season, putting him even with Ruth's record pace of 1927.

Roger Maris, his slugging twin, again went hitless and his homer total remained at 51. He now is only four games ahead of Ruth's pace.

Mickey in three other times at bat, filed deep to left, singled and drew his 126th walk of the season to help Yankees defeat the Senators 4-1.

Despite a pulled muscle of the left arm, sustained last Saturday, Mantle is as hot as the weather. Tuesday night's homer was his fifth in his last six games, not including a couple of fooling appearances for defensive purposes last Sunday. Maris, on the other hand, has gone hitless in his last 15 times at bat.

CHANGES BAT

"Normally, I use a 33- or 34-ounce bat," Mantle said. "But after I hurt the arm, I found that the pain became more severe when I missed a swing. So last Sunday, I borrowed Bob Cerv's 36 - ounce bat, the heaviest on the club. I was forced to swing easier because I couldn't get it around as quick."

Mantle smashed two home runs with Cerv's bat Sunday and decided to use it again Tuesday night.

"I'm going to stick with Bob's bat until I stop hitting, even after the arm is fully healed."

Maris is not very depressed by his batting slump.

"That's Maris," he declared. "Next week, I'm going great, the next week, I'm horsefeathers."

Patterson Fight Approved

HERSHEY, Pa. (AP)—Eddie Quinn, who has promoted all of Montrealer Bob Cleroux's fights, said Tuesday night that so definite plans have been made for a match between Cleroux and heavyweight champion Floyd Patterson.

The National Boxing Association at its annual convention Monday approved a proposed fight between Patterson and Cleroux, with ranks fifth in the heavyweight listings.

"It's still in the embryo stage," Quinn stated, adding that he plans to fly to New York today to "talk to some television people about such a fight."

Gene Letourneau, commissioner of the Canadian Boxing Federation, predicted that the Patterson-Cleroux battle would be fought "some time next year" in Montreal.

Davis Cup Upsets

FOREST HILLS, N.Y. (AP)—The United States Davis Cup picture was thrown into further confusion Tuesday when Donald Dell of Bethesda, Md., upset sixth-seeded Frank Froehling in the third round of the national tennis championships.

In a battle of titanic services under the scrutiny of the Davis Cup brass, Dell hammered America's bright new prospect into submission 11-9, 10-8, 6-1. Froehling, limping from leg cramps, put up little resistance in the third set.

Francois Godbout of Waterloo, Que., was defeated by John Sharpe of Edinburgh, Tex., 8-6, 6-4, 3-6, 6-2 and Marian Boundy of Montreal was cut down by fifth-seeded Margaret Smith of Australia 6-1, 6-0.

Darlene Hard of Montebello, Calif., defending women's champion and No. 1 seed, had a slight scare but steadied for a 6-2, 4-6, 6-4 victory over Judy Alvarez of Tampa, Fla., to reach the round of 16.

Ricky Locke To Try Out With Marauders

HAMILTON (CP)—Big news in the camp of McMaster University Marauders of the senior Intercollegiate Football Union Tuesday was that Ding Galgani and Lou Jarnbeck would join the squad on transfer from the University of Western Ontario.

Galgani is a speedy halfback who starred at Cathedral High School alongside Mozo Politano, now with Montreal Alouettes of the Eastern Conference. Jarnbeck is a rugged fullback also Hamiltonian.

Coach Bobby Dawson welcomed 15 returnees from last year's Marauders and 27 newcomers. Another 12 newcomers are expected later.

The new candidates include Murray Lechtzerwry of Welland, Ricky Locke of Belleville, Ralph Southward and Al Greenleaf of St. Catharines and Bruce Clark of Orillia.

Detroit Manager Says

Arroyo Beat The Tigers

BALTIMORE (AP)—With due respect to Mickey Mantle and Roger Maris, manager Bob Scheffing of Detroit Tigers says it was New York relief pitcher Luis Arroyo who led the Yankees to a three game weekend sweep over the Tigers.

"His won two games and saved the other," Scheffing told the Baltimore Sports Reporters Association Tuesday. "For the season, Arroyo has won 13 games and saved about 26 others.

Scheffing said Arroyo has "beaten me everywhere I've been (in the National and Pacific Coast Leagues)" and is doing holding different this year.

"Actually, Arroyo has better control now," Scheffing said. "He always did throw that screwball, but for a while he couldn't get it over the plate and had to come over with his other pitches."

The Detroit manager admitted that the Tigers, now 7½ games behind the Yanks, would have a tough time catching up in the last of the season.

"They (the Yanks) will have to hit a snag," he said. "They haven't had one all season."

CHAMP BEATS CUBAN

SAINT JOHN, N.B. (CP)—Canadian featherweight champion Dave Hilton of Saint John, Tuesday night won a first-round knockout over Cuban Billy Reynolds in a scheduled 10-rounder. Hilton had Reynolds staggering from the first bell and had no difficulty putting him away.

"Cookie" Leads Big Four

TORONTO (CP) — Versatile Cookie Gilchrist, Toronto Argonauts' power running fullback and their field goal and convert-kicking ace, has taken over the Big Four individual scoring leadership in his bid to win the title for the third successive year.

Statistics compiled by The Canadian Press show the six-foot-two import leading with 78 points on one touchdown, five field goals, five converts and two singles in four games. He added six points on a field goal, two converts and a single as the third-place Argos lost 22-19 to Hamilton Tiger-Cats Monday.

Gilchrist, third a week ago, has moved four points ahead of George Scott, Hamilton import halfback. Ron Stewart, Ottawa Rough Riders' speedy, home-brew backfielder, and halfback Gerry McDougall of the Tiger-Cats. McDougall came from far back with two touchdowns in Hamilton's 30-9 win over Winnipeg Blue Bombers last Thursday to tie Scott and Stewart for second place. Each has four touchdowns for 24 points.

Quarterback has been held scoreless in Hamilton's last two games and Stewart, suffering from a leg injury, has missed a game.

Gary Schreiber of Ottawa kicked a field goal and three converts as the Rough Riders defeated Montreal Alouettes 25-24 Saturday to remain in fifth place with 23 points.

Both Ottawa and Montreal have played five games, one more than Hamilton and Toronto.

LIONS OBTAIN VETERAN

DETROIT (AP) — Detroit Lions Tuesday traded end Steve Junker to Washington Redskins for fullback John Olszewski, a nine - year National Football League veteran. Junker's play has been limited since 1958 because of an injured knee.

HABS SIGN COLLEGIAN

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal Canadiens of the National Hockey League Tuesday announced the signing of Bill Masterton, 22, a centre from Winnipeg, to a professional contract. He played last year with Denver University and was rated a key man in the university's drive to the U.S. collegiate championship.

The Trots

A four-horse roll marked the $32,462 Horseman Futurity Pace, the other grand circuit feature in the Indiana State Fair program. Tarport Jimmy was declared winner after the dust cleared. Del Miller, driving Meadow Chuck, was injured in the spill but not seriously.

Spectator, with Hanph Baldwin driving to his fifth victory in the event in six years, edged Harlan Dean by less than a nose in the first heat.

Ruth Era Ball Said Lighter

CHICAGO (AP) — A woman scientist said Tuesday there is a distinct difference between today's major league baseballs and those of Babe Ruth's day.

Dr. Caroline Miller of the Illinois Institute of Technology has made preliminary tests of baseballs, prompted by the prospect of the Yankees' Roger Maris or Mickey Mantle breaking Babe Ruth's classic 60-homer record of 1927.

Dr. Miller said that the 1927 sample weighed almost a quarter - ounce less than the officially specified five-ounce minimum.

The cork composition core was much heavier and denser than that of the 1961 ball and was more heavily impregnated with a rubber-like material.

The black rubber layer over the core of the 1927 ball had no characteristic red "marker" between the halves.

In spite of its age, the cotton yarn in the 1927 ball was slightly more elastic and had a greater breaking strength than that in either the 1930 or 1961 baseballs.

Dr. Miller, a chemical engineer, said the test series will require several weeks to complete.

Actual liveliness tests of the type of ball Ruth hit 60 home runs with in 1927 await the construction of a special impact machine.

Manufacturers claim that baseballs are made the same today as in 1927.

Parker Tops Western Conference

EDMONTON (CP) — Jackie Parker's squeaker of a field goal that gave Edmonton Eskimos a 10-9 win over Calgary Stampeders Monday raised his point total for the season to 52, tops in the Western Football Conference.

Quarterback-halfback Parker now has kicked eight field goals in six games for 34 points and also has kicked 16 converts. He leads the league in both departments. He also has 12 points from two touchdowns.

Nobody else is close to Parker in the kicking department. Carver Shannon of Winnipeg and Reg Whitehouse of Saskatchewan have each kicked three field goals while Whitehouse has converted nine touchdowns.

Veteran Edmonton fullback Johnny Bright maintained his grip on second place by scoring a touchdown against Calgary to bring his total to 42, accounted for by seven touchdowns.

Winnipeg Blue Bombers halfback Leo Lewis has six touchdowns for 36 points, scored in three if the seven games he has played.

Red Wings Sign Sawchuk

DETROIT (AP)—Terry Sawchuk, dean of National Hockey League goaltenders, today spiked reports he would retire by signing his 1963-64 contract with Detroit Red Wings.

Sawchuk again is expected to share the job with Hank Bassen. Both helped Detroit into the Stanley Cup final last spring before the Wings were beaten by Chicago.

There was considerable speculation that the 33-year-old Sawchuk didn't like the two-goalie system and would retire. But he signed for his 12th NHL campaign, the 10th with Detroit.

Red Wings, who start practice Saturday, have 11 signed players.

The Tracks

TORONTO (CP) — Old Woodbine Park's program of eight races was run off in two hours and 35 minutes Tuesday.

Track officials announced there will be only a 25 - minute interval between races throughout the remainder of the meeting. Normally, races are run at 30 - minute intervals on North American tracks.

Tuesday's feature race, the Claocarrig Purse, was won by Vogel's Victor, claimed by Hume Pollock of Toronto for $3,500 June 8. Since then the horse has won three races and has been racing in the $10,000 class.

Ridden by Chris Rogers, Vogel's Victor defeated Leon K by 2½ lengths. Castleberry finished third. Vogel's Victor paid $34.10 to win and combined with Leon K for a quinella of $173.70.

It was the first win of the meeting for Rogers, who returned to Canadian tracks recently after a lengthy career in the United States.

Yanks Widen Gap; Mantle Hits No. 51

Sport Slices...

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

Yankee lovers are yippy-ky-kying and the faithful of the faltered Tigers are deep in despair hoping for that miracle the Senguls need to put them back in the running. And from here it looks as though the Ball-dazing Bombers of the Bronx should nail the American League bunting to the staff in Yankee Stadium.

I talked with several sportsmen during the vacation junket to the Maritimes and the Rhumcon of Halifax, the herring chicken of Montreal and a canny Celt from Cape Breton were all impressed with the Yankee power. None of them doubted the Houkmen would win the pennant and the series.

Mantle and Maris? They were divided on this question. The older people, sentimental perhaps, did not think the M. and M. twins would crack the Ruthian record. The younger fry thought differently.

Time is closing in on the Bomber blasters. Both lost ground in their efforts to equal or surpass the Babe's mark in Monday's twin bill with the Washington Senators. (This is being written before last night's results were on the wire). Yet Washington pitchers have been the most generous of the American League lot to M. and M. They have allowed 18 homers in 16 games, 10 for Mantle and eight for Maris.

As of Monday night Maris has hit 52 home runs in 129 games and was six games ahead of the 1927 pace set by Ruth who connected for his 52rd in the Yankees' 142rd game. Unless Mantle hit one last night he is all-even with the Babe who did not hit his 59th until the team's 138th game.

Most love the Chicago hurlers. They have clouted up 12 homers on pitches to the handsome Ralph while the best the Mick could do was four.

The Baltimore and Detroit hurlers have been the stingiest to the M.-Squad. The Oriole comedians have allowed them only five homers of which Maris has pickled up one. The Tiger staff has given up five to Mick and four to the Mick.

No pitcher in the league has given up more than three circuit blows to either slugger. Eli Grba of Los Angeles has allowed three to Mantle, two to Maris. Pete Burnside of Washington and Jim Perry of the Indians have each been victimized thrice by Maris and once by Mantle.

And while on the subject, oldtimers will remember Benny Hadley, the star Washington hurler of 1927 when the Babe cracked his record. Bump has the honor of being one of the rare hilltoppers who did not give up a home run to the Bambino. Hadley had a 14-6 record in that year with two victories over the Yankees.

> "If Ruth had bounced off me at least I would have ended up with my picture on the wall of his apartment" Hadley said the other day. "Ruth had pictures of all the pitchers he hit in the league on the wall together. It was a beautiful thing. The names and dates and locations were under each picture."

Hadley said he had no pitching secret against Ruth. "In fact I might have walked him as many times as I got him out. I tried to throw mostly breaking stuff. I'd try to keep the ball below his belt and in tight. If you should make a slip and make a pitch over the outside half of the plate, it was gone."

> "Ruth used to pull a lot of pitches out of the park, too," Hadley said. "You wouldn't believe a ray could hit a few pitch that high and that far, but the Babe could."

"In 1926 I was brought up to the Senators for a look-see. In my first game I was sent in from the bullpen against the Yankees. Ruth lofted a home-loaded double off me and the next day I was back in the minors."

"Mickey Mantle or Roger Maris or both may break Ruth's record. That won't take anything away from Ruth. The Babe always will be remembered and he'll always be the number One guy with the fans."

L.A. Rookie Hit Sensation

By ED WILKS
Associated Press Staff Writer

The American League is so dominated by New York Yankees that even youngsters who've traded around in the standing take the record book.

While Mickey Mantle belted his 51st home run of the season and New York opened a 7½ - game lead in the pennant chase with a 9-4 victory over Washington, Senators, Los Angeles rookie Bo Belinsky, who started the season with the Yankees, tied the major league record with nine hits in a double - header for Los Angeles Tuesday night.

The rookie outfielder had three home runs, one a grand-slammer, in both end fire singles in 11 at bats. But it wasn't enough. The Angels lost 7-3 and 13-12 to Kansas City Athletics.

The second - place Detroit Tigers continued a skid out of contention for the pennant by dropping a 4-1 decision in the completion of Monday's suspended game at Baltimore before the Orioles handed the Tigers their sixth straight loss, 14-5, in the regularly scheduled game.

Chicago White Sox and Minnesota Twins played to a 2-2 tie in a game called after nine innings because of fog at Minneapolis. Cleveland Indians beat Boston Red Sox, 6-4.

DRIVES IN EIGHT

Thomas, 23, was 5-for-3 at the plate with a double and four singles in the first game. He ran his consecutive hit streak through nine games with a single and home run, before striking out in the fifth inning of the nightcap. He had eight runs batted in, all in the second game, when he gave Los Angeles a 9-8 tie with his sixth-inning slam and put them ahead with a three - run homer in the eighth.

The Athletics won the second game on Bobby Del Greco's two run homer in the ninth inning off Ken McBride (12-12). A five - run second inning, in which Jerry Lumpe, another former Yank, hit a three - run homer, wrapped up the opener against Ryne Duren (6-12). Jerry Walker (7-11) and Bob Shaw (10-12) were the winners.

Ted Bowsfield of Preston, B.C., saw 3 2-3 innings of relief pitching in the second game for the Angels. He took over from Eli Grba in the third frame and gave up one hit and three walks. However, no Kansas City runs scored during his stint.

HOMERS DO IT

Mantle, after missing two games because of a strained arm muscle that prevented him from swinging a bat, gave the Yanks a 1-0 lead with his second - inning home run off loser Jim McDaniel (8-8).

Elston Howard's 16th homer in the fifth inning broke things up and the Yankees added four more runs, two unearned, in the seventh for their sixth straight success. Right-hander Jim Coates (10-5) checked the Senators on three hits with his set their sixth straight game.

Mantle stayed even with Babe Ruth's record-60 pace of 1927. But teammate Roger Maris, the league leader with 52 home runs was 0-for-4 and is only four games short of Ruth's pace. Maris hasn't had a hit in 15 at-bats.

The Orioles won the carry-over game with a half - inning of work, then beat the Tigers again in the three - hit pitching of Chuck Estrada (12-9) and Steve Barber. Estrada struck out 11 men, but needed Barber for the final out when Rocky Colavito singled and went to second on an error in the ninth. Barber nailed the victory by getting Norm Cash on a grounder to first.

Baltimore won 14-5 as Jerry Walker (7-11) and Bob Shaw (10-12) were the winners.

Dodgers Keep Pace

Redlegs Cling To Two-Game Lead

By ED WILKS
Associated Press Staff Writer

Cincinnati Reds are clinging to their slim lead in the National League pennant race.

They maintained a two-game edge over Los Angeles Dodgers Tuesday night by defeating St. Louis Cardinals 5-2.

The Dodgers kept pace with a 4-3 decision over San Francisco Giants. Handling the Giants their 10th setback in 12 games, the Giants are in fourth spot, nine games off the pace.

Milwaukee Braves remained in third place, two games ahead of the Giants by beating Philadelphia Phillies 5-4 in 14 innings. Pittsburgh Pirates defeated Chicago Cubs 8-3.

The Reds had a 5-0 lead going into the bottom of the sixth inning, when the Cards broke up Bob Purkey's three - hit shutout with a single by Ken Boyer and doubles by Charlie James and pinch - hitter Carl Sawatski.

The Reds wrapped things up with two runs in the sixth off Bob Gibson (9-11) on a walk to Frank Robinson's single, a double by Jerry Lynch and a sacrifice fly by Gene Coleman.

The Giants lost their fourth straight decision when Don Drysdale scored four unearned runs in the 42nd inning against San Jose (3-8). A three - out error by Orlando Cepeda got the rally going and Chris Zaider capped it with a three - run homer. It was the Duke's 32nd home run in the major leagues, his 18th of the season, and gave him 18 runs batted in for his last 14 games. Righthander Stan Williams (13-10) was the winner, checking the Giants on five hits.

Milwaukee came from behind with a pair of two - run innings. Near the lead when the Phils squeezed across a run on a bunt by Bob Millman in the ninth and then beat reliever Frank Sullivan (5-15) in the 14th when pinch - hitter Joe Torre tagged a sacrifice fly after singles by Frank Bolling and Sammy White. Lew Burdette (18-6) won in relief.

The Pirates beat the Cubs on a two - run homer by Dick Stuart and a two - run triple by Bob Skinner in the first two innings against Glen Hobbie (7-13). Vern Sturdivant (7-4) won, allowing eight hits in his sixth straight complete game.

And It Wasn't Joyces

Somebody Goofed!

The Cobourg Merchants failed to appear for the Belleville and District Softball League three-play-off game here last night and plate umpire Tom Holme forfeited the game to Joyce Real Estate by a 9-0 score.

Joyces lead the series three games to none, at the present time, and the fourth game has become a rather sore issue.

League secretary Cliff Belch announced this morning that a special meeting to deal with the series has been called for the fairgrounds here Thursday night at 7.30.

Belch was in contact with the Cobourg club following last night's mixup here. The Merchants had failed to phone or notify anyone here that they would not be present for the game.

However, Bob Neil, an official of the Cobourg club, claimed that they had stated earlier that they would not play here on Tuesday night.

Belch had told Charlie Oulahen, another official of the Merchants, last Thursday night that the third game would be played here on Tuesday, September 5. Oulahen had assured Belch, in front of at least one witness, that the club would be here.

Cobourg had balked about playing the first game here last Thursday. They showed up with but nine players, including Oulahen, were behind 10-1 in the ninth inning when first baseman Stu Lingard was ejected from the game. That game also went into the books as a 9-0 forfeit.

Joyces won the second game of the series 7-5 in Cobourg Saturday night before a packed ball park.

Secretary Belch said this morning that Cobourg has two choices concerning the fourth game. It was to have been played in Cobourg on Thursday but has been postponed now.

Belch said that Cobourg must either return here for the fourth game or also send a cheque for $30 to the Joyce club to cover expenses of last night's game. In that case the fourth game would be played in Cobourg, likely on Saturday night. The Joyce management has stated that they will not go back to Cobourg after last night.

The matter will be settled at Thursday night's meeting here.

LATER — League President Bill Hurst has announced that there will be no meeting of the League on Thursday night.

Hurst said that Cobourg must send a cheque covering expenses of last night's game here and that it must be here by Friday noon. He also said that the fourth game must be played here on Saturday night.

Cobourg's Rob Neil recalled that his club would not cease to Belleville again until a league meeting has been held, nor will a cheque be sent.

Flyers Lose To Oshawa

The RCAF - Flyers dropped a 3-1 decision to the Oshawa Red-Kemsmen in Oshawa last night to tie their OASA Senior "B" playdown series at one game apiece.

RCAF won the first game in Trenton Saturday night by a 7-4 score.

The third game will be played on neutral grounds, possibly at Cobourg on Thursday night.

TEL AVIV (CP)—The Maccabiah flag was lowered and fires were extinguished in 14 urns built in memory of Maccabiah organizations wiped out in 14 countries as Israel's sixth Maccabiah Games came to a close Tuesday night.

Miles Herman of Yonkers, N.Y., and Madelaine Bergman of Australia were awarded trophies as the outstanding male and female athletes in the Games. Herman won three gold metre back stroke swimming one bronze medal. Miss Bergman captured two gold medals and two silver medals.

Canada won five gold medals. Marvin Chapelle of Downsview was Canada's only double-gold medal winner. He won the 100-metre backstroke and in 4 minutes and was a member of the victorious Canadian 400 - metre medley relay swim team.

The two Canadian wins were the only victories in swimming competition not won by the United States. The U.S. squad won 24 out of 30 swimming gold medals.

The other members of the Canadian delegation awarded laurels were Walter Unger and Larry Ball, both of Toronto, and Steve Rabinovitch of Montreal.

Stan Levesson of Toronto, in the 100-metre dash. Phil Obenlander of Montreal, in the middleweight Greco-Roman wrestling class and Sidney Charendoff of Toronto, in the featherweight weightlifting competition, were the other Canadian gold medal winners.

Charnley Beats Matthews

LONDON (AP)—Dave Charnley, British lightweight champion and No. 1 challenger for Brown's world title, easily outpointed Philadelphia's Les Matthews in a 10-rounder Tuesday night.

Charnley's victory over Matthews, eighth-ranked challenger, moved the 26-year - old Briton into a possible third title bout against Brown, who has beaten him twice.

Charnley, who weighed 137 to Matthews's 136¼, threw five punches to one but failed to hurt down the tough American down for a count.

Not Enough Picture Makers In Hollywood Says Actor

By JAMES HACON

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Laurence Harvey says he has finally seen a movie of his that he was able to sit through from beginning to end.

The movie is Summer and Smoke, co-starring the Broadway star Geraldine Page. Once again Harvey plays as Mary Southerner in Tennessee Williams' Psychotic Jungle.

"Every movie I've ever made and that includes Room at the Top, sent me out to the neighborhood pub before the ending."

"Hal Wallis (producer of Summer and Smoke) is a picture maker."

Harvey says—and this may come as a shock to some in town—that Wallis would sooner make a good picture than money.

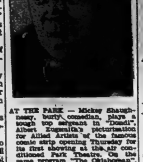
"Take my picture Two Loves," says Harvey. "All through it the producers kept telling me how sensational I was. Then they left out all the scenes that motivated my odd behavior. I came out looking like an idiot.

"Wallis looks at the rushes, then gives a final decision. I'd much sooner work with Hal who tells me that I did something sensational, no let's shoot it over again."

Ever since Room at the Top, Harvey has been in top demand around town. Let he hasn't forgotten the Shakespearean training with London's Old Vic.

He has a brilliant 90-minute script of Othello that I have shown to Claire Bloom and director John Frankenheimer. We are going to do it for television.

"After I saw Macbeth, the hammiest production I've ever seen, with five Enmiles, I've been in the market myself."



Harvey was once quoted to the effect that Dame Judith Anderson and Maurice Evans should be in the movie version of Macbeth.

Harvey is off to Germany for location filming on The Wonderful World of The Brothers Grimm. He plays one of the fairy tale brothers and also a dual role of an 80-year-old cobbler in a fairy tale sequence within the movie.

"It's light and it's fun," says Harvey.

'Cain's Hundred' Action Series Starts September 19

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

And, starting Sept. 19, off we'll go, following Nick Cain's career of vengeance of the oldest, time-tested plot devices in literary history.

Paul Monash, creator and producer of the series, deliberately created Cain in the familiar, classic mold, even providing his character with a name of biblical significance.

"He's a Byronic hero," explained the man who wrote the first episodes of The Untouchables. "Cain is the synthesis of the forces of good. And he is, of course, completely unrealistic. Nobody could go around the country smashing one facet of organized crime per week."

Cain may be a creature of fiction, but he has some close relatives, sin fictitious, delighting the television viewers season after season.

RESEMBLES PALADIN

Closest to him in spirit if not costume (Cain will be a natty dresser) is Paladin, the lone, grim - visaged, dark - suited avenger of CBS' perennial Have Gun, Will Travel. And then, of course, there's ABC's Elliot Ness of The Untouchables whose adventures have been largely fiction since, early in the series, he and his loyal band were credited with bringing in the notorious Barker gang.

Frank Perreo, producer of Have Gun, traces the ancestry of his Paladin (another symbolic name, meaning legendary hero) back to the Greeks of Homer's Day, to Odysseus and Ulysses.

The trick, of course, is to set the chief figure in interesting backgrounds. Cain will tackle 1961-62 soft spots.

NOT FOR SALE — Artist Michel Rostand, eager to display his paintings but loath to sell the ones he likes best, stands before two of the works decorating walls of his Montreal apartment. A law graduate of the University of Vienna who turned to painting seriously in 1946, he came to Canada from his native France 10 years ago. (CP Photo).

Montreal Artist Refuses To Sell Any of Paintings

By GERRY McNEIL
Canadian Press Staff Writer

MONTREAL (CP) — Michel Rostand is an artist who cherishes his own works—so much so that he refuses to sell the paintings he considers his best.

Rostand, who defied the traffic laws of the art world 10 years ago by leaving his native France to come to Canada, is a connoisseur of Rostand.

"I'm not being pretentious," he said, leading the way to his living room. "Well you can see for yourself . . ."

His apartment on the north slope of Mount Royal, looking across a surrealistic sea of television aerials to the hazy Laurentians, contained a wider variety of paintings than many an art gallery.

In a place of honor was a still life he did in 1925 when a 21-year-old law graduate from the University of Vienna. Like most of his works a small painting, it shows a crystal pitcher and glasses against a dark background.

What is it worth?

"When I die, 250,000," he confidently predicted.

Rostand started painting in earnest in 1946 when a chiropodist in his native Nice told him he would become an artist and achieve fame.

He did sunny, realistic paintings of streets and structures in Nice for a few years but by the time he came to Canada he was an impressionist.

His impressionist paintings, many hardly larger than postcards yet strong in mood and proportion — run the scale of subjects: gay dancers at a ball, a defeated line of refugees, sweating coal miners, a relay runner at night, battling soldiers.

Last year, he hit upon a complex technique that gives a third dimension to his paintings. He calls it "sculpture on canvas."

His latest—and one of his largest — painting is a bleak scene showing Napoleon and a thin, huddled line of his men retreating through a cold winter night from Moscow.

Using a palette knife instead of a brush, Rostand built up the paint so that the soldiers and their emperor stand out slightly from the rest of the canvas—giving depth to the scene.

"This will be considered Canadian art," Rostand said proudly. "I am a Canadian now."

It is already being accepted in the United States . . ."

Eager to exhibit but not so eager to sell, the artist hopes someday to have a painting hung in the Louvre.

General Motors And Union Sure Of Settlement

Reuther, Seaton Report General Agreement

DETROIT (AP) — Walter P. Reuther will go calling on the Ford Motor Company as soon as he settles on the details of the United Auto Workers' agreement with General Motors.

"Ford is the next door I will knock on," the UAW president said Wednesday after recessing his talks with GM until today.

Reuther indicated he was confident of making a final settlement with GM that will set the pattern for Ford and Chrysler. He said there is no pressure now in the GM negotiations because "there is general agreement in all important areas" of a national economic settlement on wages and costs, fringes and contract.

In his first speech since American Motors reached the agreement with the UAW, Romney said "no wage is too high if it is earned."

Addressing a meeting of Atlanta businessmen, the auto executive predicted the settlement will "permit American Motors to offer the best value on the market."

The pact, subject to ratification by local unions, will be on the principle that "to achieve real progress, wage increases must be equitable distribution between . . . consumers, workers and owners," Romney said.

He described the settlement as not very well understood, and noted that some persons had objected to it as allot to the fringe benefits area, and opening the door to workers increasing economic rights.

"We do not feel these objections hold water," Romney declared.

"If the (firm's) gains were gobbled up by pay increases some would undoubtedly get rich, but eventually the enterprise would be put out of business by a competitor that offered the customer more."

Romney called for a return to "the neglected principle of reasonable profits" as nearly as possible to contribution."

ATLANTA (AP) — President George Romney of the American Motors Corporation said Wednesday night his firm's labor settlement with the United Auto Workers Union was the most favorable in the post-war period in the auto industry.

He said he sees no difference in principle between bonuses for executives and profit - sharing for workers, a feature of the contract.

In his first speech since American Motors reached the agreement with the UAW, Romney said "no wage is too high if it is earned."

Judge Returns Sudbury Union To Members'

Orders Trusteeship Of Local Wiped Out

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario High Court of Justice has blocked an attempt by the national office of the International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers (Can) to regain control over more than half its membership in the rebellious local in Sudbury.

Chief Justice J. C. McRuer Wednesday wiped out a trusteeship imposed on the 17,500-member local and set up an interim appointed administrator to keep both the local and gave it back its impounded records, offices and $700,000 bank account.

At the same time, he restored to office former members of the Sudbury executive who had been suspended from office by national president Ken Smith of Toronto on the grounds of irregularities in the election held to Mine-Mill's bitter rival, the United Steelworkers of America (CLC).

The property of the embattled local—No. 598—had been seized under a temporary court injunction issued at Sudbury last January 19 after Smith and the national executive moved in with a coup culminating in the expulsion of executive of factional warfare.

Chief Justice McRuer's decision gave the local a clean sweep against the central office but did not preclude the national group from trying different legal tactics to regain control over the local.

The Chief Justice noted that Smith had acted in a "summary" and "arbitrary" manner in purporting to oust the local's elected executive without giving them a hearing on charges against them.

The chief justice noted evidence that Smith made a declaration under the Mine-Mill constitution ousting the officers in a trusteeship imposed by William Kennedy, a member of the national executive, was heard by the local.

Don Gillis, president of the Sudbury local, was one of the elected four but Smith's declaration handed over his power and that of the whole local executives to the trustee.

Smith's declaration was made under section 4 of the Mine-Mill constitution which Chief Justice McRuer described as "very, very confusing." He said he did not know whether the wording was "slapdash" or consciously drawn."

Shortly after the decision was delivered, the Gillis faction started repossessing local property. Earlier the union had which had been declared a non-entity in the week's long-sounding order of district judge J. M. Cooper.

Reds Set off Atom Blasts Like String of Firecrackers

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

The Russians, ignoring the West's call for "no fallout" nuclear tests, have touched off several atomic blasts like a string of firecrackers.

The fourth since last Friday was detonated in the atmosphere east of Sibiligarsk early Wednesday, the U.S. Atomic Energy Commission announced. It was a different kind of explosion from the previous three of the series.

The power of the latest device was described as in the "low to intermediate" range—about the same as that bomb exploded Monday and Tuesday in Central Asia.

Radioactive fallout was detected in Alaska at about 35 times the average rate, but U.S. health authorities said there was no immediate danger to health.

The U.S. went ahead with its own plans for underground tests after a shout — backed by Britain and France but with Japan preparing to register a similar protest today with the state department in Washington.

Britain and France also pleaded Wednesday the U.S. decision to resume tests has their full support and that of 17 other nations in advance of President Kennedy's decision.

But a British spokesman said the U.K. has no plans to resume tests.

In India, Governor-General Chakravarti Rajagopalachari called on the Russians to accept the U.S.-British offer of an almost-immediate halt.

In Moscow, Prime Minister Nehru met with Premier Khrushchev after telling Russian leaders Wednesday night that anyone starting a new war would be guilty of "the ultimate madness."

There was speculation that the purpose of the rapid-fire series of Russian tests was to bolster national informants in Washington that the prevailing opinion in the Kennedy administration is that they are aimed at developing anti-missile defences.

Congressional leaders who have participated in White House discussions predicted that the United States will fire an underground test within two weeks. Kennedy announced Tuesday the United States had no other choice but to resume underground tests.

Kennedy said within two weeks would precede the Sept. 19 opening of the United Nations general assembly, a campaign against resumption of testing is anticipated.

In London, 159 persons today forced court appearances after police Wednesday night broke up a demonstration near the American Embassy against the U.S.-decision to resume testing.

About 300 protest marchers sat down in front of a police cordon barring their way to the embassy.

Meantime, an article in the Soviet government newspaper Izvestia today said the world has kept last week for a halt to nuclear tests in the atmosphere knowing that Russia would never agree.

The article was signed by Observer, a byline usually taken to be Soviet Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev.

It said "the U.S. has been waiting for a convenient pretext to begin tests of its own in a series of nuclear tests."

The British press today was resigned to the resumption of American nuclear testing but expressed regret and complaint that the timing of the announcement was "remarkably inept."

The Guardian of Manchester said the U.S. decision "comes in the supreme hour of crisis. "Unhappily, however, the timing of the American decision is remarkably inept and for the timing there can be no good excuse," it added.

The Scotsman of Edinburgh said that once the Russians had "started it all again," this "will not mitigate America's offence in the eyes of the uncommitted countries which tend to give Russia the benefit of the doubt."

House Resumes Session Amid Grave Tension

May Be Busy Until Mid-November

OTTAWA (CP) — Parliament today resumes its longest session in history beneath gathering international storm clouds.

The Commons, which already has sat longer than any since 1917 as far back as July 13 summer adjournment, reassembled to tackle an agenda which may keep it busy until mid-November. The Senate resumes its sittings next Thursday.

The marathon Commons session was scheduled to start at 2:30 p.m. EDT.

Amid mounting tension over Berlin and the resumption of nuclear weapons tests, MPs set the tone of their sittings with a timely two-day foreign affairs debate. Prime Minister Diefenbaker also was expected to make announcements concerning a stepup of civil defence preparations and a moderate increase in armed forces manpower.

Prime Minister Diefenbaker Wednesday briefed Opposition Leader Pearson on the international situation in a half-hour private talk. Although both declined comment on whether the Progressive Conservative and Liberal leaders discussed a bipartisan stand on foreign policy, Mr. Pearson told reporters:

"In a critical situation like the one today we want to keep as much unity as possible within the country."

PLANT SAID

Mr. Smith, but highly vocal CCF group has not indicated how it will express itself during the session. However, the New Democratic Party founding convention in Ottawa in the last month of CCF Leader Hazen Argue's stand for Canadian withdrawal from the North Atlantic Treaty Organization is bound to be reflected.

Among the legislation which may be introduced within the next few weeks is a possible major revision of the Immigration Act. Amendments to the Unemployment Insurance Act heralded in the throne speech which opened the session last Nov. 17, may also be made.

The most important immediate task is the discussion, however, are the bulk of the 1961-62 spending estimates. Priority is expected to be given to passage of the external affairs and defence department estimates.

Other measures awaiting parliamentary action include a government bill requiring unions and corporations to make public their annual financial reports.

Soviet Envoy Flies to Moscow

U.S. Expected To Give Neutrals Sympathetic Ear

German Peace Parley Again Demanded by K.

MOSCOW (Reuters) — Prime Minister Nehru today met Nikita Khrushchev in the Kremlin for the second time since he arrived here Wednesday on a four-day state visit.

The Soviet news agency Tass described the talks, which covered the international situation and relations between nations, as "a broad and frank exchange."

Nehru earlier met Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev and placed a wreath on the Lenin-Stalin mausoleum in Red Square.

Nehru opened his visit by telling his Russian hosts that anyone who started a new war would be guilty of the "ultimate madness."

He made the statement at a dinner gathering, including Mr. Nikita Khrushchev, after arriving here Wednesday on a mission to appeal for a meeting between the Soviet premier and President Kennedy to preserve world peace.

Nehru and Ghana's President Kwame Nkrumah, who also arrived Wednesday, carried a letter outlining the appeal from the conference of non - aligned countries in Belgrade.

In a speech at a Kremlin dinner Wednesday night, Nehru said "in our times in our century to start a war against peace would be the ultimate madness."

WANTS NO RUIN

"We are sincerely devoted to peace," the Indian leader said, then turned to Khrushchev and added:

"I know that you too are devoted to peace and we have therefore hope that thanks to your efforts and that of others . . . we shall enjoy peace, a peace of construction and not a peace of ruin."

In his own speech at the dinner, Khrushchev said an active policy of peaceful co-existence of neutrals—was needed to achieve peace and repeated a Soviet call for a conference of wartime allies to conclude a German peace treaty.

"On this basis," Khrushchev said, "our views coincide with those of many countries."

Khrushchev said the Soviet Union that a summit conference to negotiate on Berlin should be held only after the groundwork and the preparation should provide some evidence that the conference would be successful in producing a solution.

The official said he is confident that Russia and the Western powers will sign a negotiated settlement eventually. The prevailing estimate as to time, however, is "not in days or months" but in the end of the year.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Kennedy administration was expected today to give a sympathetic response to an appeal from 25 non aligned countries for U.S.-Soviet negotiations to save the world from the "horror of nuclear war."

But U.S. officials said the aggressive Russian attitude on critical Berlin issues — dramatized by the series of Soviet nuclear explosions in the atmosphere — discourages hope that negotiations under present circumstances can make much progress.

The U.S. Atomic Energy Commission announced Wednesday night that the Russians had exploded their fourth megaton and fourth nuclear test device since last Friday. Evidence from a study by U.S. monitors placed the site of the blast east of Sialigrad, 1,600 miles west of the Semipalatinsk area in the three previous explosions announced.

The force was described by the AEC as less than three to intermediate range.

U.S. Ambassador Llewellyn Thompson, who is in Moscow after a western European visit, has instructions to discuss the Berlin situation with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko in the next few days.

State Secretary Dean Rusk plans to meet with Gromyko in connection with the opening of the UN General Assembly in New York Sept. 19, Western authorities have no indication as to whether Gromyko will attend the assembly.

MAY BEGIN TALKS

The U.S. is said toward the implied demand for a summit conference. Direct exploratory talks apparently could be conducted in the early stages by ambassadors of foreign ministers representing the two top leaders.

Kennedy has given no indication that a summit conference to negotiate on Berlin should be held only after the groundwork and the preparation should provide some evidence that the conference would be successful in producing a solution.

U.S. officials say they are confident that Russia and the Western powers will sign a negotiated settlement eventually. The prevailing estimate as to time, however, is "not in days or months" but in the end of the year.

Several Hundred Evacuated From Two Villages

ST. JOSEPH (CP) — A wide-driven forest fire forced the evacuation of several hundred women and children from the southern Northern Quebec villages of Terrenceville and Grand Lac-Pierre today.

Terrenceville, a settlement of about 600, was abandoned except for firefighting. Some residents remained behind at Grand LaPierre. The two outposts are about two miles apart in the head of Fortune Bay.

Heavy smoke from burning woods and swamps covered the area. Brisk northeast winds increased the fire from the advancing fire.

The fire closed the only road exit from Terrenceville and evacuees had to be taken by by boat to Port Aux Basques, 18 miles to the south.

Evacuation from Terrenceville was carried out by the hydrographic vessel Acadia and several smaller craft.

Conditions in Terrenceville itself were described as desperate. The village is without telephone service.

The new fire, a stark reminder that despite shorter days and cooler weather Newfoundland's forest blazes are not over, was reminiscent of a score of outbreaks that terrorized the province all summer.

Weather forecasts called for northeast winds to continue in the direction of Terrenceville to day with gusts around 35 miles an hour. Rain, forecast earlier, was not expected to arrive.

THE WEATHER

Synopsis: The disturbance which crossed Lake Superior Wednesday caused a few showers in Northern Ontario during the night. Elsewhere skies were clear. Mainly sunny weather is forecast for most sections.

Youth Gangs Stone UN Buildings

ELISABETHVILLE (Reuters) — Gangs of youths roamed the streets of Elisabethville in Congo for several hours Wednesday, closing United National Congo Hospital and stoning other UN buildings.

It was the second day of youth demonstrations. On Tuesday Katangan police fired into the air to disperse rioters outside the UN headquarters.

Two Katangan deputies Tuesday called for war against the UN and Foreign Minister Evariste Kimba declared Katanga "on a state of war" in a further concession to the United Nations.

On Wednesday's Demonstrations, stones were showered on the UN headquarters and Indian soldiers as the gangs screamed for the troops to quit Katanga.

Pilot's Heroic Action in Landing Blazing Plane on Lake Saves 5

GANDER, Nfld. (CP) — The co-pilot of an aircraft which crashed and burned a week ago in Greenland told Wednesday how pilot Jim Howe of Kingston who died in Toronto today—landed the blazing plane on the ice aboard while guiding it from a wing.

"I wouldn't be here today not would our passengers but for his pilot," said Harris Robinson.

Harris' Robinson said in an interview from his home, where he is recuperating from a broken leg burns.

The plane, carrying four Dehich passengers, was owned by Eastern Provincial Airways of Gander.

Robinson, sitting next to the pilot when the six-seat aircraft burst into flames, said: "I really didn't see the thing happen. I was looking on Jim's side of the cockpit was worse than on mine and kept him hidden from me."

Robinson got the full story from Howe in the Goose Bay hospital, where they were flown for treatment.

Roe had "lined up" the amphibious Otter for a landing over a lake when the cockpit's heat became unbearable.

"Jim opened the door and the cockpit any longer," Howe told his co-pilot. "I'll take over."

"But I still couldn't let go, Rob, I watched my hand changing to a claw. But couldn't let go."

He eased half his body onto the wing seat, shielded from the flames by the cockpit door, stayed at the control until the plane bellied into the water.

"Once we touched the water," Howe said, "I had to let go then." The plane zoomed across the lake and skidded into the shore.

The Pirates of Penzance From Stratford Excellent

NEW YORK (AP) — Tyrone Guthrie's version of The Pirates of Penzance is an infectiously exuberant and consistently starter for the new theatrical season.

The production that arrived Wednesday night at the Phoenix Theatre is being done by the hardy company to down from Stratford, Ont., on limited engagement.

Even the most inflexible Gilbert and Sullivan fan, steeped in tradition, may take delight in the capers of Eric House as the hard model major in Kent Andrew Dowale, as a pirate - apprentice, and Douglas Rain, bobolme, a conveniture cutie.

Sir Tyrone (assisted by Doug Campbell) has given the play directorial choice with a freshery impishness. The jests are flicked in slyly and inconspicuously. There is a little dance here and a constabulary imbroglio there, nothing broad or emphatic.

Miss Stubbs provides the evening's melodic brilliance with warmly cascading tones that are the envy of many a prima donna. Her partner companions of song, Howell Glynne turns out as a tuneful pirate king, as the police sergeant, and Harry Monckton is a dashing pirate king. The entire company delivers the lyrics in a style so lucid as to be unbelievable.

The settings, a brilliantly lighted cave and a mildly moonlit seashore are the work of Brian Jackson.

Mozambique Under Guard Against Any Aggressors

LOURENCO MARQUES (AP) — Portugal has wasted no time learning some lessons from the African revolt in the Congo by taking swift, massive action to avoid anything like that in African possession of Mozambique.

Shiploads of troops are arriving here to reinforce the military buildup continues.

Mozambique lies in a 1,200-mile strip on the east coast of the north it borders on Tanganyika and Nyasaland. West-ern neighbors are South Africa, Rhodesia and South Africa.

Most of the troops arriving and the censored press remain tight-lipped on the military situation. Private observers estimate that up to 15,000 troops have been stationed throughout the territory. Most of them are near the Tanganyika and Nyasaland borders. They appear to be keeping a special watch on the Manuele tribe which is the most advanced—and most restless—of the African peoples.

The troops are the latest to have the immediate task of building new roads and repairing those that skidded into the Mozambique tribe.

of any uprising. Those not engaged in this building program are reported to be under orders to keep watch on the local tribes—working at tobacco, coffee and cotton plantations and industries.

Mozambique's 6,000,000 Negroes are divided into 10 main tribes. There are considerable numbers of new jailings of agitators on charges of endangering the security of the state.

There is no racial segregation in Lourenco Marques. Enormity nightclubs wallies can be seen dancing and drinking with Negro and mulatto girls.

Reds Greet Berlin Border Crowds With Firecrackers, Gas and Water

BERLIN (AP)—East German police used water cannon, tear gas and jets of water at hundreds of demonstrating West Berliners Wednesday night.

The East German police shot at the crowd with a water cannon of about 80 massed before the barrier wall on the border in Neukoelln, in the American sector. It struck a newsstand.

This angered the crowd, which swelled to 200 including some drunks. The East German police turned up a water cannon and sprayed the demonstrators.

West Berlin police pushed the crowd back from the border and took three demonstrators into custody temporarily.

In the tough industrial borough of Wedding, in the French sector, a crowd of about 300 besieged a building and booing at the East German guards.

Suddenly the East police hurled five tear gas grenades and a number of firecrackers into the crowd. West Police scattered the crowd.

In a third incident on the Neuhoelln border the Communists threw over a combined tear gas grenade and firecracker and rushed a fire hose in an attempt to disperse a West Berlin group gathered at the border. Again the West police intervened.

70 Kiwanians Meet in City For Caucus

Some 70 Kiwanians gathered at the Hotel Quinte yesterday for their caucus in District 6 of Kiwanis International for their annual Lieutenant - Governor's Caucus.

Club executive members and divisional chairmen from Bath - Millhaven, Cobourg, Kingston, Madoc, Marmora, Picton, Port Hope, Trenton, Tweed, West Kingston and Belleville were grouped to discuss the various problems within the district.

The caucus was presided over by the district lieutenant-governor, Al Weaver of Trenton, and details of the various successful service projects promoted by the clubs were shared with the others present in a search for fresh ideas for future community service work.

Mr. Weaver stated that he had noted a distinct overall improvement in every club in the district, especially in some of the clubs which had been in a relatively weak position at the start of the year.

A feature of the afternoon's business session was the discussion panel composed mainly of past lieutenant-governors, following the afternoon sessions a reception and banquet were held. Club president Bob Brain presided over the banquet which was an inter-club event hosted by the local Kiwanians.

It was announced that Evans Black of the West Kingston club was the district lieutenant-governor designate for the coming year.

CBRT Executive To Have Fight For Top Offices

MONTREAL (CP) — President W. J. (Bill) Smith and his national executive were expected to meet some opposition today of their bid for re-election to the top offices of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers (CLC).

There were no indications that Smith and his fellow - officers would be defeated, but there has been plenty of evidence at the union's national convention this week of some highly vocal dissatisfaction in the ranks of the 15,000-member CBRT.

Wednesday, the third day of the convention, a steady parade of dissenters marched to microphones on the floor to harass the national executive.

Small Turnout For First Meeting Of Town Council

DESERONTO — The first regular meeting of the fall session of the town council was held in the council chambers on Tuesday night. Only four councillors and the Mayor were present as well as the town clerk was absent due to illness. His post was filled by Mrs. M. L. Deeks.

Among the correspondence was a letter from Mr. Ellis complaining regarding the placing of the stop sign at the edge of his garage driveway. This letter was filed. He also suggested to the council, town should be some curb on out-of-town trucks and businesses, who entered the town at will to sell and dispense services without the cost of taxes, which local people had to pay for the maintenance of the roads and for police and fire protection. This letter was also filed.

A request from Mrs. L. Morin regarding a hickory nut tree in front of her home was referred to the streets committee for consideration.

The local branch of the Canadian Legion asked council for a reconsideration of the rental fee for the hall they are using. This matter was laid over until the next meeting for further consideration.

The drainage problem in front of Glenwood Park came in for considerable discussion. The Highways have a tile draining the north side of the Highway across under the road and into the reservoir. Then there is no place for the water to go. This matter was referred to the Street committee for a report at the next meeting.

Council decided to ask the Department of Highways for the interim subsidy due October 15th.

The street committee reported that the grass being taken from Mill Street was being piled to widen the road to the pump house. They reported that the streets being oiled were Brant, Green, Mill, St. George, Prince and Thomas between Prince and Fourth. The chairman asked permission from council to use asphalt to repair sidewalks. This was granted and the streets committee are to be given the money left in their budget.

A by-law governing the size and installation of drains within the town was passed and a by-law to regulate traffic was given two readings. The third reading will be given at the by-law to be approved by the Department of Transport.

As there was no new business introduced council adjourned shortly after ten o'clock.

Youth Given 14-Day Term For Assault

In October, McGrimmon of Windsor Street, Belleville, was sentenced to 14 days in jail this morning when he faced a charge of causing actual bodily harm to Mrs. Leslie Little of Oak Lake.

Mrs. William Hilywell of Stirling stated that he had examined Mrs. Little after she had been struck by the accused on the night of August 11, 1961. She noted a bruise on the right cheek, slightly to her nasal bridge. She said she wasn't paying too much attention as to what was being said between her husband came over to her and asked her to go out and phone the police. She went to the phone outside the canteen, Mrs. Little said she had taken two dimes and a nickel to the phone booth with her and when she got there the operator, McGrimmon came out and grabbed the receiver and took the dime from the coin return on the phone.

Mrs. Little then closed the door and braced herself against it and put another dime in the slot and asked the operator for the police. "McGrimmon was trying to push the door open and I was afraid he'd bring longer, I suffered a "good knocking" and I went to doctor Hipwell because the pain was so severe". He was successful in getting in the door and pulling down the receiver, breaking the connection again and I wasn't able to contact the police. Mrs. Little said Maurice Whittmore came over and tried to get McGrimmon to go home.

Allan Tanner, 19, of Stirling was called as the next witness asking him if what Mrs. Little said was correct and he said it was.

ACCUSED HEARD

McGrimmon asked to give evidence and he said that on that particular evening he and his girl friend, along with another couple, were sitting in the parking lot at Oak Lake near the canteen. "I had a dance with one of the girls in there and then I went over to talk with Mr. Little. We agreed that there had been no harm done and we shook hands. Somehow came over and said Mrs. Little had gone out to phone the police. I went outside to ask her why she was phoning them and I reached in but pulled down the receiver so I could explain things to her. Whittmore grabbed me by the arm and said, "let's go." I could have shoved the door in when he was trying to pull me anyway. Whittmore dragged me across the road and we got in the car and came back to Belleville."

Magistrate Wills said in view of the evidence he had come to the conclusion that Mrs. Little and Tanner were telling the truth in their statements. "Your explanation for stopping Mrs. Little from phoning is inexcusable." You have to learn the hard way, you will be found guilty on the evidence."

Mr. Pringle said the accused had a wonderful record of responsibility. "A little bit of hard labor in the common jail might do him some good."

Magistrate Wills said he was thinking of exactly the same thing and was wondering if Mr. Pringle was going to suggest it.

He told McGrimmon he couldn't add too much to what he had already said to him but that he had to accept certain rules of conduct and respect the rights of other people. "You are determined to enforce your own ideas and will on other people." "I hope you will do some thinking while you are in jail."

New Resident Senior Citizens Is Installed

The Belleville Senior Citizens Club held its first regular meeting for the season on Wednesday evening, with 119 persons in attendance, at the Recreation Centre on Pinnacle Street.

Owing to the absence of past president Harry Scales due to illness, Mr. Lloyd Dorrah, reveration director, performed a brief induction ceremony for the incoming president, Charles L. Hyde, who then expressed his thanks and appreciation to the members for their kindness and confidence in electing him as their president and was confident that all would work together in harmony and good will toward each other, and that all would enjoy a happy and successful year.

The meeting opened by singing "The Queen," followed by "Happy Birthday" greetings to 15 members who were celebrated, or will be celebrating, birthdays in the months of July, August and September, all of whom were congratulated and presented with corsages of roses. One of these, Mrs. Florence Allen, was actually celebrating her birthday on that very day; age not revealed.

The minutes of the last meeting, in June, were adopted as read. These included the names of the officers elected for the year, time, which were as follows: Immediate past president, Harry Scales; president, Charles L. Hyde; secretary, Mrs. M. Drummond and treasurer, Mrs. J. Tryan.

The treasurer's report was received and adopted. One minute of silence was observed out of respect to those members who passed away during the summer recess, Mrs. Bellamy, Mr. Simpson and Mrs. Gill.

Expressions of sympathy were extended to Mrs. Mary Ann Doyle in the passing of Mr. Doyle's sister, and to Mrs. M. Keegan in the loss of her only daughter.

The members practised a new theme song, the music and lyrics of which were arranged jointly by Mrs. Tryan and Mr. T. Shirley, and the president, and a period of singing old favourites followed, and all were then passed almost unanimously by the members present. Some new items of interest to the club in the near future, were also announced.

The chairman and co-chairman of the entertainment committee, Mrs. Asher and Mrs. Cook, then introduced the entertainers for the evening.

VARIED PROGRAM

Miss Sheila Canning very pleasingly rendered a number of vocal solos, accompanied by Mrs. Shirley Warner, and Miss Frederike Smith gave an interesting variety program with pupils from her dancing class, accompanied at the piano by Rosace Garrison and with Mr. A. Smith on the drums.

The program was as follows: "Margie," by Sandra Wilkins and Valerie Smith; "Darktown Strutters Ball" by Larry Thompson; "Salata," by Peggy Kelley; "Sweet Georgia Brown" by Sandra Wilkins; "Mack the Knife," by Valerie Smith; "Stomping at the Savoy" by Larry Thompson, and finally a scorchion tap number by ten-year-old Valerie Smith, who was charming in frilly pink gown.

The spontaneous and continued applause of all those present was sufficient evidence of the pleasure of the members. The president personally thanked all the artists and hoped they would visit again.

The entertainment committee served a delicious lunch under the convenership of Mrs. Drummond assisted by Mrs. Hamilton and Mrs. Tryan.

Board of Health Will Ask Council to Buy Equipment To Fluoridate Town Water

TRENTON — At a meeting of the Trenton Board of Health yesterday, board members voted to request the town council to make provision for the cost of the installation of equipment necessary for the fluoridation of Trenton water (and filtered water supplied to ROAF Station, Trenton) the cost of the equipment itself and operating costs of the system to be included in the town's 1962 budget.

After a report from Miss H. Pads, manager of the Trenton utilities, informed the board that capital costs for equipment and installation would be $9,800. Equipment for the filtration plant and the Sidney Street pumping station would be extra, location. The equipment for the Victoria Street pumping station would be extra, and these installation costs for all three locations would be $1,000.

Chemicals for the system would cost around $1,650 annually, and the annual estimated labor in connection with the system would be $500 per year.

WANT LEAVES REMOVED

Mrs. Marjorie Bowerman and board members Miss Marjorie Goddard, E. D. Topping and Dr. E. W. Jones voted in the motion to ask the town council to find some way to remove dead leaves from town lawns; a way which would conform with the new anti-water pollution by-law, which means that council may not burn the leaves.

Mr. Pane said that the public works department would soon set aside for "the destruction of pests", and the board members agreed that the leaves and brush could be constructed "pests".

Miss Goddard asked if the motion should not contain some reference to co-operation with radio - active elements from the recent atmospheric atom bomb tests might be conjured in the piled-up leaves.

Dr. Dow said that there was no real proof that this was a fact.

BACTERIA PRESENT

Mr. Pane reported that the bacteriological count in receipt milk and restaurant reports had been unsatisfactory lately and he said that he wondered if the methods employed by the laboratory tests might not be inaccurate. He said that the reports had been sent to Toronto for the most part, satisfactory.

Dr. Dow said that polio inoculations would be necessary as the Trenton Community Gardens on September 22. Other dates for the inoculations are Oct. 20, Nov. 17, Dec. 15, Jan. 12, Feb. 9, March 9, April 6, May 4, June 1 and June 29.

Dr. Dow said that, according to present indications, within a year or two oral polio vaccine would come into use. He stated out that the capsules, to be taken by mouth, would not contain antibiotics, as does the hypodermic polio injections, now used.

HOUSING BAD

There is a need for accommodation for senior citizens and a need for low-rental housing in Trenton, it was stated by the chairman, as he reported a number of cases of inadequate housing conditions. He said that one family of six was living in one room.

Mr. Pane said that he had written to the Emergency Measures Office for data and he would had designs of standard fallout shelters be sent to him, but that he had received no word to date.

Miss Goddard said that she thought the Board of Health should be made aware of its duties and responsibilities in the event of a national emergency. She said that the town should have a civil defence setup. Miss Goddard also stated that, according to a newspaper report, all Canadians were advised to keep a two-weeks' supply of canned goods in their homes.

SEWAGE IN DITCH

Mr. Topping said that the sewage pump in the Gould Shoe-Belleville was not working properly and that a ditch in the vicinity of Queen Elizabeth school contained raw sewage. The pump has been repaired several times during the past four months.

One letter will be sent to Councillor Vaughan Lange, chairman of public works, and another to Mr. Pane, as the department could be used for weed removal. He said that recently, weeds in the vicinity of the government dock had been sprayed with a weed killing by an unknown agency. No other board member was able to throw any light on the "unknown agency," but the suggestion was made that the weed removal operations could be carried on out into the bay.

CANNOT PAY SUBSIDY

Mr. Pane said that because a "performance bond" had not been signed, as stipulated in an agreement between the board and the Quinte Air Ambulance Service, the company could not be paid the part of the annual subsidy owing. Mr. Pane said that an insurance agent had said that no insurance company issues such a bond. He said that a private individual might put up a $5,000 personal bond, but until some arrangement could be made to carry out the terms of the agreement, the company could not be paid anything.

Mr. Pane said that this summer eight persons in town had taken advantage of an ac-

Will Ask Probe Of Flash Fire

TRENTON — Trenton's fire chief, Cecil Ellis, said last night that he would ask for a fire marshal's enquiry into the cause of a flash fire which destroyed a garage on Golda Street and damaged three nearby houses.

The fire broke out around 11.30 p.m. last night. The burned garage was owned by Ernest Cunnell, 33 Golda Street. Mr. Cunnell's house, and homes owned by J. H. Pruthomme and E. R. Tuckland were damaged by fire and smoke.

Chief Ellis credited the new telephone alarm system, recently installed in the fire hall, with keeping losses incurred by the fire at an estimated $2000. He said that the permanent firemen and volunteers were at the fire in a few minutes, after being notified of the location.

Cyclist Injured

TRENTON — Around 1 p.m. yesterday afternoon, Allan Lambert, aged 13, of 16 Gerrin Street, sustained bruises to his arm when he was struck by a car while riding his bicycle on King Street, near Dufferin Ave. The car was driven by Charles Edward Eastwood, 291 Front Street, Trenton.

Police say that the youth was riding without hands. He is in his hand and travelling at a fast pace downhill. The motorist was unable to see the bicycle as he had stopped to allow another car to pass.

The young lad was treated by Dr. G. W. Telfer.

rangement whereby inside toilets may be installed and charged back to the owner's taxes. Dr. Dow said that no outside arrangements should be allowed where sewers are available. Miss Gothard commented that, when laterals for new toilets are installed, the street sewer should be replaced as she could see no object in connecting new pipes to ancient sewers.

Dismiss Appeal On Assessment

TRENTON — At Trenton yesterday, an appeal for a lowered assessment on two houses located on Whitley Lane in East Trenton, submitted by ex-councillor R. J. Whitley, was dismissed by Judge G. F. Smith of Napanee.

Mr. Whitley said that he thought the assessment on each house should be below $3,000 as he owned the lane running in front of the houses and he had paid for the installation of water on this street. He said that as there were no sewer connections, septic tanks were used and drainage was poor in the area. He said that he spent $25 every three months to have the septic tanks pumped out.

Mr. Whitley said that two similar houses, owned by him, on Sidney Street, had lower assessments. He said that the houses were valued around $6,000 apiece and that they rented for $80 a month.

Assessment Commissioner J. Allan Smith said that many properties had been sold for less money but that allowance for this was made in land assessment, rather than house assessment. He said that the assessment that the tenants paid $80 a month was in better accordance with the location and facilities.

Judge Smith told Mr. Whitley that he was not being singled out and that all property owners were required to pay their share of taxes. He said that Mr. Whitley had failed to show that the assessment commissioner had been correct in his assessment and he dismissed the case.

Mr. Whitley may appeal to the Ontario Municipal Board if he so desires.

WILL TAKE 2 WEEKS

TORONTO (CP) — R. G. Elson, chief of Ontario's new Radiation Protection Service, said Wednesday night it will be about two weeks before it will be possible to tell whether the Soviet nuclear test explosions have increased fallout in this area. Measurements are being taken daily, he said.

Deaths Due To Accidents Levelling Off

OTTAWA (CP) — Deaths due to accidental or all kinds appear to be levelling off in Canada after a steady rise in recent years, the bureau of statistics reported today.

This year they dropped to 9,403 from 9,439 in 1959, with traffic fatalities accounting for more than one - third in each year. In 1951 the over-all total was 8,043. In 1956 it was 9,271.

Suicidal death increased by 1,330 from 1,289 in 1959 while murder deaths jumped to 200 from 178. These figures are not included in the totals for accidental deaths.

Traffic deaths went against the general trend last year, increasing to 3,700 from 3,527 in 1959. Traffic accounted for 2,682 deaths in 1951 and 3,209 in 1956.

Of non - traffic deaths, the more important causes were as follows, with the 1959 comparison in brackets:

Falls 1,378 (1,529); drowning 1,189 (1,199); mechanical and food suffocation (mainly among infants) 511 (511); fire 583 (591); poisoning 356 (321).

Ronald McBride Best Guardsman At Fort Henry

Ronald E. McBride, 21-year-old son of Mr and Mrs. Clinton E. McBride of 67 Benton Street, received the prize for best guide amongst the Fort Henry Guardsmen at the annual sunset ceremonial held last Saturday in Fort Henry, Kingston. The former Quinte Secondary School student, who is currently a student in the physical health and recreation course at Queen's University, received his award from James Auld, M.L.A. for Leeds.

The award was made on the basis of marks obtained in the written and oral examinations conducted for guides at Fort Henry and on comments made by visitors to the Fort on guides provided. The participant is also a member of the Fort Henry Band.

During the evening's program there were musical displays put on by the drums of the Fort Henry Guard, the military band of the Royal Canadian Regiment, the trumped band of the Brockville Rifles, a demonstration of drill by a squad from the Royal Canadian Electrical and Mechanical Engineers' School and a demonstration of 19th century British Army drill and battle tactics by the Fort Henry Guard.

Confusing

"By now almost everyone knows how careful Russia has always been about letting its people, and most particularly its soldiers, have contact with Westerners," says the Detroit Free Press in an editorial on the Berlin situation.

We do, indeed, know this, except, perhaps, that we had not realized that this segregation applied with any particular force to men in uniform.

We do, though, recall case after case where travellers in Russia have reported the timidity of the people, their extreme reluctance to be seen in even the most casual conversation with a foreigner.

The Detroit Free Press editorial reminds us of this. It also reminds us that we were amazed the other night, listening to the Jack Paar show, to hear that the Russians were very curious, especially about Americans, and would approach them and ask a variety of personal questions, starting with "How old are you?" and going on to "What do you do?", "How much do you make?", "Do you own a car?" and "What does it cost?" Paar is planning a visit to Russia. A woman who writes for a magazine will be in the party. She was a guest on his show. She had been attending a course on how to act in Russia. The course, we were told, was taught by two young men who spoke Russian fluently and had travelled in Russia. It is not sponsored by the U.S. Government but has its approval. And, according to this woman guest, one woman who visited Russia had carried out an experiment. She had used a watch-timer for how long she could sit in a Russian park, reading an American magazine, before the first Russian would approach her and asked 'How old are you?" The average time for the first contact was 45 seconds. How long would a Russian sit in a Canadian park before a stranger approached him?

All this leaves us a little puzzled.

There is only one possible explanation which does not make liars out of one side or the other. This is that Russians used to be timid, in Stalin's time, but that now they no longer hesitate to approach foreigners.

If this were true, though, one would have thought we would have learned about it before this. It cannot be a change which has taken place overnight.

The weight of evidence is still on the side of the Detroit Free Press viewpoint, that Russia is careful about letting its people have contact with Westerners. But we are not sure that we can any longer say we "know" this is to be true.

The point itself is not overly important, but the fact that reports about it should be so diametrically opposed is of the utmost importance. Whom does one believe these days?

Stridly Personal

C.E. Montague Says "Dullness Is in the Mind"

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

At a garden party the other night, where most of the guests wore fixed expressions of polite ennui, it occurred to me that people who habitually succumb to boredom are usually the most boring people themselves. Being easily bored is a sure sign of spiritual malaise.

When a man or woman finds commonplace activities dull unless he or she is stupefied with liquor, it is a safe assumption that he or she is deadly dull person when sober.

In this connection, I remember a pointed paragraph from C. E. Montague's old book, Disenchantment. He wrote:

"All dullness is in the mind; it comes out of the mind and diffuses itself over everything around the dull person, and then he terms everything dull, and thinks himself the impact of dull things. In my time I have known boys and girls deadeningly taught at the best schools, and all disappointed weaklings and all declining nations, this loss of power to find something but dullness upon what one sees and hears is common enough."

The world, accordingly, is full of people to whom Wordsworth's primrose by the river is just a primrose and nothing more. They get bored with books, music, art, conversation and the contemplation of nature. They are really only half alive and don't even know it.

They are not genuinely interested in anything outside themselves, or their business, and have no purpose except the gratification of a few animal needs. They try to absorb the world into themselves rather than extending themselves into the world. Even in their hobbies, they accumulate and then distribute; and travel only narrows them, for they explore the globe to the dimensions of their own prejudices and predilections.

The scientist, it should be remembered, does not study nature because it is useful to him. His studies it, observed Henri Poincare, because he delights in it, and he delights in it because it is beautiful. Even Aristotle said that wonder is the beginning of wisdom. He was looking right at the people who pull down the shades in a Pullman car and begin playing their interminable games of gin rummy.

I get awfully bored with people who get bored. Their heavy-lidded eyes and their total lack of even dim awareness of their own inability to make the world an interesting place. They are unable to get out of themselves so they want to get out of it.

What if the Big Two Agreed?

Premier Nikita Khrushchev recently talked on two days with Drew Pearson, U.S. newspaper columnist.

Khrushchev is reported to have said: "If America and the Soviet Union stand side by side, there will be no war. No other power would then bring war to the world. Between us, we can guarantee the peace."

Of course Khrushchev is right. A combination of Russia and the U.S. would be invincible.

Most of us will sigh that the difficulty here is that there are no signs of Russia and the U.S. agreeing. Apart, from the short-range viewpoint, it is true that the lack of accord between these two giants is to be deplored.

Consider though what could happen if, at some time in the future, Russia and the U.S. did see eye to eye.

The danger of war would be eliminated, but it is conceivable that this might be at a relatively heavy price.

The size and power of these two countries would not guarantee that they would always be right — indeed, there will be those who will argue that the very possession of such unchallengeable power would be almost certain to result in both becoming at the best conceited and arrogant and at worst self-seeking and tyrannical.

These two nations, together, would control the world. There is grave doubt whether the world would enjoy this.

While the present international situation makes the achievement of an understanding between these powers greatly to be desired, we should not lose sight of the fact that such an accord would make more pressing the prompt establishment of international rule by law, of a system which would make certain that might was never regarded as synonymous with right.

Persons of good sense, I have since observed, seldom fall into disputation, except lawyers, university men, and men of all sorts that have been bred at Edinburgh. — Benjamin Franklin.

Horn Player Is Surprised

The Printed Word

During the intermission, an enthusiast of ten summers or so was overheard by the Festival Theatre staff at Stratford (Ont.) to ask a French-born player for his autograph. The French-born player looked a little surprised, an unintentional commentary, perhaps on the tendency of grownup audiences and critics to be coy and always starstruck.

This may be the only Canadian Theatre where the autograph ever taken home from Stratford (Ont.) to Boise (Idaho) or Calgary (Alta.) or Stratford (Ont.) to ask the Shakespeare Festival city testify to the acceptance in any rate, it was solicited obviously by a real lover of music who could see past the footlights and will grow up to be a supporter of his local symphony orchestra.

A correspondent suggests that a shopping soon on Front Street be arranged for Saturday nights and other correspondents think that the idea is worthy of being given a trial. The suggestion is to close the roadway on Front Street from Bridge Street to Victoria Avenue every Saturday evening from seven o'clock to ten o'clock and make the street safe for pedestrians. Now the street is used for parking and jay riding, to such an extent that it is a dangerous stunt to try to cross the road and many persons who wish to visit shops on both sides of the street are afraid to make the passage. Let the market also be used for parking with a man in charge of the cars. Mayor Hanna and the council should give the idea consideration.

Troublespot? Just Move It

By Art Hoppe
in the San Francisco Chronicle

I hope I'm not late for breakfast today, but I have been up all night trying to figure out where to put Cuba.

It's Mr. Irving F. Laukx' fault. Mr. Laukx is an alert, reasonable 80-year-old gentleman from Healdsburg, who has devoted the last ten years to trying to save the world single - handed with "common sense ideas."

As you may have read in the papers, his latest—and undeniably his greatest — is what to do with Berlin. Which naturally put me right on our side seems to know what to do with. Mr. Laukx has figured exactly what to do with Berlin: Move it.

I naturally called Mr. Laukx up for a chat. He says we could rebuild Berlin somewhere in West Germany for a paltry sum and what better way than as "a monument to world sanity."

Furthermore, he said, his idea would help solve all our trouble spots.

Like Hungary and Matsu.

That got me. I could just see the Red Chinese artillery commander in Matsu come up over the Formosa Straits.

"Okay, men," he says, yawning, "pack your stuff. Both people's bombardment for peace. Ready . . . Aim . . . Hold it! Wait a minute, you old fool guy!"

The only trouble was I couldn't figure out what to do with Quemoy and Matsu, once we moved Berlin.

I think they should be closer to Formosa, but I'd already decided to move Formosa.

Along with its Generalissimo.

But where? Of course, they do say the Indian Ocean's quite nice this time of year. And very deep.

The tough one is Cuba. The problem with Cuba, Mr. Laukx is that it's so near Florida.

You never hear a politician speak of Cuba without him saying: "This insidious outpost of communism only 90 miles (or 90 or 120) depending on his research) from Florida."

And after much thought, I think the only solution is to put Cuba in Africa. That would place it safely 5,000 miles from Florida.

And best of all, Senator Goldwater could invade it every day. Which would make him happy.

But don't misunderstand me about Mr. Laukx' solution of moving Berlin. I don't want to be not be a plausible solution.

But to find a possible one to be the only solution anybody on our side's come up with.'

Slick Tricks With Matches

Ottawa Citizen

The Eddy Match Company people can't be blamed for closing down their wooden match operations in Hull. The use of wooden matches has declined to the point that there may be children growing up today who have never seen one. Which is a pity, because striking a match on a wooden match can be given a touch of drama impossible with the modern safety variety.

It should be understood at once that we're talking about wooden matches, we're talking about the kind that strike anywhere. Those with the red tips aren't too different from the paper matches: Both have to be struck on a specially prepared surface. But a man with self-assurance and sufficient skill could use the kind that strikes matches to make a favorable impression at any kind of social gathering.

Where ladies were present, it used to be considered a form of great dexterity to be able to strike a match with one's thumb-nail. That required patient practice and some courage, but when once mastered inspired admiration and some envy for it was unlikely that anyone else in the gathering had gained this accomplishment. For a stag party, especially if engaged in fibbing, it was always considered a sign of rugged manhood to be able to strike a match on the seat of one's pants.

The decline in the use of wooden matches may be attributable as much as it can be attributed to the decline in the disappearance of the vest. The lower right-hand vest pocket used to be the logical place in which to carry loose matches. Carried in the pants pocket they could be dangerous and in the jacket pocket they couldn't be found. Obviously, since few men now wear vests, few cat handle loose matches. Thus do changing fashions have effect far beyond their immediate impact.

Computer Politics

Winnipeg Free Press

Politics is getting too scientific.

At the Canadian National Exhibition in Toronto the Liberal party has a booth with a computer. Everybody receives a card which lists five major political issues. Opposite each are three solutions (one unmarked) is that subscribed to by the Liberal Party.

The card, when marked, is run through the machine. The person who has marked the card learns how close he or how far from Liberal policy his ideas are. More important, the party learns how many people agree with the machine, learns how many people agree or disagree with the Liberal platform — and where.

Well and good. The Liberals should get a pat on the back for their enterprise in jazzing up a political booth. At exhibitions most political booths are about as interesting and eye-catching as week-old garbage.

But what is the next step in the use of computers in politics? What is to prevent a party, with enough money and a large enough organization, from sampling the nation on major issues and getting a cross section of opinion? The sampling cards will then be run through a machine, the results tabulated, the most popular solution (that is, the one marked by most people) be duly recorded. And, on that basis, the party's platform for the next election will be made up.

If there is any accuracy in scientific public opinion polls, this method can't lose. The trouble is, of course, that if all parties do this, all platforms will be identical and the voter will have no choice.

Perhaps, on second thoughts the Liberals in Toronto should go back to big pictures of Mike Pearson and pretty girls handing out pamphlets running down the Conservatives.

Old Tales Hard to Bury Says Well Known Columnist

By Joseph G. Molner, M.D.

A bit ago I just read a book called "Thalia — the Story of the Bulge."

Now I don't set myself up as a literary critic, and certainly not as a military expert. I'm just a doctor, doing the best I can. But I did find the book fascinating, and I note that the critics did, too, as I suppose my opinion was justified. The book made me live though that important battle. I shuddered but I felt that I saw it happen.

One medical item caught my eye. About the battle with the cold — about light boots causing trench foot, loose boots stuffed with paper doing a better job; about newspapers wrapped around chests under wool shirts to cut the wind and keep body warmth inside. It's a story all of us should read. Well, not a story, because it's history, and real. It happened, in all its brave misery.

And these three sentences: "The facts of cold, long known to men of Northern Maine were passed on to men from Alabama and Texas. "Frozen toes, ears, noses, were rubbed gently to start circulation. The old wives' remedy of rubbing snow on these frozen parts often brought on gangrene."

This bit of wisdom meant the difference between life and death to our troops. Many died! However, enough lived to save us all.

This made me speculate on why and how "old wives' tales" are born, and why they are so hard to bury. Most of them are known to be false. The process, I believe, is this:

1 — Some problem (in this case freezing) is obvious.

2 — No answer is apparent. Yet people naturally feel that there must be an answer.

3 — So somebody, with all sincerity, invents one, and with sincerity convinces others that he's the right answer.

4 — It isn't the true answer — but it sounds plausible, and more than likely, nobody can prove it is wrong.

5 — So under such circumstances, the idea is repeated, again and again, and is believed since no one can disprove it.

6 — And that is how we come to accept things that we "just know are true" but which sometimes aren't.

That's why it's so hard to upset some of the scores of old wives' tales, even after science, has proved them wrong. After years of the habit of believing something, it's hard to give up something we "know" is true.

That's why people like me try to keep pecking away at these notions — the soundness of notions about aluminum cooking pans being "bad," and guess

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

It is now pretty generally admitted by the medical profession that the problem of our old guilty party in hay fever. For a great many years, the golden rod was regarded far and wide as the chief villain in this matter. Since the misery reached its height just when the golden rod was at the peak of its beauty, along the fence rows and in the pastures, there was the usual excuse for people jumping to conclusions. We are in the habit of seizing upon the obvious for the explanation.

The golden rod is a North American plant, and there are seventy-five species of it in the eastern half of the continent alone. It belongs to the composite or daisy family of plants that has 20,000 species all over the earth.

One of the most beautiful flower arrangements I ever saw was golden rod as the basic content. In England, it is prized as a garden perennial, and I have seen bed of it there, in cultivated gardens, that were incomparable as the background to other autumn flowers.

The trouble with us is, we don't grow it near enough to have a look at it.

Hillier Student Awarded Two Scholarships

PICTON — Bill MacGregor, son of Mrs. P. MacGregor of Hillier, and a Grade 13 student at Prince Edward Collegiate, Picton, has gained outstanding recognition in being awarded scholarships worth approximately $4,000. Bill, who will be taking an engineering course at Waterloo, has received notice from that university that he has been awarded a mathematical scholarship worth $800 plus free tuition the first year, and $900 each subsequent year as long as he attains good standing in his course. The quality for this valuable award, Bill was required to rank in the top one per cent of those talented students all across the province who wrote the Mathematical Association examination last spring, and was required further to be of first - class standing on nine Grade 13 papers, and very high standing in the three mathematical papers. His average on the three papers was 90 per cent.

The Collegiate has received official notice that Bill has been awarded another honor at least as great in being named an Ontario Scholar by the Department of Education. This award which carries with it a $400 scholarship, is made to those students in the province who attain an average 60 per cent on eight Grade 13 papers.

Watch for TEEN-AGE CANADA in this newspaper starting this Friday.

40 Characters In Play to Be Presented

"Inherit the Wind", most ambitious local stage presentation yet planned in the Quinte district, is now ready for its first production step. An executive meeting of the Belleville and Trenton drama groups who are combining resources for this contemporary stage classic, recently finalized production plans.

Casting' the play's 40 characters will take place next week in Belleville and Trenton. Director James Alexander hopes to solve the first production problem, finding his players, with three readings. Immediately after, the play will go into rehearsal for presentation in mid-November.

"Inherit the Wind" is a dramatization of an American legal singularity that has now become known as the "Scopes Monkey Trial". It is the real-life drama concerning the prosecution of a small town school teacher for lecturing on Evolution. The ensuing trial brought a bitter contest between Clarence Darrow and William Jennings Bryan, two of the greatest jurists of the century. Their famous court battle electrified the world as it transformed a backwoods town into a fighting ground for human rights. Mr. Alexander will hold readings for "Inherit the Wind" next Monday in Trenton and Wednesday and Friday in Belleville.

WILL STUDY SYSTEMS

WINDSOR (CP) — A study of parking meter enforcement systems in other cities will be made before Windsor decides whether or not to hire five "meter maids." The police commission Wednesday authorized Chief Carl Farrar to study meter regulations in Ann Arbor and Flint, Mich., where women have been used for several years for the job of handing out parking tags.

A downtown Toronto tattooist this week is offering "special bargain rates" so people can easily be identified when they're killed by nuclear bombs. Pancho, shown in his shop, says he isn't kidding. "Why would I joke about a thing like this?" Pancho offers to tattoo a person's name and blood type for $2. "If we're not all dead I may continue the sale next week." (CP Wirephoto).

Camp Wangoma For 'Y' Boys Had Good Year

Residents of Hastings County will be interested to know that Y.M.C.A. Camp Wangoma, in the Bancroft district, has just concluded its sixth, and most successful season in its present location.

Camp Wangoma is sponsored by the East York Y.M.C.A., Toronto, and was established for many years on Lake Simcoe, as Camp Sunfish. Eight years ago, it became evident that the Lake Simcoe area would soon be too crowded for a high quality boys' camping program to be carried on, and a search was made for a new site. After a year of looking, Lake Wannamaker, 3 miles from MacArthurs Mills, and 31 miles east of Bancroft off route 500, was decided on. A 150 acre site was purchased on the north end of the lake, and the new camp established.

In the first six years of operation, many new buildings have been erected, including a beautiful Dining Hall overlooking the lake, a hospital, and eight cabins, each sleeping eight boys and a counsellor. The waterfront is clean sand, sloping off gently, and swimming, canoeing, and tripping are major parts of the program. The camp has a capacity of 130 boys, and has a waterfront fleet of 35 canoes, six kayaks, 12 punts and two sailboats.

The Wannamaker Lake site was chosen primarily because it is the middle of ideal canoe-tripping country; 15 miles from the north outlet of Lake Wesmankoon, and 70 miles south of Algonquin Park. Canoe trips up to 14 days in length, often covering 150 miles, are taken each period by the older boys at camp, through the Park.

Leadership development is one of the first concerns of the Camp Staff and a regular program of training older campers is followed, with potential counsellors being sent at the end of each summer to the Provincial Government Training Camp at Bark Lake. All Counsellors are over 17 years of age, with Jr. Counsellors age 17 and Counsellors-in-Training age 16. Boys may attend as Voyageur Campers until age 15.

Other divisions of the camp are: Adventurer, age 9-10; Pioneers, age 11-13; and Frontiermen, age 13-14. Registration is open to any boy 9 to 16 and it is the hope of the camp that more persons from Hastings County will become aware of the camping and conference possibilities of Camp Wangoma. The distance from Belleville is approximately 90 miles, paved but for the last 6 miles from Hermon.

North Hastings is a magnificent recreational area and Y.M.C.A. Camp Wangoma offers a high quality boys' camping program, taking the fullest possible advantage of the many beautiful lakes and waterways.

'Ask Henry'

Canadian Boy, 11, Writes Column for 36 Newspapers

The ranks of North America's big-name newspaper writers have been invaded by an 11-year-old Canadian boy who makes his debut in the Ontario Intelligencer, Saturday.

Henry Makow of Ottawa, author of "ASK HENRY," was looking for a way to earn spending money when he stumbled on the idea of writing a newspaper column. He'd been turned down for jobs in a super-market (too young) and washing cars (too small) when he decided to try journalism.

Henry, son of Dr. and Mrs. David Makow (his father is an electronics engineer for the National Research Council), thought that if grown-ups could write columns about children's problems then why couldn't a child?

"I've struggled with my parents for 11 years now, so I should know the child's side by now," Henry decided.

Henry submitted his idea to William Metcalfe, managing editor of the Ottawa Journal. Mr. Metcalfe put Henry on trial, and within a week Henry became a national personality.

Since then, in rapid succession, Henry's column has been picked up for syndication by the Toronto - Telegram News Service and now appears in 36 newspapers in Canada and the U.S.

Henry has been the subject of wire service feature stories, has been written up in two national magazines, and has been interviewed on the TV networks of the CBC, CBS and NBC. In addition, the Prentice-Hall book publishing firm of New Jersey has signed up Henry to write a book on his experiences and advice.

All this success does not seem to have gone to Henry's head. His acquaintances and teacher describe him as the "same bright boy" he always was. Henry's column, ASK HENRY, will now be appearing every Saturday in The Ontario Intelligencer. Look for it.

Cabinet Minister's Wife Enjoys Political Life

By TOM WATT

VICTORIA (CP)—Agnes Peterson realizes that in her husband's precarious occupation as a politician the day may come when he will have to face defeat.

She considers it her job to make that day as painless as possible and so ease the transition back to private life.

The attractive 31-year-old wife of British Columbia's education minister, Leslie Ray Peterson, hopes to do this by preserving the calm of her home life and husband fed before he entered politics in 1957.

This is not easy, Mrs. Peterson admits, since the pleasures and problems of public life are not easily dismissed.

"As the wife of a cabinet minister I have had the opportunity to meet people and visit places where the average person would be unable to go," she said during an interview in her comfortable two-storey suburban Victoria home.

TOUR IN EUROPE

One occasion was a recent tour in Europe. Mr. Peterson was making an inspection of schools for Canadian servicemen. It was on this trip that Mrs. Peterson decided she must learn to speak French.

"We were guests of the Italian minister of education and although his wife was a charming woman we just could not communicate. I could speak no Italian and she couldn't talk English. She could, however, speak French, as many Europeans can."

Taking a course in conversational French presents problems since Mrs. Peterson considers it her prime duty to be herself available when she and her husband are required at a public function.

This means she will have to have private instruction and on an irregular basis. Finding someone who will submit to such a schedule is a problem.

Mrs. Peterson has two active youngsters, Karen, 4, and Raymond, 9, to look after as well as trying to work piano lessons into her tight schedule and pursue her chief hobby, millinery.

As an 18-year-old office worker for the Saskatchewan government in Regina, Agnes Rose Hine decided she wanted to become a career as a model in Toronto.

Her brother felt she didn't have the temperament for the highly competitive field and talked her into taking a trip to Vancouver for a holiday instead. She decided the coast was where she wanted to live and got a job.

Her brother, a law student at the University of British Columbia, introduced Agnes to a fellow law student, Leslie Peterson. In 1950 they were married and Mr. Peterson began his practice.

At the time, he had only an academic interest in politics, Mrs. Peterson recalls.

"Les helped the Social Credit candidate in North Vancouver in the 1956 election and at that time he got to know George Moxim, member for Vancouver centre.

"George was in poor health and I guess he knew he was dying because he made his daughter promise that when he died, Les be asked to contest the Social Credit."

Although politics is an important part of her life, Mrs. Peterson insists she isn't an expert.

"When I go to the PTA meetings I'm just another parent. I don't profess to be an expert and the other parents don't expect me to be an authority on education department policy."

Showing of Off-Beat Clothes Draws Crowd

By KIDDY GILMORE

LONDON (AP) — Clothes designer Mary Quant, couturier to London's Chelsea set, kicked off the current Wednesday on her collection of wacky elegance for the 1961-62 season.

Chelsea, once the home of Bohemian artists, writers and poets, is now widely known as the playground of the Chelsea set — young men and - women, - about - town with a strong sprinkling of beatniks.

The showing of off - beat clothes drew a large crowd.

It was presented to a background of modern jazz.

Everyone seemed to like the new clothes.

Models walked around in high skirts with hems two inches above the knee.

Another eyecatcher was a skirt that features silk bloomers instead of a skirt.

The bloomers were decorated with snowflakes in pink, turquoise and beige.

Among the startling breakaway wear were hockey caps — the latest thing for this autumn fogs.

"We plan to market these clothes all over the country," said a spokesman for the couturier. "They're not just for Chelsea, and they'll stop traffic."

Traffic stopped all right.

Ontario Camp Council Elects 1961-2 Officers

Ryde Lake C.G.I.T. Camp at Gravenhurst was the setting for the Ontario Camp Council, August 28 to September 1st. Camp Council, sponsored by the Ontario Girls' Work Board, of which Miss Ines Watson is secretary, is to Canadian Girls in Training what Older Boys' Parliament is to teen-age boys. It represents girls from Presbyterian, Baptist and United Church groups.

Seventy-four campers, ages 15 to 17, were delegates from areas stretching from Windsor to Cornwall and Thunder Bay to Niagara Falls. The four members of the provincial executive, elected by campers last year, assisted in the directing of the program which was planned to inspire each delegate, through fellowship, worship and study, to become more nearly the girl that God would have her be, to become a living witness to others of the real meaning of the Canadian Girls in Training purpose, and to become a vital member of the Christian Church." The director of the camp was Mrs. R. S. Hill of Exeter.

In addition to Bible study, the girls participated in groups on World Mission of the Church, handicrafts, worship, sketching, Christian drama, music and recreation.

An interesting visitor was Miss Mary S Edgar of Sundridge, who was a member of the committee which organized C.G.I.T. over 40 years ago. Miss Edgar wrote the C.G.I.T. hymn and the Campers' Hymn, "God Who Touches Earth with Beauty."

The Belleville and district area was represented by Elizabeth Hamilton.

The new executive for 1961-62 is as follows: president - Myrna Clarke, Falconbridge; vice - president, Jan Sunstrum, Niagara Falls; executive members, Bonnie Mae Allen, Goderich and Donna Perry, Islington.

WEDDINGS

COOKE — DENNISON

On Saturday, August 26, 1961, at 2 p.m., a lovely summertime wedding was solemnized in the Church of the Nazarene, Stamford, Ontario, when Mayne Dinsmore, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Dinsmore, Clarksburg, Ontario, became the bride of Gerald Cooke, son of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Cooke of Stirling, Ontario. The Rev. J. E. Hall of Grogan, Toronto, officiated before a background of ferns and pink and white gladioli.

Traditional wedding music was played by Mrs. George Adams, who accompanied the soloist, Mrs. Harold Dinsmore, in a lovely rendition of "Because" and "The Lord is My Shepherd," and also played the accompaniment for the congregational hymn, "Guide Me O Thou Great Jehovah."

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was radiantly lovely in her bridal gown of satin de cole featuring a scooped neckline and long pointed sleeves, and accented by a lace-trimmed hodice and skirt. She carried a bouquet of pink roses, pinks and stephanotis with trailing ivy, and wore a shoulder-length veil.

The maid of honor, Miss Beth Dinsmore, Toronto, sister of the bride, and the flower girl, Miss Sharon Dinsmore, Thornbury, niece of the bride, were daintily gowned in pink silk organza over taffeta with matching headdress. They also carried baskets of white Shasta 'mums with ivy.

Mr. Gerald Cooke, Sudbury, brother of the bridegroom, was best man, and Mr. Stanley Dinsmore, Clarksburg, brother of the bride, and Mr. Francis Thompson, Belleville, were the ushers.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held at Alexander's at Craigleith, which was appropriately decorated for the occasion with pink and white gladioli. The bridal table was especially attractive, centred by a three-tier wedding cake flanked by white and pink candles.

The bride's mother received the guests, gowned in brown and white lace with brown accessories and a corsage of pink carnations; also receiving was the bridegroom's mother, who wore a blue and white printed silk with blue and white accessories and a corsage of pink roses.

The couple chose a green sheath dress with matching jacket, a green and white flower hat and a corsage of yellow and white baby 'mums for the wedding trip through the Rideau Lakes district.

Guests were present from Toronto, Stirling, Sudbury, Ann Arbor, Mich., Peterborough, Kingston, Madoc, Hamilton and

Pope Says Jobs Should Develop Motherly Spirit

CASTELGANDOLFO (Reuters)—Pope John said Wednesday that if a woman works outside the home her job should develop her motherly spirit.

The pontiff told a meeting of women and industrialists that the equal rights justly proclaimed for man and women in no way implies equal functions.

"The Creator," he said, "has given woman natural gifts, inclinations and dispositions which are her own and different from a man. This means that she has also been assigned particular tasks."

Pope John, speaking at his summer residence here near Rome, also said that "today, too, the world needs a mother's sensitivity to reveal and keep away the climate of violence and carelessness in which men sometimes are caught."

He said God had ordered woman's whole being toward motherhood but declared that the duties of Roman Catholic women "are no longer confined to the life of the family."

He urged progressive rise to all the responsibilities of associated life calls for her active part on the social and political planes."

CNRA Holds Social Event

On Tuesday evening the members of the C.N.R.A. enjoyed another social evening.

Everyone sat down to a delicious pot-luck supper after which entertainment was provided. Mr. Ross Sweet rendered several vocal and guitar selections. Mrs. Molly Baggerly at the piano along with Mr. Sweet, led a hearty sing-song.

While the sing song was being held along with bids of dialogue Mr. Jack Fitzgerald made a tape recording and when the tape was played back it proved to be most humorous.

The dart lovers enjoyed a good game of darts during the course of the evening.

Winners of the door prizes were: Joe Martin; Margaret Vinkle; Marjorie Campbell; Mr. and Mrs. Glenn; Betty Sweet and Shirley Welch and the draw prize was won by Mr. Fraser.

Mrs. Gladys Fitzgerald announced the next social meeting would also be in the form of a pot-luck supper which she asked them all as this gives everyone a chance to get acquainted.

'Lines on Life'

By Dr. Stuart E. Rosenberg

Time has a way of running out on us, playing tricks on even the most unsuspecting.

Too often we spend so much effort preparing for what's to come that we never get to the blessings. A host of lives have been wasted anticipating the future without making the most of the "everlasting now."

We need to learn how to look ahead: but never overlook today in hooking over tomorrow.

Before we cross the tracks to our never-never-land, we've got to stop, look and listen to the call of the hour here and now.

In search of the rainbow at the edge of the horizon, many a man has lost his way in life. For a man who is seeking everything ends up with nothing if he's never satisfied with something.

Here's the story of a poor woman who now knows better. She received an egg as a gift for her sick child.

"Mother, may I have the egg?" the boy cried out. "I'm hungry."

"No, my son," she replied, "we must keep an eye to the future. We'll save the egg."

"But what will we do with the egg?" the boy asked.

"We will ask our good neighbor to let her hen sit on our egg until it hatches into a chicken."

"Then shall we have chicken to eat?" the lad asked hopefully.

"No my child. We must think of the future. We will keep the chicken until it grows and begins to lay eggs."

"Then we'll have lots of eggs to eat!" the boy exclaimed.

"No, not so fast," replied the mother. "We shall gather the eggs together and have our chicken sit on them until they all hatch into many more chickens."

"Then we'll be able to eat chicken as often as we like, won't we mother?"

"Not if we are to think of the future", the mother responded. "We would sell some of the chickens and buy a calf, which we would raise until it is a cow. Eventually the cow would have calves, some of which we would raise and sell to buy a field.

Just imagine, my son, how rich we shall become! We'll have a field with cows, with calves, with chickens and with eggs — and all from this one small egg!"

The woman became so excited at the thought of her future riches, that she clapped her hands with joy. But, alas — in so doing she smashed the little egg.

Counting her chickens before they were hatched, she never got to enjoy what she did have. And thinking only of what we are going to do, we neglect to do what we should be doing. We've got to be prepared. Not for tomorrow alone but for today as well.

So dream your dreams, pursue your visions and set your sights high and wide. But never barter this day for another. Right now, it's all you have.

THE FAMILY COUNCIL

Mrs. F. R. — She avoids people in her age group when we go visiting.

Bernice R. — I always make a fool of myself in talking to boys.

* * *

Mrs. F. H. — Whenever we shop somewhere with Bernice, like there happen to be young men or boys on the scene, she either disappears or gets very busy playing with the dog or the baby.

Other girls get right into easy chatter with whoever's around, but Bernice clams up, wriggles and squirms and looks as if she's about to have a tooth pulled. This awkwardness has gotten worse, even since a group of boys made fun of her for not knowing who Rocky Colavito was. She thought he was a boxer.

I tell her to laugh and be natural. But no. When a boy's on deck, she ducks. How can I helped her get over this cowardice?

* * *

Bernice R. — I'm 13 and I've never been a smooth talker like the other girls. Even with grown-ups I get my tongue all snarled up. So if you must have a "line" to get acquainted, I'm dead. I can't think of a thing to say to new kids. My mind goes blank and I choke up.

Still, my mother thinks the more she drags me around, the easier it will get. But it gets worse. Once or twice I really tried to make a clever remark. Instead, I made a fool of myself. For example, I wished a college boy an "reserving" vacation. He told me to look that word up. It means crippling! So now I play safe.

* * *

The Council — Bernice would love it in Arabia. Visitors have "conversation beads" which give them something to fiddle with while they think of something to say, listen politely or merely ponder. In this society, the sadder for the hailing-pot tongue, the race seems to be the glib and flip.

But there's one pre-eminent lisa we're glad to throw, Bernice: Think of the other guy and stop thinking of yourself. In pulling a malapropism, she was mortified and wished the ground would swallow her. The young man, however, may have enjoyed her error, found it refreshing (and aggrandizing to his own ego, for he knew the word.) So from his viewpoint she was a conversational wow.

To help Bernice, Mrs. R. might begin by steering her toward people who share one or two of her special enthusiasms. By this time, for example she must know a great deal about dogs and babies — her shield from her general dilly something solid to talk about. Bernice may find herself plunging into dialogue effortlessly.

Then, concentrating on the "party of the second part," Bernice will find most of them falling into two groups — those who just want a good listener and those who "hold up their end" but can also enjoy "friendly silences." The first group should be easy for her to please by presenting a "tell me more face." And the second group is one she can identify with once she realizes that the silences need not be compulsively punctured by nearly pronouncements. Often it's the fact of talking, not the actual content, that matters.

So Bernice, no need to make a fuss about light chatter. Just try to put the other kids at ease (even if some of them seem not to need help; and you'll suddenly say, "Look Ma! I'm jabbering!"

Cross-Canada Survey

Dresses for Fall, Winter Slim Body, Not Really Fitted, Magenta Popular

By EDNA BLAKELY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The A-line is the dominant feature of Canadian fall and winter fashions for women.

The effect is achieved by flared hemlines and comes as close as anything to being adopted nationalty.

The middle style - conscious Canadians in general follow the fashions set by Paris and New York and delivered by manufacturers to Toronto, Montreal and Winnipeg, but do assert their individuality in some ways.

A Cross - Canada survey by The Canadian Press found, for example, that although magents, followed closely by green, will be the most popular colors, there are some dissenters.

Dresses for autumn and winter skim the body, not really fitted, but following the body lines much more closely than in past seasons. Blouson styles are a popular accompaniment to slim skirts.

LOTS OF FUR

Fur trim is everywhere, on coats, suits, dresses and hats. One Toronto department store reports it has broke "by the carload" and a large stock of "profile" clothes.

"It's a year of coats," says Toronto fashion consultant Dora Matthews. There is something for everyone—cape styles, collarless reefers, shaped coats fitted almost like an officer's overcoat and princess-line coats darted in at the waist in front.

In shoes, squared toes and stacked heels are being accepted in some cities more quickly than elsewhere. Some resistance is reported in such placed as Saint John, N.B., and Edmonton, where the pointed toe and slender heel is expected to remain popular.

Where there are differences from region to region in preferences for a particular style, the weather is often the reason. Coats with large fur collars are being greeted with delight by women in St. John's, Nfld. They find them practical for keeping out the wintery blasts.

QUIETER COLORS

At the same time, Newfoundland women are considered likely to show some resistance to magenta. They tend to stick with the more reserved colors, favoring blue, green, brown and gold.

There is some difference of opinion on sleeves for dresses. Toronto stores report lots of sleeveless dresses. An Ottawa report says they're no longer popular there. And Newfoundland ladies favor full-length sleeves, again because of the weather.

Three big Montreal department stores have found that women are buying better-quality dresses with more detail than in former years. For whatever the reason, many women who paid $29.95 for a dress last year are paying $35 for something better.

Evening dresses are mostly straight and slim in rich fabrics although a few bouffant styles can be found.

Hats are big and bold and range in price from $3.95 for some felts to $249.95 for mink.

Other regional preferences:

Toronto—The ensemble dress which can be worn by the girl going directly from the office to an evening date.

Edmonton—Jackets and three-quarter-length coats which are winning out over full-length fur coats.

Vancouver—The tunic dress and the spice colors.

Halifax—Costume suits with the blouse matching the jacket lining.

Saint John, N.B.—Italian silk dresses.

Regina—Transition black "seasons, wools and silks are being shown but magenta, ruby red, purple, green and brown are expected to find favor for fall.

Ottawa—Short gloves, chunky jewelry and emphasis on fabric such as jersey, fine wool and crepe for dresses seking from $15 to $150.

Winnipeg—A deep wine shade and black olive for leather shoes.

Montreal—Needlepoint toes.

SPEAKING of MANNERS

DO YOU SHOW PROPER COURTESY TO THE BLIND?

Is it polite to avoid using the word "see" when talking to a blind person?

This is a question that bothers many people when they find themselves in conversation with a blind person. But it shouldn't.

Use of the word "see" comes perfectly natural to the blind person, himself, so anyone should use it as it happens to occur.

According to the American Foundation for the Blind, Inc., there are 355,000 blind persons enjoying normal social and business lives among sighted companions. You can best help them by extending the same simple courtesies you'd offer to those who can see.

Here are a few suggestion.

When you walk with a blind person, don't clutch his elbow and forcibly steer. Let him take your arm This way, the motion of the body will guide him gently.

If a blind person asks for directions, be sure to state "left" or "right", depending on the way he is facing. Even if he is accompanied by a guide, speak directly to the blind person instead of directing your answers to his companion.

In a restaurant, tell him what's on the menu. You can let him know the position of the food on his plate, and if he wants helps, cut his meat, etc. But generally offer no more assistance than necessary.

Whenever you escort a blind person, take a strange place, quietly describe for him what's in the room, where furniture is, and who's there. Then, when showing him to a chair, put his hand on the arm or back. He'll be able to seat himself easily.

Should you ever see a blind person alone, it's always courteous to let him know you're there and who you are. If he has a guide dog at his side, never pet the dog or offer him food. (It might distract him, and his master's life depends on his contantly staying alert.)

Most important: Always ask a blind person if he wants help before giving it. Many are completely self-sufficient and do not like to be aided without first being asked. Use the dog or offer let the situation and your own common sense be your guide.

Make The Best of The Grape Harvest

By Mary Moore

Susan G. wrote asking for the recipe for homemade grape juice "so that it won't cloud." Further, Anna H. told us (August 31) that she made her own grape juice as a strict economy measure.

The production of grapes has increased in many parts of Canada due to the demand from new Canadians. So if you are energetic and live in an area where grapes are abundant you can have a good winter's supply of grape products for a small outlay.

GRAPE JUICE:

Wash Concord grapes well and stem them. Measure them. To every 6 cups add ½ cup water. Bring to boil and simmer covered 15 minutes. Strain through moistened jelly bag or triple cheesecloth overnight. Do not press the bag or it will cloud. Measure juice. Bring to boiling point and add 1 cup sugar for each 4 cups of juice. Just bring to boil again. Pour into sterile jars and leave headspace of ½ inch. Seal. Process in hot water bath for 10 minutes for both pints and quarts or in oven on rack at 275 deg. Fahr. for 15 minutes for both pints and quarts. Tighten seal. Never loosen it.

GRAPE JELLY:

Use grapes that are not fully ripened for jelly. Wash well, but pull from stems, drain. Put in preserving kettle and add water to cross below top layer of grapes. Simmer until seeds float, facilitating this by crushing with potato masher gently. Pour through jelly bag and let drip overnight. Do not press bag. Measure juice. Bring to boiling point and boil 3 minutes. It is advisable to test for pectin by measuring 1 teaspoon each of grape juice and methyl hydrate (rubbing alcohol) into saucer. After 30 seconds if a clot will form juice contains sufficient pectin. Discard this. It is poisonous. Add an equal quantity of sugar. (If juice will not jell with test boil longer until it does.) Bring to brisk boil, skim off scum. Test for jelly stage by dipping some juice up on a metal spoon, let it run off side. When it separates into 2 drops which tend to "sheet off" it is ready to pour. Remove from heat, remove scum and pour into sterile jelly jars and seal with paraffin, adding second coating when first is set. Cover with lid or wax paper or foil, label, store in cool place.

GRAPE CONSERVE:

Five pounds grapes, any variety, 4 pounds sugar, 2 pounds raisins, ½ pound walnuts, broken into pieces. Slip skins from grapes and save the skins. Gently stew the skinned grapes (do not add water) until tender. Put through sieve into the same kettle with the skins, discarding the seeds. Cook over low heat for about ¾ hour, stirring frequently to prevent sticking. (Grape conserve is likely to stick unless watched closely. Heat should be very low. An asbestos mat will help prevent sticking.) Add sugar and raisins and cook until the mixture is thickened, stirring frequently. About 10 minutes before taking the conserve from the heat, add the walnuts. Pour into hot sterilized jelly glasses. When cold, seal with paraffin.

Successful Living

By Doris Clark

(A Canadian Social Worker Helps with Human Problems)

Fairly Cute—But . .

DORIS CLARK

DEAR DORIS:—I am fairly cute and I am quite short for a 16-year-old (5 feet ½ inch to be exact.) When I see boys at school I am not too shy and have quite a bit of fun, but when it comes to dances at parties I am rarely asked.

Is it because of height or because of shyness around boys?—WHAT IS IT?

DEAR WHAT IS IT?—You guessed it. You're shy. Which can be overcome a good deal by knowing how to act in polite mixed company.

A few dollars for a series of ballroom dancing lessons right now would be money well spent. With poise and gracefulness on the dance floor you will manage much better with the boys — even slow them a few steps.

Could you earn the money, or save it from your allowance? (The height problem will be overcome with age!)

* * *

DEAR DORIS:—At 33 I seem to have reached a standstill in my job. After ten years I know the work inside out. I have had the same salary for the last five years. Nothing has increased but the volume of work I do, and this such that I work about an hour later than the other girls two or three days a week.

I am now supporting my sick mother and all my expenses are up. My girl friend says I should ask for a raise and I suppose I should. But I dread this. Can you give me the nerve?—TILLY THE TOILER.

* * *

DEAR TILLY:—"The laborer is worthy of his hire".

The "nerve" comes of knowing you are worth more. Your salary is raised by your market value; not by what it costs you to take care of your mother.

If you are handling more work or carrying more responsibility, these are fair reasons for carrying home more money. If these ten years have given you added poise and steadiness, you can point out that your work reflects these qualities.

Line up your sales points, then go to your boss ready to show him that your stock has gone up. Approach him at the right time — not when he is likely to have early-morning blues, or to be pressed, or tired.

Put your case simply and pleasantly. Don't whine or complain. Act and feel as if you deserve consideration — and you will get it.

* * *

DEAR DORIS:—I have a crush on the boy who lives next door. Although I have made several attempts to attract his attention he never seems to notice me. He isn't going around with any other girls.

I don't want it to appear that I am chasing him, so how can I get him to notice me?—DISCOURAGED.

* * *

DEAR DISCOURAGED:—Stop trying. The more anxious you get, the less interesting you are. Don't think he hasn't noticed your efforts!

If he is near your age, and your mother approves, you could give a picnic party in your own back yard with other girls and boys, and invite him. Then get him to help you when it comes to games or serving the food.

Be friendly with other boys and learn to be comfortable as a hostess or dance partner, by practising doing it. Look to your looks. Fix your hair prettily, take care of your complexion, wear a little make-up, but not too much. Wear only clean, well-pressed dresses, with buttons all in place.

When you are sure you look o.k., forget about yourself and take a real interest in the people you are with, both girls and boys. This is the crowning skill which can draw all comers — even your current "crush".

* * *

DEAR DORIS:—My sister is ill in mental hospital. I have visited her once, and she was so rude to me I hate to think of going back.

She swore at me, then turned her back and would not speak again, even when I coaxed her to look at the fruit I brought. People think I am mean to stay away, but I can't stand such treatment. What do you think?—YOUNG SISTER.

* * *

DEAR YOUNG SISTER:—Go again. Even if her illness means she still cannot be her usual friendly self, it is tremendously important to her to see you. She must be kept in touch with the real world. She must know, underneath, that the people who have always been close to her still love her.

If you have reason to feel that because of something that happened in the past, your presence upsets her, talk to the social worker or psychiatrist who is working with her and be guided by his advice.

Do not let your own distress keep you from having the very important part that is yours in bringing about your sister's recovery.

For "Do Visit The Mentally Ill," a helpful pamphlet on the subject, write to the Canadian Mental Health Association, P.O. Box 555, Postal Station F, Toronto 5, Ontario.

Annigoni of America' Tag on Montreal Girl

By CAROL KENNEDY

LONDON (CP) — "The Annigoni of America" — that's the tag some Manhattan connoisseurs have attached to Canada-born painter Isabelle Magor, who turns out glowing, life-like portraits from her studios in New York.

The vivacious Miss Magor, in London for a three-week exhibition at the Westbury Hotel, hadn't heard the comment. She was surprised and delighted to be compared to the Italian famed for his portraits of Britain's royal family.

Born in Montreal of a British father and a French mother who had two artists in her family, Isabelle Magor began painting at the age of seven.

She studied at the Ecole des Beaux Arts in Paris, doing "everything from murals to miniatures." But her real break came when she met Jacques Maroger, a retoucher at the Louvre museum for 40 years.

"From him the young Canadian student learned the secrets of how the old masters primed their canvases and mixed their own pigments.

LUCKY BREAK

"Those wonderful jewel tones that have so fired admirers of of years are due to a special chemical formula in the mixing. The old masters prepared their canvases weeks in advance so they were silky smooth when the paint went on. I was lucky enough to learn just how it was done."

A keen interest in people from childhood—she recalls studying how her baby brother's eyes changed when he laughed—led naturally to portrait work.

She usually needs five sittings for a portrait; says her subjects all end up "my greatest friends."

Unusually three - dimensional in quality, her studies seem to have a life of their own. Dominating the London exhibition is Figaro that she paints people "as they are—perhaps improving them a trifle" rather than let herself be influenced by a personal interpretation.

DOES PASTELS

Besides working in oils, Isabelle Magor has a special way with pastels. She uses a white watercolor board instead of the usual tinted paper and works from the coat in. This way, the highlights come naturally from the backing, eliminating the need for white pastel, which gives a hard, flat effect.

The result is her pastels combine the transparency of a watercolor with the depth and modelling of an oil.

Now the widow of a New York stockbroker, Miss Magor settled in the U.S. when she was 18. She has been back to Canada only on visits since. But her sitters have included such eminent Canadians as the late Edward Johnson, a former general manager of New York's Metropolitan Opera and father of Mrs. George Drew, Brig. Gen. John Price and Pierre Dupuy, Canadian ambassador to France.

Competently Handles Duties As Only Woman in Air Force Public Relations

By DEIRDRE MUNGOVAN

OTTAWA (CP)—An attractive blue-eyed blonde has the task of telling Canada of the activities of 3,000 women serving with the Royal Canadian Air Force across the country and abroad.

Flying Officer Joyce Kennedy is an unruffled 27-year-old who handles efficiently the duties entrusted to her as the only woman in the air force public relations department.

"If I thought Canadians were more aware of what our girls and youths were accomplishing, then I'd feel the job was worth while," she said.

Her job includes preparation of news releases and technical articles, answering general queries and acting as escort for reporters and photographers.

Just now, she's busy promoting the anniversary celebrations of the RCAF women's division established as a permanent force in 1941.

Glamorous moments come when FO Kennedy is sent with visitors to Canada's far north. "I love that country," she said. "This is my idea of adventure."

Last December she guided newspaper reporters on an RCAF flying jaunt to Great Whale River, 95 miles north of James Bay on the eastern shore of Hudson Bay, for that post's Christmas festivities.

FO Kennedy maintains that a girl with "some sense of duty and responsibility, a spirit of adventure and a healthy regard for discipline" is an asset to the RCAF.

With initiative and talent, a girl has "got it made" in any of the service's trades: fighter control operator, clerk typist, clerk accounts, teletype operator, medical assistant, supply technician, safety equipment technician, meteorological observer, air force police or recreation specialist.

FAMILY OF FLYERS

As for FO Kennedy, there was no need to stimulate her interest in the service. It probably developed from her three brothers who served with the RCAF during the Second World War. One of them, Hap Kennedy, credited with more than a dozen enemy aircraft, won the Distinguished Flying Cross and Bar.

She was a student in journalism at Carleton University in Ottawa when she attended summer courses under the university reserve training plan in RCAF stations across Canada and at Metz, France.

After graduation she spent two years touring Europe, then held a teaching position at the Qu'Appelle diocesan school in Regina, returning to Ottawa in 1959 to join the RCAF.

Now she commutes between Ottawa and her parents' home in Cumberland, Ont., 30 miles east of here, driving a stylish blue sportster. A sports enthusiast with a love for hockey and swimming, she plans a new hobby—bagpipe lessons.

PUBLICIZES RCAF — FO Joyce Kennedy, 27, of Cumberland, Ont., is the only woman in the public relations office of the RCAF. A journalism graduate from Carleton University, Ottawa, her job is to publicize the activities of the 3,000-strong women's division. (CP Photo from National Defence).

Remember When

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP)—Let's have another look-back at the calmer times when people could go to sleep without worrying over whether the next morning they'd have to face a fresh world crisis.

Count yourself among the lucky ones if you can still remember when—

Anybody who bought a $10,000 home was considered well-to-do.

If you got a $50 weekly salary, that was the amount they put in your pay envelope. There were no such things as deductions.

When you went to the store for a gallon of coal oil, the grocer always stuck a raw potato on the spout to keep the can from leaking.

Folks were more scared of typhoid fever and appendicitis than of getting heart attacks.

Babe Ruth earned almost as much for knocking 60 home runs in a year as many 16-year-old kids now get for signing as bonus players.

KAISER WAS RAMPANT

The "Beast of Berlin" was somebody called the Kaiser, who was widely believed to dine on Belgian children for breakfast.

If you gave a child a cent, he didn't look up and ask, "what's it good for?"

It was regarded as a national disaster when movie stars Doug Fairbanks and Mary Pickford got a divorce.

You stepped on a running board before entering an automobile, and there was no such thing as a gasoline tax.

Ministers denounced the rumba seat as the greatest threat to the morals of the younger generation.

A fountain pen was advertised as a lifetime investment.

A good pool player had a wider circle of admirers than a fellow who beat par on a golf course, and any man over 30 who still played tennis was put down as a sissy.

ASPIRIN CURE-ALL

There was only one wonder drug—aspirin—and nobody had heard of a virus.

The average home held only one modern labor-saving device —a carpet sweeper.

Anybody who tipped more than 10 per cent for anything was regarded as a fool and wastrel.

You could get a hired girl or a maid without having to pay her transportation from Europe.

People with a marriageable daughter didn't bother to get her to a finishing school. They just bought a fancy new front porch swing.

Teen-agers took orders instead of giving them—and usually asked permission before using the telephone.

CLC Appoints 'Vigilante' Committee to Keep Tab on Unions Standing Expelled

MONTREAL (CP)—The maverick Seafarers' International Union of Canada may face a fight for its membership as a result of a secret session Wednesday of the Canadian Labor Congress' "vigilante" committee.

The committee — formed by CLC President Claude Jodoin to keep tabs on unions expelled from the congress—is reported to have drawn plans for what could be a bloody membership fight with the tough Seafarers.

The SIU was tossed out of the CLC 18 months ago.

Informants indicated the CLC will prod the SIU through a new marine workers organizing team.

The Congress would retain close control over finances and policies of the organizing team until it recruited enough members to form a bona fide union and elect officers.

MAY HIT GREAT LAKES

The initial battleground in what amounts to a civil war in the ranks of organized labor appeared to be the Great Lakes.

But even with the money and might of the CLC behind the raider, the Montreal-based SIU will be a hard foe. The union is no stranger to a fight, holds a mutual assistance pact with the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, also ousted last year from the CLC.

The Teamsters and SIU were blackballed by the 1,150,000-member CLC for raiding affiliates of the central labor body.

Once outside the Congress, they are open to attack by CLC unions.

The vigilante committee was formed to watch the situation, with the expelled members back into the fold or give other unions the go-ahead to invade them.

The Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers (CLC) chipped a group of Canadian seamen from the SIU block this summer when it signed the crew of the freighter Northern Venture in the Great Lakes.

The ship, Bermuda - registered but manned by Canadians on Canadian wages and working conditions, later was hit by trouble, most of them said to be inspired by the Seafarers' union.

This is among the recent events said to have forced the CLC into action against the SIU.

WILL TRANSFER

Informants say that if the marine workers union does well, the Brotherhood would transfer its membership on the Northern Venture to the new body.

The Canada Labor Relations Board hear a major dispute between the Brotherhood and the SIU over marine engineers on lake ships.

Two former SIU officers defected from their union to testify before the board about vote rigging and skullduggery involving the SIU.

The board, ruling on the dispute, said recently the SIU committed acts of fraud against the federal board, the engineers and the shipping companies.

Michael J. Sheehan, a former SIU official who was an organizer for more than 10 years, now is expected to play a key role in the waterfront organizing drive against the SIU. He established the Marine Workers Union in Montreal and is reported in close tough with members of the CLC vigilante committee.

The 19 - member committee are the CLC's top brass, including President Jodoin.

TWO BURN TO DEATH

HEARST (CP) — John Koskinen, 66, and Mrs. Norbert Nelson, 54, were burned to death Wednesday when fire destroyed the farm home in which they lived near this northern Ontario centre. Police said two others escaped. No cause for the blaze could be ascertained immediately.

Piggy-Back Protest Strike Nearly Over

TORONTO (CP)—Union and management were scheduled to meet early today and settlement of the piggy-back protest strike seemed imminent.

Wednesday night, members of Teamsters union locals in Oshawa, London, Hamilton, Kitchener, Sudbury and Montreal went back to work, leaving only Toronto truck drivers on strike.

The drivers stopped work Tuesday to protest the piggy-back operation of Inter - City Truck Lines in which trailers of cargo were piled aboard railway flatcars depriving drivers of lucrative long hauls to such points as Sudbury and Sault Ste. Marie, Ont.

The company last Friday night resumed piggy-back deliveries, suspended a week ago following an earlier one - day strike.

Kent McDougall, president of the independent union's local, said Monday night company proposals — made when union and management resumed talks Monday — were rejected by the Toronto workers by a vote of 55 to 41. He said about 300 teamsters were on strike against Inter-City in Toronto.

However, Mr. McDougall said points of disagreement still remaining between company and union were not serious.

A total of about 1,000 workmen were off the job during the strike.

OUTDOOR MARKET — Belleville's long time outdoor market is still going strong despite the fact the indoor market is no more. Above is a typical Saturday morning market scene in late summer as district farmers set up their stands to sell a wide variety of garden and other locally grown produce.

R.S. McLaughlin To Be Honored On Birthday

OSHAWA (CP)—Robert Samuel McLaughlin, chairman of the board of General Motors of Canada Ltd., celebrates his 90th birthday Friday and the city of Oshawa is celebrating it with him in a two-day observation.

Today teachers in Oshawa schools are telling their students of Mr. McLaughlin's life which started in horse-and-buggy days and later became a large part of the story of Canada's automobile industry.

Tonight citizens will gather at the McLaughlin band shell and Mr. McLaughlin will drive into their midst in a 1907 McLaughlin escorted by a guard of honor of the veterans' pipe band wearing the McLaughlin tartan.

Mayor Christine Thomas will present him with the Oshawa Award of Merit, a medal especially struck for the occasion and the first of its kind to be presented. It will pay tribute to him as "an industrialist and humanitarian." Friday the birth date, has been declared R. S. McLaughlin Day.

Mr. McLaughlin, known widely as R. S. or Mr. Sam, started his career in 1887 as an apprentice in his father's McLaughlin carriage Company which, in the early 1900s sold more than $1,000,000 worth of horseless vehicles annually.

MAKES FIRST CAR

He guided the company into automobile manufacturing, turning out its first car in 1907—a McLaughlin powered with a Buick Engine. Chevrolets were added later. In 1918 the company became part of the General Motors organization with Mr. McLaughlin president of the Canadian operation.

Over the years Mr. McLaughlin has given several million dollars to various causes. He was prominent in horse and yacht racing, and three of his horses won the King's Plate. He is honorary colonel of the Ontario Tank Regiment.

Mr. McLaughlin goes to his office daily when in Oshawa. In addition to being chairman of General Motors of Canada he is a vice - president of several leading Canadian industries.

In an interview on his 89th birthday he gave his recipe for living as follows:

"You have to work; you have to play; you have to like people."

ANOTHER SALE — Another sale on the city's outdoor market is seen being completed in above picture as fresh locally-grown vegetables, apples and other farm produce, the market features home baking, eggs, and all kinds of fruit in season.

Average Citizen, Lending Companies Ready to Plunge With Money Realtors Told

BANFF, Alta. (CP) — The average citizen and North America's foremost lending companies are both ready to plunge money into real estate, Canadian realtors were told Wednesday.

But neither will get a chance without government co-operation and the help of this country's real estate brokers, said two experts speaking to the annual convention of the Canadian Association of Real Estate Boards.

Premier E. C. Manning of Alberta said many small buyers should be given the opportunity to buy real property, one of the few investments that increases in value as prices rise in other fields.

He said companies usually look for funds at the wrong time, missing a tremendous potential volume of capital available from savings of the average citizen.

Lawyer John R. Campbell of Toronto, a director of several investment companies, said yearly flow of $20,000,000,000 in mortgages in the United States is equalled in Canada.

CAN ASSIST

He suggested that by freeing the yield on mortgages, the federal government could assist over-extended Canadian loan companies to refinance their mortgages, freeing money for the new mortgage market.

Prof. Phillip White of the University of British Columbia, who two years ago launched Canada's only degree course specializing in real estate, said formal education can help realtors afterwards to state their case and improve service to the public.

The UBC course, emphasizing land law, urban land investment, land value and valuation training, is geared to place its graduates in management positions.

Clare Purcell of Penrith, farmer - turned - rural realtor, said in an interview that financial and technical revolutions in agriculture already have removed farming from a way of life. He said 1,000 farmers a day are leaving the land in Canada each month.

Donald H. Scott of Saskatoon was elected president of the Canadian Institute of Realtors, educational arm of the association.

New members of the institute's governing council, elected for three - year terms include K. S. Raven, Kingston.

PLANS NEW MISSION

TOKYO (AP)—American pastor Eddie R. Boyd, who has called his yacht Phoenix on a protest voyage into the Far Pacific nuclear test area in August, 1958, said today he and his family will set out on a mission to the Soviet Union. The 50-year - old professor, who now teaches at Hiroshima Christian University, said he sent a telegram Wednesday to Premier Nikolai Khrushchev informing him of his intention to sail into the Soviet port of Vladivostok, on the Sea of Japan.

Premier Frost Lays Conerstone Of New Hospital

GODERICH (CP)—One in 15 males and one in 14 females born in Ontario may one day expect to require treatment for some mental disorder, Premier Frost said Wednesday.

Mr. Frost, placing the cornerstone for a $2,500,000 Ontario Hospital here, said the new building will be the first to be constructed under the new provincial policy for psychiatric treatment.

Under the program, new mental hospitals will be built with 250 to 300 beds. A staff of 150 is required fir the Goderich hospital, which will be a diagnostic and treatment centre and provide out- and in-patient service and day care.

With the Ontario population increasing at about 200,000 persons a year, Mr. Frost said as many as 800 new beds will be required annually to keep up with the demand for psychiatric treatment.

He said the trend in Ontario hospitals is to "provide more freedom for patients and to encourage them to take more responsibility."

PLAN NEW FACILITIES

Additional treatment facilities are planned for the Niagara Peninsula and Northern Ontario, Mr. Frost said. Work now is under way at a new institution near Palmerston.

In all new institutions emphasis is being placed on development of an out-patient service and collaboration with the recently - established Psychiatric Research Institute for Children at London, Ont.

Mr. Frost said that under the plan, calls may be added "as the need appears and as time and experience dictate."

Dr. M. B. Dymond, provincial minister of health, said the technical capacity of the Goderich Hospital will be 1,200 beds. To be ready by next summer, it is to be one of a group of hospitals with a total capacity of 26,-000 beds.

PAYS TRIBUTE

Mr. Frost paid tribute to Thomson Hyde of Goderich, member of the legislature for Huron from 1948 until his death in 1958, instrumental in having hospital built here.

Mrs. Hyde, who helped lay the cornerstone, said "I feel it is the fulfilment of my late husband's desires."

Hon. Ray Connell, minister of public works, said the new mental hospital will be one of the most modern in North America.

Following the ceremonies, Mr. Frost and his party drove to Clinton to tour a new addition to the Huron County Home for the Aged. He was welcomed by Mayor W. J. Miller and members of town council.

Mr. Frost proclaimed Friday a holiday for elementary and secondary school students in Clinton.

Search for Stability Far From Over View of Brazil

By JOSEPH MacSWEEN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Brazil's search for stability is far from over, although for the present the danger of civil war seems averted by the peaceful arrival of Vice-President Joao Goulart in the capital.

The proposed transfer of real power from the presidency to a newly-created office of prime minister is unlikely to be achieved without intense political struggle in view of Brazil's history and traditions.

Political and military personalities, as opposed to parties, have often played a decisive role in Brazilian affairs; and it was in this tradition that president Janio Quadros suddenly resigned Aug. 25 because he felt his reform programs were being stymied.

Brazil's three military chiefs turned thumbs down on the succession of Vice-President Goulart on the grounds he is pro-Communist. As if in support of their argument Goulart then was returning from an official visit to Red China, where he enthusiastically lauded the regime. But Goulart denies Communist leanings.

Although the armed forces did not present a united front against Goulart—powerful elements supported him—it was obvious he could not take office without bloodshed until the device was adopted of stripping the presidency of its key powers.

The outcome of the crisis has great significance since Brazil, with 3,286,000 square miles, is the world's fifth largest country almost as big in area as Canada, it has a population of 70,000,000.

Mineral wealth is vast but comparatively undeveloped. Brazil is the world's top producer of coffee and bananas and second in hogs and sugar—although only 10 per cent of cultivable land is being worked.

Once a kingdom, Brazil became a republic in 1889. Since 1930, when a military junta took control, the country has fought depression, inflation and economic problems.

Between 1930 and 1954, Brazil was dominated by Dr. Getulio Vargas, whose suicide ended an era. It was Vargas' old Labor Party that gave Goulart his political base and he has twice been elected vice-president — once for vice-president and president are separate in Brazil.

Some observers feel that Goulart—he is only 43—is unlikely to be satisfied long with a figurehead job regardless of what constitutional changes may be made.

Proposals for a parliamentary system of government rather than presidential have been made repeatedly in Brazil since 1946 when a constituent assembly drafted a new constitution. The proposals have always been defeated and observers still wonder what would be the fate of a premier and council of ministers subject to votes of confidence in the Brazilian congress, with 2,286,000 square miles, is great-

U.K. MP Wants Commonwealth Solution to Trade Problems

OTTAWA (CP)—British MP Peter Walker, a vigorous opponent of United Kingdom entry into the Common Market, is in Ottawa seeking to drum up support for a Commonwealth approach for his country's trade problems.

He said Wednesday he has found support for his idea in European Common Market as a "myth," Mr. Walker said in an interview.

On the other hand, there was "a colossal potential" for increased British exports to Canada and other Commonwealth countries.

"I would like to see the Canadian government make positive suggestions for increased economic co - operation within the Commonwealth."

Canada could have a great deal of influence in the Commonwealth "if it only wants to take the initiative."

Mr. Walker, former national president of Britain's young Conservatives, was one of 29 MPs of his party who abstained in protest on a recent vote in the U.S. Parliament on their government's decision to open negotiations with the Common Market.

He said that a research group of Conservative MPs which he has organized estimates that in 1972 the imports of Commonwealth countries other than the U.S. will increase by some $8,000,000,000 — a rise of more than 80 per cent. Britain now had 36 per cent of this market.

On the other hand, British exports to the Common Market now totalled only some $1,500,000,000, and its trade deficit with Europe probably would increase with the Common Market membership.

He said he doubts that British negotiations with the Common market will protect adequately the U.K. government's agriculture.

He forecast a political split in his party if Britain were to join under present terms of the Common Market treaty.

Mr. Walker said it was "a great tragedy" that his government didn't take Canada up on its 1957 suggestion of a diversion of Canadian import trade to Britain's favor.

Armed Forces To Be Increased

OTTAWA (CP)—Armed forces manpower will be increased by between 10,000 and 15,000 personnel, it was reliably reported Wednesday.

The army will get the major share of the increase but there will be some increases for both the navy and RCAF.

The current manpower ceiling is 120,000—10,000 for the RCAF, 43,000 for the army and 20,000 for the Navy it has not been changed since the Korean War.

A manpower increase is expected to be one of several government announcements in the field of defence policy when the Commons reconvenes late afternoon after a summer recess.

A Commons study of the $1,-630,000,000 defence budget for 1961-62 already partially spent, will follow a foreign policy debate.

Suggestion He Hurry Home Laughed off by R. Thomson

LONDON (CP) — Publisher Roy Thomson Wednesday night laughed off a suggestion that he hurry home to Canada to put some life into Canadian newspapers.

He said he politely "disagrees" with Lady Jean Campbell, wife of Canadian Senator Duncan Campbell, who said Canadian papers are about as "exciting as a shroud" and that Lady Jean, 32, is the attractive granddaughter of Lord Beaverbrook, said in New York correspondent for Beaverbrook's Evening Standard in her column Wednesday. Wednesday from Fredericton, N.B., she called on Thomson to "get back to Canada and do something to pep up the press of his native country."

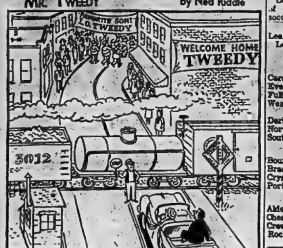
She said Canadian papers look dull and are duller to read; contain too much boring news and would look more at home in Pravda; and in writingstyle resemble a diet of "fourth formers' translation from Caesar."

But Thomson, publisher who started his newspaper empire in Canada and now devotes most of his attention to British publishing interests, said it may be true that British papers have "more zip" and are more tightly edited.

"But I like Canadian papers very much. I read stories in them I never see published over here."

Thomson said there is "much more news" in Canadian papers, a statement frequently heard by Canadian visitors to Britain who find that the tabloid-sized Fleet Street papers seem comparatively thin in news content.

Bernard Braden, Canadian-born comedian who has lived here since 1947, married and said the Canadian standards is higher, particularly for regular columnists.



"There isn't a columnist in this country, for instance, who can compare with Eric Nicol of Vancouver, unless perhaps it is Brander Matthews or Stephen Leacock."

Some people might think the papers were provincial, but that was because there was no national centre for Canada, British newspaper men had learned to write more lightly during the war, but now they were reverting to their old pre-war style.

Gerard Farr, London editor of The Guardian who has traveled widely in Canada, commented.

"I agree that Canadian newspapers on the whole look dull; on the whole they don't give much space to foreign news; but they are by and large to very well. I think the editorials in the better Canadian newspapers are generally very good."

Riders Sign Kovacs

Argos Call Jewett

Toronto Argonauts of the Eastern Football Conference have called in Bob Jewett, late of New York Titans, in their efforts to find a split end or flanker.

Jewett, an end from Michigan State, signed with Argos in 1960 but before reporting to camp lost parts of three fingers in an industrial accident. He arrived late and, scrambling to catch up, injured a knee in scrimmages.

During the winter Jewett signed with Titans and was reported going well with the American League squad. Reason for his dismissal was not announced.

Meanwhile, Ottawa Rough Riders have signed import backfielder Ed Kovacs of Baltimore Colts and picked up import linebacker George Policerich, placed on waivers Monday by Montreal Alouettes.

Kovacs, 205-pound native of McKeesport, Pa., was cut by the National League Colts last weekend after playing a full season with them last year. The six-foot American will vie with Dick Desmarais and Joe Kelly for a halfback spot.

Deiderich was in his third season with Montreal. The 215-pound former all-American from Vanderbilt University, is considered one of the fastest linebackers in the Big Four.

In the Western Conference, halfback-punter Bobby Walden of Edmonton Eskimos said Wednesday he will be asked to report for a United States Army medical examination. The former University of Georgia player said the examination might be called for October.

Rod Laver Faces Big Test

FOREST HILLS, N.Y. (AP)— Australian Rod Laver, almost everyone's choice to win the title, gets his first stern test in the national tennis championships today when he faces big Chris Crawford of Piedmont, Calif.

Crawford, 22, a Corpus Christi, Tex., university student who has been knocking on the door of greatness for three years, has developed a reputation of winning the big ones, then getting licked by the second-raters. This year at Wimbledon, he eliminated Nicola Pietrangeli of Italy, probably Europe's best amateur.

The three seeded players who saw action Wednesday sailed into the quarter-finals. Australian Roy Emmerson downed Harry Hoffman Jr., of Philadelphia 6-1, 6-2, 6-3. Jon Douglas of Santa Monica, Calif., walloped Crawford Henry of Atlanta 3-6, 6-3, 7-5, 8-6 and Ron Holmberg of Brooklyn, No. 8, halted Jack Frost of Monterrey, Calif., 6-2, 7-9, 6-4, 6-1.

Top-seeded Darlene Hard is the only U.S. girl to make the women's quarter - finals. The other seven are Yola Ramirez of Mexico, who plays Miss Hard today; Angela Mortimer, Christine Truman and Ann Haydon, all of Britain; and Margaret Smith and Lesley Turner of Australia.

Bob Bedard, Davis Cupper from Lennoxville, Que., Francois Godbout of Waterloo, Que., and Marian Boundy of Montreal all were eliminated from the tournament Tuesday.

May Approve Change In Rules

HERSHEY, Pa. (AP) — The National Boxing Association is expected to approve a rule change that will allow a heavyweight boxing champion 12 months in which to defend his title. The limit now is six months.

If the change is not made, the NBA will be required to strip champion Floyd Patterson of his crown Wednesday, six months after he won it from Ingemar Johansson.

The proposed change, approved unanimously Wednesday by the NBA's world championship committee, will be brought before the convention today. It would apply only to the heavyweight division.

Paul G. Sullivan of Pittsburgh, chairman of the committee said: "It just requires too much time to set up and promote a heavyweight championship bout."

A battle over eligibility for NBA office, involving the president, died out as the convention neared an end. Charles Mayer of Montreal and Stanley Goldberg of Laporte, Ind., backed off their position that they should be eligible for further NBA offices even though they are no longer active boxing commissioners.

Barring last-minute developments, the way has been cleared for re-election as president of Dr. Charles Larson, a Tacoma, Wash., physician.

Delegates unanimously approved a proposal by Larson to create a national boxing research and educational foundation to stimulate the sport.

Spud Spray Believed Death Dose

HALIFAX (CP)—A potato insecticide may be the cause of the death of 350,000 young trout and salmon at a fish hatchery, Dr. R. Logie, head of fisheries department's Maritimes Fish Culture Centre, said Wednesday.

Hatchery superintendent T. F. Dolter noticed Aug. 24 that the fish looked "nervous" and two days later all were dead. He said that near the hatchery several farmers used potato spray on their potatoes and got water for their tanks and barrels from Rapide de Femme, which feeds the hatching ponds.

Gaels Look Sharp

KINGSTON (CP) — Queen's University Golden Gaels, finalists in the senior Intercollegiate Football Union last season, are shaping up as a top team at pre-season training camp, says coach Tom Thodal.

Almost all of last year's defensive team is back and 15 new recruits are included in the 46-man squad.

Heading the list of recruits is Derrick MacKesey of St. Catharines, who played with Duke University last year in the United States.

Two new halfbacks, William Edwards of Ottawa's Nepean High School and Rudy Barich of Sault Ste. Marie High School, are highly rated.

Fullmer Boxer Of Month

HERSHEY, Pa. (AP) — Middleweight Gene Fullmer of Utah edged heavyweight Bob Cleroux of Montreal for the National Boxing Association's boxer of the month honors.

Fullmer polled 10 votes and Cleroux seven in boxer-of-the-month balloting.

Other ratings include:

Heavyweight—Henry Cooper, England; 2, Ernie Ingemar Johansson, Sweden; 3. Eddie Machen, Portland, Ore.

Light heavyweight — Champion: Harold Johnson, Philadelphia; 1, Archie Moore, San Diego; 2. Doug Jones, New York; 3. Eddie Cotton, Seattle.

ELAN PROBE

LONDON (AP)—The British Boxing Board of Control said Wednesday it will fully investigate Terry Spinks' withdrawal from his fight against American Paddy Pratt Saturday night. Spinks, former British featherweight champion, was overweight for the scheduled bout. Later he developed a temperature and pulled out of the contest.

Liston Pleads Innocence

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—Heavyweight boxer Charles (Sonny) Liston, 28, pleaded not guilty Wednesday to a charge of turning off the lights of his car to avoid arrest following an incident here last June 13.

Liston, accompanied by manager George Katz and lawyer Morton Witkin, who asked for a jury trial. The trial will be held Sept. 26.

Liston and a companion were arrested in Fairmount Park after allegedly forcing a woman motorist to stop her car. A magistrate dismissed charges but the district attorney ordered Liston re-arrested.

The fighter was subsequently stripped of his ranking as No. 1 heavyweight contender and succeeded by the Pennsylvania Athletic Commission and the National Boxing Association.

SPAHN EASY WINNER

CINCINNATI (AP) — Warren Spahn, Milwaukee Braves' great pitcher who started, finished and won six games during the month, was a landslide winner of the National League's player-of-the-month award for August. Results of the monthly poll of a committee of sports writers and broadcasters Wednesday showed Spahn received 36 of a possible 40 votes. Vada Pinson of Cincinnati, Frank Thomas of Milwaukee, Juan Marichal of San Francisco and Larry Jackson of St. Louis coach received one vote.

Dodgers Close In, Eye Series Loot

Spahn Sets New Mark

By ED WILKS
Associated Press Staff Writer

Los Angeles Dodgers, with their eye on the scoreboard and their minds on the richest payoff in world series history, have scrapped back within one game of Cincinnati's stumbling Reds in the National League pennant race.

It was after the Dodgers had blown a 3-0 lead against San Francisco Wednesday night that the Colleuon scoreboard in Los Angeles showed a five - run eighth inning for St. Louis and then flashed the Cardinals 11-5 victory over the Reds.

That's when the Dodgers went to work, coming from behind with a five - run eighth of their own for a 9-5 victory over the Giants.

It was the fourth straight success and seventh victory in nine games for the Dodgers. Cincinnati, meanwhile, hasn't won two in a row in more than a week and has played only .500 ball (15-15) since taking over first place Aug. 16.

Fact is, the Dodgers, thinking of the player pool from a world series played in their 94,-000 - seat Colliseum and New York's 67,000 capacity Yankee Stadium, are two games up on the Reds in the decisive "lost" column.

While the Dodgers swept their four - game series with San Francisco, still hopeful Milwaukee beat Philadelphia 1-0 as Warren Spahn nailed his 300th career victory, most ever in one league by a left-handed pitcher. Chicago Cuba defeated Pittsburgh 6-2.

SPOOK PITCHER

The Dodgers got started on their big eighth when Frank Howard, who had singled home two runs in the first, rifled a single that almost knocked down losing pitcher Stu Miller (10-4) of the Giants. Willie Davis went in as a pinch runner, and the Dodgers were off and running, forcing an error that gave them unearned runs.

Despite a pitch out, Davis stole second and scooted on to third on catcher Ed Bailey's wild peg. Pinch - hitter Norm Sherry brought him in with a single, tying it five-all, and John Roseboro hit with a pitch and a double that gave Los Angeles the lead. An error, a walk, Wally Moon's two - run single and a force out by Snider brought in the other three. Snider also hit a two - run homer in the fifth.

Roger Craig (5-8), fourth of six Dodger pitchers, was the winner. He faced just one man after Larry Sherry had to leave in the eighth because of arm trouble. The Giants got home runs from Jim Davenport, Felipe Alou and Orlando Cepeda off starter Sandy Koufax.

St. Louis twice came from behind against the Reds after knocking out their ace right-hander, 19 - game winner Joey Jay, with two runs in the first inning. A two - run sixth on two of the Reds' four errors, Stan Musial's sacrifice fly and Ken Boyer's single put it away and beat reliever Jim Maloney (6-6) before the big eight made it a rout.

Right - hander Larry Jackson (12-9), a winner in nine of his last 10 decisions, settled down after walking three man on 12 consecutive pitches in a row, third and final with the Reds to one run in a homer by Jerry Lynch, over the last six innings.

SPAHN SET RECORD

Spahn (18-12), closing in on his 12th game with 20 or more victories, beat Eddie Plank's record of 305 victories, all in the AL, by blanking the Phils on three singles for his ninth straight complete game victory. It was Spahn's 54th career shutout and his second in a row, for a string of 23 scoreless innings.

The Braves, now six games out of Cincinnati, had five hits, scoring in the first inning on John Buzhardt's 5-hit 9 walk, Ed Mathews' single and Hank Aaron's sacrifice fly.

Phil Cavarretta made the most of five Pittsburgh errors and the eight - hit pitching of Don Cardwell (13-13), who had the Bucs blanked until they scored two unearned runs in the eighth. Joe Gibbon (18-10) was the loser.

Chiefs Nip Leafs 4-3, Jets Win

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The fight for the International League's batting title has developed into an exciting battle between rookies Ted Savage of Buffalo Bisons and John Powell of Rochester Red Wings.

Savage, connected for a home run and single Wednesday night to increase his average of .321 as Buffalo defeated Rochester 10-6. Savage gained two points on Powell, who had a single in five trips to the plate and dropped a point to .319.

A two-run eighth inning provided Richmond Virginians with a 5-3 victory over Columbus as Jack Charleston Marlins beat Jersey City Jerseys 5-1 behind Ken Washburn and Syracuse Chiefs edged Toronto Maple Leafs 4-3.

Savage's homer was his 24th of the year and his fourth in three games. Buffalo took a commanding lead by scoring six times in the first inning to hand a damaging blow to Rochester's playoff hopes.

The Red Wings, two games behind the fourth-place Leafs, must win three of their last four games to join the Leafs for the final playoff berth.

GO AHEAD

Washburn's win was his 16th of the year, high in the league, to end his fifth in six decisions over Jersey City. The victory gave the Marlins a sweep of the three-game series and closed out their first league home season with their transfer from Puerto Rico last May.

Frank Leja's 29th home run with two men aboard in the fifth inning provided the winning margin for Les Chiefs. It also gave Syracuse the series 2-1 as Gerry Arrigo gained his first league victory in three starts.

Says Mr. Maris

Could Have Hit 'Em In Nebraska

SENDING NUMBER 54 ON THE WAY—New York Yankee slugger Roger Maris outs at ball to send it into right field bullpen for his 54th homer of year, at New York's Yankee Stadium Wednesday. Blow came in fourth inning off Washington starter Tom Cheney. Blast moved Roger seven games ahead of Babe Ruth's record 60 home run pace. It was Roger's first hit in last 17 times at bat. Yanks won, 8-5. (AP Wirephoto).

NEW YORK (AP)—Roger Maris took time Wednesday with those who claim Yankee Stadium, a paradise for left-handed hitters, has been exceptionally helpful in his dramatic bid to break Babe Ruth's home run record.

"I agree that this park has got to help a left-handed hitter like myself," he quipped, "but I still think I'd have hit just as many, or nearly as many, if I were still playing with Kansas City.

"Check my home runs and you'll find that I have hit more home runs on the road than at home. I don't know how many I hit in other parks this year but I know last year I hit 26 or 27 of my 39 on the road."

The records bear him out.

The New York Yankee outfielder slammed No. 54 of the season at Yankee Stadium Wednesday as Whitey Ford won his 23rd with a five-hit, 8-5 decision over Washington Senators. The victory increased the Yankees' American League lead over Detroit by eight games.

AHEAD OF RUTH

Maris' homer, putting him seven games ahead of Ruth's pace when the Babe slammed 60 in 1927, was Maris' 28th at Yankee Stadium.

The other 26 have been hit in foreign fields. Fellow Yankee Mickey Mantle, who walked twice Wednesday but failed to hit any out of the park, has hit 29 of his 51 in enemy territory.

Maris has made only five outs in his last 27 times at bat but he doesn't think he's in a slump.

"I know I'm not getting many base hits," he said, "but I don't call it a slump. I've hit some good balls in the last few days but they went right at some body. I feel I've done my job when I've hit the ball on the nose, even though there's nothing I can do about it."

"It gripes me when some guys say that's a home run hitter like you doing hitting .260? Those guys are just plain idiots."

Maris' actual batting average is .271.

"Sure, I'd like to have a high average but what's the point about it? It's been a real battle for me all year. I started out bad in spring training and for the first five weeks of the season. I don't like to be tonight. I don't think I got my third homer until some time in June."

Most recorded homers may be harder to come by from now on.

"I really don't expect any down the pipe. When one comes, I'm surprised."

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

As the man said "I would rather have my boy stealing bases than purses".

As his friend remarked, "I would rather see my son being chased by runners on a track than by policemen on a street."

And as a friend of mine once said, "when the young gaffers are trying to break records, they are not smashing windows."

All of which leads up to the fact the Belleville Minor Sports Association is holding a tag day over the weekend, Friday afternoon and Saturday morning is be canvassed.

Much has been written and aired about the sports activities of the younger fellows. Reports and stories of the games in baseball, softball, hockey and soccer have been released as they occur but little, very little has been published about the men who are behind these activities.

The Belleville Minor Sports Association has grown from a small group of enthusiastic sports and middle-minded men to a well-established, well-organized institution.

Up to a few years ago each department of sport functioned individually. Then the powers-that-be decided to merge their resources and the Minor Sports Association came into being, operating under one executive but with each branch having its own slate of officers.

This past year hockey was under the administration of Bill Brennan. Baseball was operated by Russ Soules; softball by Allen Sills and soccer by Don Wilson. All these men and their assistants deserve high praise for jobs exceptionally well done.

People are becoming more convinced that there is a real benefit to be derived for Canada and their communities if we encourage the youth of the country to take part more and more in sports and recreational activities.

Mounting evidences in Canada has convinced most thinking people that some drastic action must be taken by the leaders of public communities, including educational authorities, to imbue the youngsters with the desirability of taking part in physical activities.

This is being done to a generous extent by the men of the Minor Sports Association. Some thousands of youngsters annually enjoy the benefits of their efforts in the various phases of the association's sports calendar.

The number of youngsters participating in the association's activities increases each year. This is as it should be. The association executive welcomes the newcomers, but its annual budget increases commensurately with the number of participating youngsters.

It is felt that a generous response on the part of the general public through the medium of a tag day will help relieve the additional financial burden.

So when a youngster asks you to buy a tag tomorrow or Saturday don't turn away. A nickel will help if you cannot afford more.

Remember "a man is never so tall as when he stoops to help a child".

WRESTLING

They call him the "Great Kudo". The copy boy says he has been wrestling around Kingston and its hinterlands for some time. In any event the main bout is billed as a "Special Match" between the Kudo and popular Whipper Watson come tomorrow night. Seems the pair have had at each other somewhere, sometime, and there's a bit of a grudge still hanging fire. Anyway it will be nice to see the handsome White back in harness here. If he survives tonight's clash with Dick "Bulldog" Brewer in Toronto.

What could steal the show is the semi-final between popular Tony Marino and the "Arvida Assassin" Stan Stasiak. Now there's a bout . . . " Man Mountain Campbell takes on Karol Kalmikoff in the opener.

Maris Near Record, Six, Seven To Go

By ED WILKS
Associated Press Staff Writer

Six more. Two every five games. That's all it will take now for Roger Maris to hit 59 home runs and tie Babe Ruth's exclusive record.

After belting No. 54 Wednesday, his first hit in 17 at bats as New York Yankees clobbered Washington Senators 9-6, Maris is seven games ahead of Ruth's record pace of 1927. And he has 15 games — against Cleveland, Chicago, Detroit and Baltimore — in which to match or break the Babe's record or break the limit of 154 team decisions set by Commissioner Ford Frick.

Mickey Mantle, who has paired with Maris for half of the Yankees' American League record - setting 210 homers this season, was 0-for-2, walking twice and now is one game and one home run behind Ruth's pace. Mickey has hit 51.

Pushed to the background as Maris' 54th set off an awesome display of five Yankee home runs was the fact that Whitey Ford became the first left-hander to win 23 games in the AL since 1952, and that New York zoomed eight games ahead of the idle Detroit Tigers in the flag race with a seventh straight victory.

Chicago White Sox beat Minnesota Twins twice, 6-3, and 4-2 in 10 innings, and Boston Red Sox clipped Cleveland Indians 4-3 in the only other games scheduled.

Maris' home run, his ninth against Washington, broke up a scoreless duel between Ford (15-5) and Tom Cheney (13-13) and got the Yankees started on a five - run fourth inning after two were out. John Blanchard, who batted two, each with Mantle on base; Bill Skowron and Bob Kale hit the other home runs as the Yankees made seven hits pay off with eight runs.

Ford allowed five hits and struck out seven for his 10th complete game in 34 starts. Any combination of New York pitcher or Detroit defeats totalling 15 now clinches the flag for the Yankees.

No AL pitcher has won 23 since Early Wynn and Bob Lemon both had 23 for Cleveland in 1954. Bobby Shantz was the last AL lefty to do it winning 24 for the Philadelphia Athletics in 1952.

The White Sox banged 13 hits, one an inside - the - park homer by Nellie Fox, and beat Pete Ramos (10-17) as Juan Pizarro (13-5) won his seventh in a row in the first game of Tuesday's foggy 3-3 tie. Two unearned runs in the 10th, on two errors and Sherm Lollar's double, won the second game for the Sox and Don Larsen (7-1), who gave up four hits in nine innings. Camilo Pascual (13-15) was the loser.

Carl Yastrzemski drove in four runs, three with a homer, for Boston. Rookie Don Schwall (11-4) kept the Orioles in check although allowing 11 hits. Jim Perry (9-13) lost it.

Manager Speaks Piece

'Blows Top, Burns Wires'

Bob Neil, manager of the Cobourg Merchants softball club blasted the telegraph wires between Belleville and Cobourg yesterday in what he called "an attempt to clear up some of this ridiculous situation and to get justice for our players and team." One of his calls was to this newspaper's sports department.

Cobourg failed to appear for the third game of the Belleville and District softball league finals here Tuesday night.

League President Bill Hurst announced that the game had been awarded to Joyce Meats (Bata) but Cobourg must turn over a cheque to Joyce to cover expenses of the Tuesday game; that the fourth game of the series must be played back here in Belleville this Saturday night.

Neil, who demanded a meeting to clear up the situation, said that he, the team manager, did not know that his club was to have played here Tuesday.

He said he had told both Jerry Joyce and Bill Shaw, of the Joyce team, that he could not field a club for that night. He said he had planned on coming here with the third game on Thursday (tonight).

Neil admitted that Charlie Tuesday but claims that Gulas "just isn't ready," had on right to make this agreement. He also said that Eulalen did not tell him (Neil) that he had agreed to play the game.

Neil claimed that league secretary Cliff Belch had no right to order the Cobourg club what to play the Cobourg games. "According to the constitution, right here in my hands, it is up to the two team managers, in this case Bill Shaw and myself, to arrange the playoff games. And I told Joyces we would not be there Tuesday."

"We are not going to give anybody a cheque and we are not going to play down there Saturday," he added.

Neil is insisting upon a full executive meeting to clear up the mess. He said he would be willing to turn over half of the gate from the fourth game in Cobourg and added even half of the sticking gate there too if it was necessary, to the Joyce team, "But he felt, would compensate for expenses of "Tuesday's mixup" in Belleville.

The conditions of course would be that the third game would be rescheduled here in Belleville, throwing out Tuesday's forfeit, then going ahead with the fourth game in Cobourg.

The Cobourg manager continued: "We are not going to be railroaded out of this series by so much as a meeting. At first they said there would be a meeting to settle matters and now they won't even give us that much," he shouted.

"Cobourg has given a lot to this league, as a matter of fact it it hadn't been for Cobourg you wouldn't even have a league. Well, if we have to forfeit this series, or even a game, we will never have anything to do with a Belleville league again," he concluded.

One of Hardest Jobs in TV That of Show Host - - Powell

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—"One of the hardest jobs in television," said Dick Powell, "is being the host on a show. What do you say for 45 seconds at the beginning of the show when you really haven't anything to say except please watch?"

Broadcasting — including radio—certainly did not invent the "host" or "master of ceremonies," but because of its requirements it certainly has brought it to its full, if not finest, flowering.

Today there are even categories of hosts.

One, of course, is the excessively jolly, hyper-thyroid MC of the day-time audience participation show with his carefully prepared little ad libs. His principal requirements are an easy ceaseless flow of patter, an invigorating manner, a firm hand in steering the contestants through their paces and a sincere way with the commercials.

The other major category is the "introducing host," whose primary function is to provide the one threat that ties a varied assortment of shows into a bundle.

Eminent practitioners of this specialty are Alfred Hitchcock, whose gagged - up backgrounds and mischievous manner lifted horrendous stories into comedy of form; Boris Karloff, whose oncamera personality, is that of a tongue-in-cheek boogyman; Powell, who prefaced his Zane Grey Theatre shows with factual lectures on aspects of life in the Old West, and a newcomer, Richard Boone, who has been inviting the viewers to watch this summer's reruns of Playhouse 90 shows.

TV producers obviously believe the host's job to be highly important to the success of a series. It may well be, too, because during the summer Playhouse 90 round a place among TV's 10 most popular shows, a lofty perch it never managed to achieve before.

Eva Marie Saint Likes Hollywood But All of

By JAMES BACON

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Eva Marie Saint is staging her own little revolution against the dire threat of runaway production.

The blonde Oscar winner is making All Fall Down at MGM, her first picture in more than a year.

The reason is not lack of offers.

"I was just determined to stay in Hollywood," she says. "This is the greatest place in the world to make pictures."

In India Miss Saint, her husband, director Jeff Hayden, and their two-year-old children, broke up housekeeping and lived in a hotel in Israel for many months during the filming of Exodus.

The most beautiful location shot in the picture proved a lush, green valley. Last week Jeff and I drove up to the Ojai Valley (about 90 miles north) and saw the exact setting.

Eva gives the tip-off on why Israel and not the Ojai Valley was chosen for the film.

"They only paid the Israeli extras 50 cents a day." (They get around $20 minimum here).

Eva said some of the extras complained about the low scale to her.

"I told them the next time a movie company wants to hire them get organized and refuse to work for such wages."

Since Exodus, Eva was offered the El Cid role in Spain later taken by Sophia Loren, a picture in England and one in Rome.

"I turned them all down," she says. "It's crazy, Jeff is established directing television here. Darrell, our oldest, is in school now. I love Hollywood."

Astrological Forecast

By CARROLL RICHTER

Friday, September 8, 1961

General Tendencies: Until noon you have a very good chance to decide the politics under which you would most like to operate in the future. Then the remainder of the day and evening are particularly good for getting into the actual labor and details involved in making these desirable plans a success. Get right down to brass tacks. Be specific.

Aries (March 21 to April 19) Be sure you first get appearance improved, abode or office in order, then analyze the work ahead of you, plan it properly, and efficiently execute it. This can be a day of real accomplishment. P.M. take it easy. Watch TV.

Taurus (April 20 to May 20) Important you carry through with any duties which the require of you, though it may not be exactly what you want to do. This will not take very long and the remainder of day and evening are fine for expansion and fun, too. Be quick, happy.

Gemini (May 21 to June 21) A.M. is ideal to shop, look into your sales and purchases, writing, etc. Latter part of day and evening are best spent with kin for some purpose or other, whether of a serious nature or just happy camaraderie. Get into the spirit of things.

Moon Children (June 22 to July 21) — Important you pay your bills in a.m. Then set up a more efficient system for general daily duties. See that your estate is being safely looked after. Get shopping done in the afternoon. P.M. don't disappoint your friends — get out and have fun.

Leo (July 22 to Aug. 21) — You are able to know exactly what it is you want in the future and can make plans in a.m. to realize your dreams. Remainder of day, be practical - minded and think mainly how best to improve your financial situation. Get expert advice, too.

Virgo (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22)—Confer with good advisors in a.m. who truly want to see you get ahead and set on a large scale at that. Later, get out into the world of activity and make progress, being sure to join with good comrades in p.m. for fun and frolic.

Libra (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22)—Confer with kind associates in a.m. and gently tell them what your ambitions are so that they can work along with you for mutual betterment. Then devote time to any social or cultural pursuits that most appeal.

Scorpio (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You will find that you can handle affairs in the outside world with far more ease than has been possible in the past, if you start early in a.m. P.M. fine for getting together with good friends for a good time and solid conversation.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) — If you want to expand, look into your newspaper for the ideas that will help you to do just that. Then get into the business world and start the wheels rolling in the right direction quickly. Be dynamic and positive.

Capricorn (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) A day for meetings of all kinds. A.M. is best for conferring with experts, accountants, advisory personnel, etc. Devote the evening to social affairs where you can make fine contacts and converse at ease with them.

Aquarius (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Know exactly where you stand with associates. In a.m. and also clear up any misunderstandings with others. Later is fine for expansion and development, whether of a business or personal nature. P.M. be particularly devoted to loved one.

Pisces (Feb. 20 to March 20) Change your attitude with coworkers in a.m. and come to far better understanding with them. Be more tolerant and cooperative. Don't stay at home in P.M. — get out with good friends or relations and have a wonderful time.

If your child is born today—there will be every opportunity for your gifted progeny to get a wonderful academic education, and this should be insisted upon in order to bring out the fine promise in this chart. Upon maturity, your son or daughter will be capable of tackling very large projects and whittle them down to a practical and workable reality. Being connected with the government is best bet here.

IMPORTANT MINISTER — Leon Balcer, 43-year-old federal transport minister, plays a second important role in the cabinet as Quebec's representative. Born in Trois-Rivieres, Mr. Balcer entered the Commons in 1949 and was returned in three subsequent elections. He was solicitor-general for three years before becoming transport minister in October, 1960. —DP Photo

Minister of Transport Is Key Lieutenant of P.M. In the Province of Quebec

By ROBERT RICE

OTTAWA (CP)—Suave Leon Balcer has to keep an eye on land, air and sea—and on Quebec.

In the federal cabinet, he has a dual role as minister of transport and as a key lieutenant of Prime Minister Diefenbaker in Quebec province.

The 43-year-old lawyer from Trois - Rivieres appears to be mastering both tasks.

With easy-going flexibility, he is grasping the weighty intricacies of a transport portfolio that involves just about everything that moves in Canada.

At the same time, he watches the ever-shifting political scene of his home province with the alert familiarity of an old hand.

FOSTERS UNITY

Thrust into the transport job in the cabinet shuffle of October, 1960, he has the task of shaping an over-all policy for transport in Canada, a policy that will keep the best from the iron horse era in the age of the jet.

"Transport and communications are to Canada what oxygen is to man," he says. "Without them, we could not exist as a country."

Part of the task confronting the bilingual Mr. Balcer is to point up how the nation has become one Canada, a country founded on a French and an English heritage.

"Canadians are living now in a country which, though the size of a continent, grows ever smaller in distance because of the speed with which we can travel. Thus, more and more we become conscious of the presence of one another."

Although Leon Balcer — pronounced Balcar—is one of the youngest federal cabinet ministers, he is a veteran politician and a key figure in Conservative party circles.

OPPOSED DIEFENBAKER

Handsome, heavy-set — he's five -foot - 11 and weighs 195 pounds—Leon Balcer was president of the Young Conservatives of Canada at 33 and president of the Conservative Association at 39.

He presided over the party rally that chose John Diefenbaker as leader—a choice he opposed at the time. For a while, he was a candidate himself for the party leadership but he withdrew in favor of Donald Fleming, who later became finance minister in the Diefenbaker cabinet.

When Mr. Balcer was appointed solicitor-general after the 1957 Conservative election victory there was talk that it was a snub for Quebec and the man who had expressed resentment because Mr. Diefenbaker didn't have a French-Canadian move or second his leadership nomination.

For three years he was solicitor-general, whose main duty is to deal directly with the commutation of death penalties to life imprisonment in murder cases.

SURPRISE PROMOTION

Then in a surprise move, Mr. Diefenbaker brought him from the shadowy duties in the justice department into the glare of the transport department.

Suddenly, Leon Balcer found himself top man in a department that has 14,000 employees, owns 94 ships and 30 aircraft, administers 300 airports and 335 public harbors, 10 harbor commissions and eight major ports. His annual budget this year is more than $250,000,000.

Under his wing are eight huge crown agencies, including the St. Lawrence Seaway, Canadian National Railways, Trans-Canada Air Lines and Canadian Overseas Telecommunications Corporation.

"I like my job," says the man whose first job as a waterboy on the docks of Trois-Rivieres paid 27 cents an hour.

"I like the good organization—and this department is well-organized."

To keep it running smoothly, he is on the job before 9 a.m. and often is still at his desk at 11 p.m.

LIKES PRESSURE

"I work better under pressure," he says, chain-smoking filter tip cigarets. I'm not too nervous about pace."

Any Diefenbaker - Balcer differences now seem a matter of the past. In a recent speech Mr. Balcer saluted the prime minister and his ideas that gave the Conservatives their election victories of 1957 and 1958.

Ahead lies a multitude of troubles in transport, but Mr. Balcer appears to be coming to grips with them. Although he deals with diesels and jets, he has a soft spot for ships and sailing men, a fondness fostered as a navy lieutenant during the Second World War.

He was born at Trois-Rivieres Oct. 13, 1917, on the shore of the St. Lawrence river. His father died when he was seven months old and his mother—the former Berthe Harnois—raised her family of five singlehandedly.

Educated at the Trois-Rivieres seminary and Laval University, Mr. Balcer was admitted to the Quebec bar in 1941, but for the next five years he was away to war.

POLITICAL ATMOSPHERE

From 1946 to 1949 he was secretary-treasurer for the town of Trois - Rivieres and for the school board of the Banlieue of Trois-Rivieres. He also served as secretary for two provincial committees, one inquiring into the rights of married women and the other dealing with juvenile delinquency.

His mother had a penchant for politics and young Leon Balcer grew up in a political environment. His father-in-law, Hon. Elisee Theriault, was a Liberal member of the Quebec legislative assembly from 1916 to 1929 and a member of the Quebec legislative council until his death in 1959. A cousin was married to a sister of the late Premier Duplessis of Quebec.

But for Mr. Balcer the federal field always had the greatest lure. In 1949 he was elected to the House of Commons and returned in 1953, 1957 and 1958.

His maintains an apartment in Ottawa but frequently dashes back to his white-brick home set high overlooking the St. Maurice River at Trois-Rivieres. The two Balcer children—Pierre, 14, and Nicole, 13—used to divide their time between their Quebec home and Ottawa.

However, Pierre and his mother now reside in Ottawa, where he goes to the University of Ottawa, while Nicole remains at their home and goes to school at Trois-Rivieres.

Berlin Crisis Holds Attention Of Grim House

Green Warns World Hovering on War Brink

OTTAWA (CP) — The Berlin crisis held the attention of a grim Commons Thursday as Parliament resumed its autumn session after a seven-week summer recess.

External Affairs Minister Green warned that the world is "hovering on the brink of a nuclear war."

Paul Martin (L—Essex East) noted in cautious anniversary, exactly 22 years ago the Canadian Parliament had met to consider a declaration of war against Germany.

The MPs' concern over the Berlin and Ukraine was undisclosed again and again during a day devoted to defence matters and foreign policy debate.

Mr. Green, opening debate on his department's 1961-62 spending estimates, said it was important in "this time of deep crisis" for Canada to work towards a reduction in world tension.

"We must not lose our heads but show Canadian common sense and moderation."

RUSSIA AT FAULT

Mr. Green said Canada knows the Russians have a genuine desire to reduce tensions. But the Russian attempt to "intimidate" the West by the Berlin situation, but the freedom of West Berlin was not intimidable.

H. W. Herridge (CCF—Kootenay West) said Canadians oppose the idea of risking war over Berlin. Reunification of Germany was a myth.

Troops Ordered To Shoot Back If Necessary

ELISABETHVILLE (Reuters) — United Nations troops were ordered Thursday to shoot back if fired on. The Congo's secession-ist Katanga province announced, meanwhile, it was building up its troops in the capital city.

The order to shoot back came after two days of rioting against the UN.

Brig.-Gen. K. A. S. Raja, Indian commander of the United Military Mission in Katanga, said Katangan police opened fire with a machine gun Wednesday on a UN jeep, wounding an Indian soldier. He said that in the ons clashes and four soldiers were injured and 16 vehicles damaged in the rioting by Katangans against UN authority.

Gangs of youths roamed the streets, their pockets bulging with stones, looking for UN personnel.

They broke into Elisabethville's biggest hotel, the Leopold II, and beat up a Canadian captain, Mario Cote, 36, native of Montreal, Que. After several tense minutes, the captain talked his way out of the centre of the mob.

SCARED THEM OFF

The Associated Press reported that the Canadian overturned chairs and tables as a protection and wrested his revolver at his tormentors, who finally fled. He was quoted as saying "fortunately these chaps are not very courageous."))

Godefroid Munongo, Katanga's interior minister, Thursday told a press conference he is bringing 300 more police into Elisabethville to reinforce his security forces.

But Raja told his press conference he had three battalions of Indian, Irish and Swedish troops in Elisabethville which were "quite sufficient to tackle any security problem."

The riots were against moves by the UN to bring the copper-rich province under control of the new central government in Leopoldville.

CBC REFUSES TO PAY ONTARIO RETAIL SALES TAX

Claims Network Exempt by Law

TORONTO (CP)—The Canadian Broadcasting Corporation has refused to pay the three per-cent Ontario retail sales tax, it was disclosed here Thursday.

A letter from A. K. Morrow, director of English networks and the CBC's Toronto area, sent to more than 2,500 firms supplying the corporation, read in part:

"There is no federal legislation requiring Crown corporations and agencies to comply with provincial sales tax acts.

"The CBC is an agent for all purposes of Her Majesty the Queen . . . is thus automatically exempt from the provisions of the Ontario retail sales tax."

Mr. Clark, comptroller of revenue in the Ontario treasury department, said the agency or government may or may not pay the tax — it's up to them.

He said the CBC is exempt from the tax, being an agency of the Crown, and [illegible] connected to pay. The CBC is only one of about 25 such agencies.

MUST TRY

Suppliers to the CBC must try to collect the tax, he said. If they cannot collect it, they must report to the department. Otherwise they will be liable to pay the three-per-cent tax.

Mr. Clark said Eric Fleming said in the Commons July 11 the government proposed "to waive federal immunity" in the legislation to make them taxable and would be introduced to be effective April 1, 1962.

Records of Drugs Used in Cancer Treatment Given

CHICAGO (AP)—Dr. Andrew C. Ivy who has reported that the drug, krebiozen, has merit in treating cancer, says records of the drug's use are ready for inspection by the National Cancer Institute.

The material "includes the reports of the tests that were made at the Institute," Dr. Ivy said Wednesday.

Ivy, 68, a distinguished professor emeritus of the University of Illinois College of Medicine, said the records will be in Kenneth M. Endicott, director of the institute, hands, respectively, at a meeting at the earliest possible date.

The records are to be used by the institute as a data basis for a clinical test of krebiozen.

The clinical tests figure as evidence to be considered in Ivy's contempt of Mrs. Alice Bateman, a native of Belgium, and her English lover, Ethel Burton, Chicago.

Ivy contends that remarks about his medical [illegible] scandals of the day in a book by Stoddard injured his reputation.

Radioactive Cloud Caused by First Russian Test Passes Over Canada

WASHINGTON (AP) — Dr. [illegible] of government official [illegible] said, today the cloud of radioactive debris from the first explosion of seven recent Russian nuclear tests has passed over Western Europe and is expected to cross the northern United States by this weekend.

Machta, the U.S. weather bureau official, said the cloud [illegible] generally easterly direction from the central Asian detonation site — spanning the Asian mainland, then crossing the Bering Sea.

It crossed all of Alaska Monday and Tuesday and at the same time went over Western Canada.

Machta estimated that by Thursday, the cloud passed over Montana, Washington, Idaho and northern Nevada and the northern part of Canada.

Thereafter, he forecasts, it will move east over at least the [illegible] of the U.S. By Sunday, it should begin passing Western Europe headed toward Europe.

Machta said he could not estimate when debris from the three later tests would reach Canada and the United States.

Some fallout will reach the earth wherever the radioactive cloud passes over—and will continue to as the cloud keeps circling the earth.

The amount of fallout would be far less than from the first Russian tests "than it has been from any of our own test explosions in Nevada in the past," Machta said.

West Warns Russia Against Blocking Flights to Berlin

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States, Britain and France today gave Russia a new warning "in the most solemn terms" against any interference with Allied flights in the air corridors between West Germany and West Berlin.

The Western powers told the Kremlin that any change in the air transport situation "will be the result of aggressive action against established (Western) rights by the Soviet government and the East German regime."

The Allied notes were delivered in Moscow this morning. They rejected Russia's contention that the United States, Britain and France have not unrestricted right of air transport in and out of West Berlin.

"Any rights with respect to air access to Berlin," the identical notes said, "derive from [illegible] the same source as do the rights of the U.S.S.R. in East Germany as well as in Berlin; namely, the joint military defeat of the German Reich and the joint assumption of supreme authority over Germany.

"These rights are confirmed by the circumstances under which the four powers entered Germany and by subsequent agreements and [illegible] and by open and established practice over a period of 15 years."

The form of the dispute as developed in a series of exchanges between Moscow and the Western capitals in recent weeks is legalistic. But U.S. officials fear that if Soviet-bloc future Communist moves to try to impose limits on use of the air corridors.

(The New York Herald Tribune said it had learned that present administration plans call for the use of Western military planes escorts to make sure that commercial planes get through. If the Russians harass allied air traffic along the corridors.

The U.S. also has started a special research project to determine what effect various electronic efforts to jam radio and electronic equipment aboard flights in Berlin, the Herald Tribune said.)

E. German People Resigned To Facts of Cold War Life

LEIPZIG (AP) — People in East Germany seem increasingly resigned to the facts of the cold war. The Communist regime has developed since the Berlin crisis began to the point that Berlin escape hatch to the West, it is not apparent.

The Communist regime may be able to consolidate its hold as the supply of consumer goods increases. Its success in building up this field is far below West Germany's. It is nevertheless considerable.

For-raise out of 10 East Germans, the wire and barbed wire dividing Berlin are out of view when they walk or drive and watch Western television. The Communist party has set legal, [illegible] and other bars for all Germans to stop viewing the West German broadcasts.

"Out of sight, out of mind," said one Leipziger commenting on the situation.

The visit of Soviet commissar Shelepin [illegible] to East Germany this week was designed to strengthen the hated party and the West will undoubtedly compromise over Berlin in the face of East German opposition to [illegible].

If an East-West settlement is reached, people hope the Communist regime will permit a [illegible] relaxation of the [illegible] rigid travel ban for East Germans.

Regular visitors, to the Leipzig Trade Fair agree the East German economy is improving. Its [illegible] 4,300 advanced and terminal cancer patients during the [illegible] fair ended Wednesday.

Ivy, 68, a distinguished professor emeritus of the University of Illinois College of Medicine, said the records will be in Kenneth M. Endicott, director of the institute, hands, respectively, at a meeting at the earliest possible date.

The records are to be used by the institute as a data basis for a clinical test of krebiozen.

The clinical tests figure as evidence to be considered in Ivy's contempt of Mrs. Alice Bateman, a native of Belgium, and her English lover, Ethel Burton, Chicago.

Ivy contends that remarks about his medical [illegible] scandals of the day in a book by Stoddard injured his reputation.

Nehru Gloomy After Talking With Mr. K.

MOSCOW (AP)—Prime Minister Nehru of India talked for [illegible] hours with Soviet Premier Khrushchev at the Kremlin [illegible] Thursday but did not [illegible].

"Once again the foul winds of war are blowing," Nehru said. "Both are atomic tests and the world grows fearful."

"Once the door of war is opened, life on earth will be completely [illegible] and the damage that when man has the power to improve the lot of humanity and to give it the fruits of progress, the ghosts of war should [illegible] on us. I cannot understand why man should do this."

FILM STEALS

OTTAWA (CP) — E. C. Mullen, retired president of an Ottawa car dealership, and Miss [illegible], service bureau director of the Dominion Command, Royal Canadian Legion, Thursday night were chosen to fill seats on the Ottawa public school board. The seats became vacant following the [illegible] of Mrs. Margaret D. Roy Kennedy and W. A. (Ernie) Brown, both men have [illegible] in a dispute involving land sold by the board.

15,000 RECRUITS WILL BE ADDED TO ARMED FORCES

Will Also Increase Militia Strength

OTTAWA (CP) — Recruiting will start immediately to add 15,000 men to Canada's armed forces.

Prime Minister Diefenbaker announced in the Commons Thursday that the present manpower will be raised to 135,000 from 120,000 to strengthen the civil defence organization, Canadian forces in Europe and the navy.

In addition, 100,000 civilian male volunteers between the ages of 18 and 60 will be enrolled in the militia for six-week courses of national survival exercises. They will be paid at regular army privates.

These volunteers will be militiamen even after completion of their courses, but will start in mid-November — and therefore could be called up for service if the government proclaimed the War Measures Act.

WILL TRAIN

Mr. Pearkes, minister said: "These courses will provide sufficient basic military training to establish a reasonable reserve upon which to draw for operations."

The key word here appeared to be "reasonable."

The government has approved an army plan to form 200 mobile rescue columns to evacuate persons from 18 target cities in Canada in the event of nuclear bombardment.

These columns would receive a total of [illegible] personnel of whom only one-third would be drawn from the regular army and 67,000-member militia.

The columns will be formed mainly in towns and villages in doughnut-shaped areas 30 to 100 miles from target cities. Each column will require 120 soldiers and 300 civilians plus 300 persons to act as drivers.

Mr. Diefenbaker said the 14,000-strong Canadian Army Re-

Walker Proposes Half Billion More for Homes

OTTAWA (CP)—A $500,000,000 increase in available funds for direct loans by Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation was announced Thursday by Prime Minister Walker in notice of a resolution to be presented in the Commons.

The resolution proposes amendments to the National Housing Act to increase to $8,000,000 from $1,500,000,000 the maximum charge on the consolidated revenue fund for direct loans by the CMHC.

It also proposes increases in funds available for housing research and studies, for [illegible] for university housing projects, and for municipal servicing of industrial land.

The proposed increase in funds available for municipal land servicing would raise the maximum charge on the consolidated revenue fund to $300,000,000 from $100,000,000.

The ceiling on loans for university housing projects would be raised to $150,000,000 from $50,000,000.

Funds available for research and community planning would be increased to $50,000,000 from $5,000,000.

Gunman May Have Carried Money to Lake

PETERBOROUGH (CP) Provincial police following the trail of bandits who fled a [illegible] holdup Wednesday found a set of keys Thursday near the spot the gunmen's car was abandoned one of their getaway cars.

Police sergeant Stan Palmateer, heading the search for the keys, said they were found by a [illegible] discovery as "most significant," but the best discovery so far." He said the keys were of two types of keys they were.

Two men were arrested and charged with armed robbery last weekend after an automobile [illegible] on Highway 401, 100 miles northeast of here. The [illegible] in the robbery of $10,000, $85,000 in cash and $100,000 in securities.

Police said Thursday that many of the securities were not negotiable because they were of no use to the bandits.

Police also found ammunition [illegible] that was identical to the type that was fired at] persons in the [illegible] holdup at Havelock, 36 miles west of here.

Police Sergeant Palmateer said the boxes were found near the lake, but that he did not expect was captured Saturday, and the discovery led police to believe that the gunmen had recovered the money they [illegible].

Nikita Ready For Meeting With Kennedy

Will Try to Resolve All East-West Problems

NEW YORK (AP) — Soviet Premier Khrushchev is ready for another meeting with President Kennedy on Berlin and other problems, but he says that if the talks do not produce results they may only make matters worse.

"The task now is to find solutions for the major international issues causing concern," Khrushchev told C. L. Sulzberger, foreign affairs columnist of the New York Times.

Khrushchev outlined his views in an interview with Sulzberger at the Kremlin Tuesday, then clarified his position in a summit meeting in a statement Thursday.

Sulzberger's report, which described Khrushchev's attitude as "tough and relentless," was published in the Times today with excerpts from the 6½-hour question-and-answer session.

Khrushchev stuck to his position on Berlin and again said that peace treaties must be signed with East and West Germany, leaving West Berlin a [illegible] on a special status for West Berlin. Free access to West Berlin must be guaranteed on the basis of an agreement with East Germany.

This would imply recognition of Communist control by the East German regime so far rejected by the United States. If the Western powers go along with Khrushchev's solution, the Soviet Union plans to sign a peace treaty with the East German regime regardless.

Recalling his first meeting with Kennedy in Vienna last June, Khrushchev said both men discussed their viewpoints and left without changing each other's opinions.

"That is natural for a first contact," Khrushchev said. "[illegible] a second meeting we were to know ourselves to an exposition of our viewpoints, after which both of us know the situation well of course may [illegible] to agree on the contrary, might even deteriorate."

For his part, the Soviet premier said he "would spare neither strength nor time" for a new Kennedy-Khrushchev meeting. But he said both sides must have the "elementary understanding of the need to resolve such important matters as Germany and to ensure peace treaty and its solution on this basis." Parliament At a Glance

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Thursday, Sept. 7, 1961

The parliamentary session resumed after a seven-week recess with major statements on defence and foreign policy by Prime Minister Diefenbaker and External Affairs Minister Green.

Mr. Diefenbaker announced a $15,000 - man increase in the armed forces, a $200 - million increase in Canada's NATO forces and plans to train 100,000 civilian male volunteers in national survival.

Opposition Leader Pearson said it was impossible to assess the value of the proposals without knowing the objective of the government's defence policy.

Mr. Green, usually optimistic, opened a foreign affairs debate with a gloomy statement that "the world is hovering on the brink of a nuclear war."

Paul Martin (L — Essex East) said the West must not allow itself to become "mesmerized in fear" by the Berlin situation, but the freedom of West Berlin was not negotiable.

H. W. Herridge (CCF—Kootenay West) said Canadians oppose the idea of risking war over Berlin. Reunification of Germany was a myth.

Trying to Save Jobs of 500 Bicroft Miners

TORONTO (CP)—The United Steelworkers of America (CLC) announced Thursday the president of its local in Bancroft is attempting to round up a delegation to go to Ottawa for jobs of 300 Bicroft Mining Company employees.

The delegation would contact federal cabinet ministers, the Steelworkers said in a statement. Campaigning at Bancroft is Mitri Young, president of Local 5318.

The statement said the company sent a letter to employees, saying 125 of the working force of 580-odd men are being laid off immediately and that the entire operation might be shut down by October.

The letter was said to have blamed the federal government for not living up to a promise that new contracts and re-arrangements of existing contracts would permit the operation in the Bancroft area, about 30 miles northeast of Peterborough, to continue into 1963.

The company claims it has spent $500,000 on development work on the basis of these promises made by House of Commons but no assurance has yet been received to justify further development work, the union statement said.

Council Will Try to Block Building of Swimming Pool

TRENTON — Trenton council will meet on record last night as being opposed to the installation of a swimming pool in the proposed addition to the new high school. The resolution stating that there were other projects entitled to a higher priority in the town's budgeting.

The letter will be sent to the Ontario Municipal Board asking if the Trenton Board of Education has a legal right to proceed with plans for the pool, in the light of council's objections.

Councillor Vaga Lange voted against the resolution, on the grounds that the Board of Education was an elected body. He said that he did not wish to support something which would "break down the chain of command as laid down by Ontario law".

The resolution was proposed by Councillor Ross Burtt. He said that last night council had turned down the proposal that a $30,000 fire hall be built on the land Trenton Airways would be given back by the people in tax cuts. "We simply cannot people if it doesn't go back. We should try to keep the mill rate down."

Called upon for an opinion, Mayor Lloyd Campbell said that if council disputed the board's budget, the board might keep it on.

"That would only apply to educational costs", said Councillor Burtt.

"This is a democracy" said the mayor. "We are elected. We don't have a choice, do we?"

"You can delay and frustrate them, but in the final analysis, it is my opinion that they would come out on top", said the solicitor, adding that this was not an official opinion.

"Well, let's do something before they get the pool started", suggested Councillor Burtt.

NOT BOARD'S MONEY

"Get it out of your head that this is the board's money", said Councillor Burtt. "They said that they'd saved the people money, well, any money saved should go back to the people in tax cuts. We simply cannot afford it."

Councillor Burtt said that the school board had made no allowance in the figuring for hiring a life guard and for the cost of the water for the pool. He said that Trenton taxpayers would be expected to pay an extra three mills for the pool and an additional three mills for the salaries of teachers for the new addition to the school.

GRANT UNLIKELY

The councillor said that he had been told by Hon. W. A. Goodfellow that it was highly improbable that the Department of Agriculture would grant $10,000 towards the construction of a pool which is considered within a school building. (The department has been known to grant this sum towards construction costs of a pool contained in a separate building.)

Alderman Ewing was vocal in saying that this area be declared a "depressed area" and said Councillor Burtt, "How we're willing to spend $62,600 any place."

"I agree with you one hundred per cent", said Councillor McNair.

"The board's making a mockery of us", said Councillor Burtt. "They came to us about the pool and we turned them down. They bought it under our control."

"They cease to ask council to pay for the pool. Now they propose to build it themselves. If they let us use it it's permission of them", said Councillor Lange.

Council voted to support a resolution advanced by the Peel County Council that the Prime Minister of Canada and the Premier of Ontario be petitioned to legislate national and provincial elections.

The resolution referred to the need for new hospital construction and the need for funds to municipalities for such construction, suggesting that money from the sale of sweepstake tickets would solve the problem.

STRUCTURE CLOSED

Several letters from the Trenton Public Utilities Commission were received. The commission informed council that a town-wide lighting survey was underway and that in a few days there will be tree trimming, or tree cutting, in spots of possible objection to residents, are indicated. Councillors were agreed that trees should be saved, where possible.

The commission suggested that around three acres in the area surrounding the Bicroft airport would be "a ride in the park" land to prevent building on the land. Councillors felt that if the parks board is interested.

There is a suggestion that council may attempt to negotiate a "trade" with the CNR, giving the town an easement over commission land, for the purpose of installing a road to the Outboard Marine building, in exchange for securing the Sidney Street alley. The commission by putting the land under the jurisdiction of the parks board, attributed matters will occupy the former Williams and Williams plant.

After discussing a request from the Trenton Board of Health that council arrange for the removal of dead leaves from town streets and lawns in a way which would not contravene the recently passed air pollution by-law, council asked the town solicitor to ascertain if the by-law could be amended to allow the burning of leaves.

Councillor Lloyd Worrall asked town engineer Eric Argall-acey for a progress report on Division Street. He said that street residents and others must be chagrined at having to pay a supplementary tax when the street seemed to be at a standstill.

BEGIN PAVING SOON

Mr. Alderney said that the construction crew was spreading gravel this week and that paving should begin this week.

Councillor Burtt asked the engineer to look into a water seepage problem on this street before the paving was done. He said that if water ran in underneath the pavement, next spring, it is likely that the pavement would be undermined.

After considering prices for a new motor for a fire department pumper, council decided to "take a chance" on the present motor lasting another six months or a year.

Legion Branch Executive Holds Meeting

TRENTON — An executive meeting of the Trenton Branch No. 219 of the Royal Canadian Legion was held on Wednesday night in the Legion Hall. Twelve members were present. The meeting was conducted by President Ken Crocker.

Treasurer Bill McLaren reported that it had not been necessary for him to borrow $3,000, which had been authorized for capital expenditures as the financial situation of the branch had improved.

Secretary Bob Wright presented a report on the establishment of the death benefit fund. He said that once the fund had reached $4,000, his committee felt that payments into it should be suspended until it had dropped back to $3,000. The executive recommended that the benefit to the family of a deceased member be set at $100 and that this payment be authorized for families of full paid-up members. Bill Lawson moved that the report be accepted by the executive and recommended to the general body.

Padre Rev. Norman Menzies proposed that the secretary be authorized to write to Mayor MacDonald offering the services of the branch for assistance in any local civil defence programs in this area.

Following the executive meeting the members met with the executive members of the Ladies' Auxiliary of the branch, to discuss mutual problems. "Ask him to keep in mind that I'd like a deer hound for Christmas", said quipped Councillor Lange.

Clerk-comptroller O. W. Larry said that Trenton Realty Mortgage and Housing Corporation had approved the sale by a senior citizens' apartment block in Trenton. Council, in the absence of a dissenting ruling in provincial law, passed a motion to refund any tax which might be charged against the building.

Mayor MacDonald suggested that the traffic committee investigate school warning signs on Byron Street. He said that the signs on the south side of the street could only be seen when a driver had just another sign, half way up the street was obscured from the motorist by a tree on the building. He suggested that a school guard be placed on this street, as it had been reported that children run across at unmarked points.

Mr. Argall said that he had been told that one little girl had told her parents that the markings on the street were "for the cars". Councillors were agreed that trees could be cut, if necessary.

Trenton Ready To Share Cost Of Area Defence

TRENTON—Trenton council has voted to support an area civil defence organization and to share the cost of hiring a Belleville civil defence coordinator.

At last night's council meeting Mayor Ames MacDonald said that recently he had discussed a possible civil defence program with municipal heads from the city of Belleville, and the counties of Hastings and Prince Edward. Colonel Angus Kelly, commanding officer of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, also attended the meeting.

He said that experts were of the opinion that the Trenton — Belleville — Picton area would not be considered a prime target for a hydrogen bomb attack, but that the greatest danger to people in this area would be from fallout, drifting down from areas to the north (Toronto, Hamilton, Niagara Falls and American cities).

Mayor MacDonald said that the overall plan seemed to be that Belleville and RCAF personnel would be moved into disaster areas and that refugees from the target areas would be streamed eastward. Hence, the hospitals in this area would be faced with caring and providing for these refugees.

He said that it was not so much a question of providing accommodation for any future emergencies but rather a program of assembling and accumodation, available personnel and supply potential we possess at the moment.

Other area councils will be asked to vote on the resolution.

Jobless Picture in District Much Better Than Year Ago

Although there are still 1,070 job applicants in Belleville and in the Hastings county area served by the local employment office, unemployment at the last of August was down 13 per cent compared with the same period last year.

This was noted today by Mr. Cecil Bluser, manager of the Belleville employment office, who said the 1,070 job applicants compared with 1,236 at the last of August in 1960.

Mr. Bluser said unemployment in the Belleville area represented about 3 per cent of the labor force, just under the national average of 3.2 per cent.

More job opportunities than there are now a year ago was given as the reason for the brighter employment picture. During August 304 orders for workers were received as compared with 252 last year. This has resulted in 615 men and women obtaining jobs.

In keeping with the brighter employment picture the number of persons drawing unemployment is also down 723 as compared with 1,056 a year ago.

APPLICATIONS DOWN

This represents a drop of 31 per cent. In August there were 153 fewer applications for benefits than a year ago.

Currently there are good job opportunities for persons with certain classes of technical training. For instance electronic technicians with grade 13 or better education and a variety of trades of a technical institution are in demand, as are cost accountants, setters and sheet metal workers.

Women social workers, domestics, waitresses and private secretaries are also in demand.

And outside the Quinte district food processors and field workers are in demand.

Mr. Bluser noted that this year's municipal winter works program has an authorized commencement date of October 15th. He urged all municipalities in the Hastings district to give consideration to their programs and have them approved by the middle of October.

Three Given Jail Term Of Seven Days

Cadet Seminaro, Raymond Goulet and Eugene Lalonde, from Sherbrooke, Quebec, were given seven days in jail this morning by Magistrate T. Y. Wills when they pleaded guilty to charges of stealing to steal a quantity of gasoline from Earl Millman.

Paul Mercier acted as interpreter for the three accused.

Inspector Mcmillan of the city police department said on September 2, the three youths in a motor vehicle owned by Lalonde were sitting in the National Hotel lot on Dundas street.

He said they were seen by persons connecting a white rubber hose from their vehicle to one owned by Earl Gilbert

Local Drivers Will Take Part At Mosport

Tomorrow marks the running of the 10th Indian Summer Trophy sports car and motorcycle races, sponsored by the British Empire Motor Club of Toronto, but it will be the first time that this veteran event will be held on Canada's new Mosport Circuit just off Highway 35 north of Orono.

A number of local sports car racing enthusiasts, including Vic Yachuck with his very potent Sadler formula junior racing car and Tony Polkyra with his personally constructed Peugeot-powered formula junior car, from the St. Lawrence Automobile Club will be amongst the top contenders in their class when the races get underway at 11:00 a.m.

The new circuit, which is but 80 miles from Belleville, has provided the most exciting road car race course which has been witnessed in eastern Canada since the circuit had its start some 12 years ago on an abandoned airport circuit at Edenvale near Barrie.

Aside from the great appeal it has for the competitors the new circuit is also extremely appealing to the spectator as they can follow the action along the lines of a park with adequate parking facilities, concession stands and plenty of shade trees about the many vantage points from where one may view a major portion of the twisting, climbing twenty-three turn course.

Besides the races tomorrow will feature the Trip for Canadian drivers and cars there will be another race meet on Sunday which will feature some of the world's finest drivers from Europe and the United States driving the fastest racing cars of international competition today.

and before any gasoline was exchanged from one tank to the other, they removed the hose and left the scene.

The three youths were apprehended behind a local hotel shortly after.

After sentence was passed, one of the three accused rallied his hand and replied to the Magistrate in French, "bonjour".

Three Youths Hurt as Car Hits Train

Three Belleville youths were admitted to the Belleville General Hospital Thursday night when the car in which they were riding struck a CNR freight train at Dundas and Road, about 2½ miles west of here.

David Pelletier, age 17, 181 James St.; Allan Heard, age 18, 127 Charles and William David Wickett, age 18, of 35 Parkes St., were admitted to the hospital suffering multiple lacerations. Dr. A. E. Miles who is attending the three youths, said the extent of Pelletier's injuries is as yet undetermined.

Constable W. G. Willis of the Ontario Provincial Police said the train was westbound at the time, and the car driven by David Pelletier was southbound on the Jones' Creek Road and struck the 57th freight car from the engine. He said the damaged car was removed from the train at Trenton.

Heard walked from the scene of the accident to the Park Lane Motel, one mile east of Belleville, and advised the proprietor to contact the police.

At the time of the accident, Heard was a passenger in the car, while Wickett was riding in the back.

Constable Willis said the train passed through Belleville at 8:25 and they received the call at 10:40.

The Pelletier car, a 1950 Pontiac which is a total loss, burned a few days before the accident, was completely demolished.

Constable Willis said the engineer didn't know the train had been hit until he reached Trenton.

Thanks, Mr. Khrushchev

The recent announcement of the Russians that they intended to carry on with renewed vigor in the fields of atomic weapon testing followed so swiftly by tests which experts calculate as requiring some six to eight months' preparation time has certainly produced a shock effect although we doubt if the effect is that which the Russians anticipated.

The neutral nations of the world, as well as the west, have been universal in their condemnation of the Russian duplicity which allowed them to bargain for the elimination of nuclear tests with one hand whilst preparing for renewed activity in this field with the other. It is this complete lack of sincerity and faithlessness which so many of the neutral nations have found so hard to accept until the present.

In these quarters, where some hesitation or doubt has lingered as to the good faith of the Russians in working for world peace, there should be a sigh of relief.

It is always a relief to find out just exactly where one stands with another party when their exact position has been in doubt due to considerable variance between their expressions of amiable intentions and good will to the cause of peace and their actions of an aggressive nature.

This is not to suggest that none has had any idea as to just what the ultimate aims of the Russians have been for some time. But there have been a number of governments whose interpretation of these objectives has been founded on the face value of the Russians' expressions of peaceable intentions, which have been designed to closely parallel the desires of these countries for world peace.

With every effort being made by representatives of the Western World to meet with the Russians to make a permanent arrangement for the elimination of further testing of nuclear weapons, the Russians' announcement should adequately dispel any notions that they desire a situation whereby people may think world peace is practically assured.

The intention of carrying on with experimentation and testing of the most fearsome weapons of war yet devised by science and technology should be adequate proof of the basic dishonesty of Russian foreign policy even to the most befuddled mind. It should produce an united front by the peace-loving nations of the world in dealing with the Communist menace.

The production of this united front which now appears to be underway, will require some inspired leadership, however, and this will fall, of course, upon the shoulders of the United States, Great Britain and France, the other members of the nuclear weapons club. It will be up to them, or the majority of them, to firmly announce that they refuse to countenance the further development of nuclear arms in the interest of world peace and to call upon the other nations of the world to support them in opposing Russian future and current foreign policies until such time as she promises to cease nuclear testing and to allow an adequate inspection system by representatives of nations in both the neutral and the western spheres.

Khrushchev's latest move in sabre-rattling has provided the rest of the world with its greatest lever if we are to divert the current of world affairs from a path of armament races and threats of war into a channel of peaceful proportions.

It is for this that we feel the Russian premier is deserving of our appreciation.

Nuisances

One good thing can be said about the Ontario sales tax.

It takes little time for one to become acquainted with its disadvantages.

Its advantages may be longer in appearing, though they will be important if the tax enables the Ontario Government to halt the trend towards an ever-increasing public debt.

Right now, though, we are wallowing in the disadvantages — a load of pennies and a heap of higher prices, not all of them merely the result of the tax.

The burden of the pennies cannot, we suppose, be helped. But already we have noted an increase in the price of some goods which are not subject to tax. This is a sneaky way to do business, it obviously being hoped that the buying public, swimming in a flood of higher prices which are the direct result of the tax, will overlook the fact that prices have also been increased on goods not affected by the tax.

Must People Bug Writers With Stories

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Suppose you went to a lawyer and said to him, "I've always been an admirer of your legal talent and my affairs need looking over — will, estate, insurance program and all the rest. It shouldn't take more than a week or so of your time. Of course, you don't expect to get paid for a little favor like that."

Suppose you went to a doctor and said to him, "I don't feel so well. Vague pains here and there. How about a complete check-up — X-rays, fluoroscope, laboratory tests. Shouldn't take you too long. Of course, I can't pay you for it."

These preceding paragraphs are in the nature of a fantasy — but, then, why in the name of all this Mixed Up people keep on bombarding writers with their manuscripts? I have in front of me this very minute two three-act plays, an epic poem, two novels, about a dozen short stories and articles and a treatise titled, "A Statistical Interpretation of the Cosprit of Causality."

I am supposed to read every line of every one of these manuscripts to analyze, suggest revisions and give a literary judgment on their literary worth. Moreover, I am supposed to do all this as a favor to people I have never even met.

When I write refusa (as I always do, politely), these correspondents become violently angry, tell me I am a snob and one who is afraid of giving a hand to competition, and threaten never again to read another line I write. I have made another earnest attempt to explain because I have declined to ruin my eyes, my disposition and my mental faculties on a stranger's manuscript.

Even more are those parasites who expect writers to contribute gaily and freely to house organs, trade journals and other private journals. They haven't dreamt of asking the corner grocer to provide them with a free case of tomato juice, or of soliciting the druggist for a month's supply of aspirin; but a writer is considered a low-down skunk unless he comes through with a 5,000-word article on the subject of back-breaking work and a huge expenditure of time.

I don't mean to sound mercenary — and, actually, I wouldn't edit and publish unsolicited manuscripts no matter how much I was paid — but writers have been victimized too often by this sort of demagoguery, and it's about time the public realized that a writer is in the business of selling words, just as the grocer sells food. When the supermarkets start demanding free articles to our door, I'll match them with a case of fresh and juicy prose, steaming with verbs and succulent with adjectives.

All Have Duty To Stop Crime

Hamilton Spectator

There is always a tendency to believe that crime prevention is a function exclusive to the police.

"What do we keep a police force for?" is a similar commonly heard remarks, especially this fallacious viewpoint. Crime prevention is, in fact, the duty of every citizen. To keep doors locked, not to leave portable property lying about unattended and so on are common sense duties too often neglected.

However unhappy the thought, a rapidly growing crime rate reflects in some measure on every citizen.

STRENGTH FOR THE DAY

DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS

NATURE OF THE CHURCH

The Greek word for "church" used in the New Testament is "ekklesia." From this word we get the English words "ecclesiastic" and "ecclesiastical."

The word "ekklesia" means "that which is called out." To the Greek city world it meant the group separated to administer. The church is a group of people called out — or separated — from the world. This does not mean that they are to be queer, bumptious, contentious. It simply means that they regard the kingdom of God as having certain moral requirements to which they are willing to conform and that these moral requirements are different and superior to the moral requirements of the world.

Church members, when they are members of Christ indeed in the best sense of the term are people who have taken their stand against the world's emphatic and compromising ideals of the world and have dedicated their lives to Christ. This does not mean that the Christian must remove himself from the fellowship of non-Christians. The Christian at his best is the cheerful friend of non-Christians. But he has standards to which he adheres. There are things in the world which he calls wrong and with which he will have nothing to do. Let the world see its way — he will go his. He is the called out separated person. He belongs to the ekklesia (the church)— those who live under the direction of a higher and better Power.

Able To Read In 100 Hours

By Richard Greenough
In UNESCO Courier

It takes an average of just under 100 hours to teach an adult illiterate here to read up to a fair satisfactory elementary standard, and normally he can master a simple sentence designed for the purpose after 8 hours 'teaching. This applies similarly to those learning how to read English or his own African vernacular languages. Proficiency in reading applies to French.

This, at least, is the experience of Ghana's Department of Social Welfare and Community Development, where for some ten years has been using audio-visual methods for fundamental or out-of-school education, to regard remedying illiteracy — among this West African country's adults.

Instruction is not of the familiar ABC variety. It is briefly it consists of teaching through stories with picture charts associating a shape or a letter with an object the name of which begins with that letter. For instance, on a typical chart, the first vertical column contains certain individual pictures; the second column shows how the picture and the letter look alike; the third has the name of the pictured object and below it the first letter of that name; the fourth consists of a review of the letter for practice purposes.

Thus, for example, a picture of an African woman carrying a baby towards her head represents a "b" with the upright line of the woman's body and the loop to the baby on her back, and is pronounced "ba" which means "baby" in three of Ghana's vernacular languages. Similarly a man stretched out asleep with his head against the foot of a tree is a "d" for "dat" to sleep". The line is the upright part of the letter and the loop is the man's head on the ground to the left of the tree. A picture of a crocodile, jaws wide open with a pole between them, forms a "k" for "ka" meaning to "bite".

Letter To The Editor

Objects to Ruling About Rifle Calibre

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer:

Re article in paper, August 31st, I think it reads "High-Power Rifles Now Restricted" Toronto (C.P.) — becomes effective today."

The Lands and Forests Department prohibits the use of a rifle of larger calibre than .375 for hunting under a restricted licence or summer licence. The licences cover small game, groundhogs, foxes and crows.

Why is it that when framing a law pertaining to hunting, be it waterfowl or our four-footed friends, the final result is full of loop holes, is not practicable, therefore impossible to enforce? I especially refer here to the limiting of rifle calibre to .375 for summer shooting of crows, foxes and coons in rural areas, where farm houses and other dwellings are closely dotted over the landscape. I will say there are valuable herds of grazing cattle on every farm. A rifle of .375 calibre is commonly loaded to shoot approximately 2,500 feet, using an energy when using the 250 grain bullet, which should explode the paunch of any farm animal at 100 yards; and can kill a human at 1,000 yards and beyond. By using the .375 calibre as a yardstick, a host of other potent rifles could be put on the condemn to the act. There is the 338 Win. rifle, muzzle velocity 2,725 f.p.s., closely followed by the 220, the 303 and 250 - 3000 Savage rifles. I could go on with numerous to mention here, all strictly high power rifles of calibre .303 at the moderate cost of $15 to $25, except now are their rifles under the new act. The .303 is not as powerful as the .375 but is powerful enough for it more dangerous.

The change in calibre were deemed necessary for safety when shooting small game in built-up areas. Here in rural Southern Ontario, the new centre fire .22 calibre would have the same effect. Ammunition is comparatively cheap, and accurate, and not dangerous as compared with the load of the .375 and others of that calibre, and the noise is reduced.

One must bear in mind these high velocity rifles will bullets only disintegrate on contact, whereupon ricochets are reduced. These bullets will travel on fence posts and trees where there is no back stop they do and distinguish between a domesticated animal, human, or building is struck.

This teaching follows closely the techniques of Drs. Robert and Gabrielle Laubach who introduced the method to Ghana in a pilot project in 1949. It is, of course, is basically as old as the Egyptian hieroglyphics which first associated sounds and then came to represent syllables.

The visiting teachers also often introduce drama into their lessons appealing to the West African's love of play acting. With the help of the local population they enacted pointing out what dangers and troubles can arise through not taking the right precautions. In these is a mother giving her baby what she thinks is medicine from the tin expensive bottle her husband uses for house painting, another, the embarrassment of a man who enters a ladies rest room through not being able to read the signs.

As a result of all this, according to Mr. Antony Quainoo, Ghanaian Assistant Director of the Department of Community Development, classes of adults can pass a reading examination at the end of the year which entitles them to a certificate that they have achieved the minimum standard required of literacy. They can proceed further and obtain the more advanced certificate. Both certificates are given for the same standard of literacy in any one of Ghana's six vernacular languages, Ga, Fanti, Ewe, Twi, Dagbani, Nzema and Dagbani — or in English.

It has been found, incidentally, as a result of these tests that adults can learn to read in roughly one fifth of the time it takes children to learn, partly of course because they already possess the habit of large speaking vocabularity; but conversely, it has been found that children have a good memory and can remember only about four-fifths of what a child can.

Onycholysis Difficult To Diagnose or Treat

By Joseph C. Hinsey, M.D.

"Dear Dr. Molner: I have two fingernails that have white spots on the nails, and they are separating from the nail bed. Could you tell what is causing this? I have not injured the nails to my knowledge. — Mrs. S."

This medical condition is onycholysis (ah-KNEEK-oo-LY-sis) which means that the nail is coming loose from its anchorage. If people ask, "What's new in matter with your nails?" you can reply that you have onycholysis, and there'll stop 'em.

To get down to cases, however, there are multiple causes for this condition. Your letter pointed out that you have not, so far as you know, injured the nails, but injury can cause those white spots as well as loosening.

Another cause, and a very common one, is psoriasis — a skin condition about which, frankly, we don't know very much, although it is very common.

If psoriasis of the nail bed is affecting the nails, the case is probably one in which you know that you have psoriasis, and if you've been chronically troubled with psoriasis, and that have scaly areas, that could well be the reason.

If we can learn what they are, what's new, being allergic to nail polish or to "clip-on" nails is a possibility, but I don't know. The answer is obvious: Give yourself a chance to get along without their make-up.

Still another possible cause is fungus infection, the same sort of ringworm, which has invaded the nail bed.

These are the major causes.

I would be less than frank if I suggested that psoriasis were the most skillful of dermatologists, could look at such a case and say at once what was the cause of the trouble. Treatment sometimes fails because diagnosis can be even harder than the diagnosis.

Some types of fungus may be the easiest to correct. Allergy when it is identified, can be cured with reasonable readiness, too. If it's psoriasis, it becomes a trial-and-error matter, and there is no fixed treatment. With most people you find a answer on the first or second try. With bad luck, you decide that there is no answer. In the case of chronic — not a dangerous disease — you have baffling an exciting medicine has to tackle.

If somebody suddenly found a sure cure for psoriasis, he'd be a millionaire, because it isn't deadly; but he'd reap a fortune, because psoriasis is a very common affliction.

"Dear Dr. Molner: Should a cyst on the wrist that starts from the vagina be removed? Is this type of cyst cancerous? — S. K. H."

Yes, it should be removed, because these cysts become infected and mighty painful. Unless removed, they may grow from time to time but keep filling up again. As to cancer, no.

"Dear Dr. Molner: I have drunk warm water every morning before breakfast for several years. I heard it was healthy. Then a little while ago some one told me this would cause hardening of the liver. — Mrs. G. L."

A glass of water in the morning is a good habit. Before breakfast or after, whether warm, medium or cold, is a matter of habit. It will not cause hardening of the liver or anything else. All I can say is that "someone" is always trying to take the joy out of life. I can't think of anyone who is so full of misinformation as these fervent "health" writers. Everybody else what they do wrong. Go ahead with that glass of water in the morning, at any temperature that suits you.

Protection Can Cripple

Kitchener - Waterloo Record

The "callipsians" wrapped child, whose parents consider it insulate him for all of life's harsher encounters, lives in an unrealistic world.

If he betrays by the flicker of an eye that he might be having trouble at school, his parents move in to straighten things out — hopping to guess him a prize. If he is the scapegoat of neighborhood children, his parents intervene to remove him from the "threatening" situation.

Far from protecting a younger, such handling is actually psychologically crippling. A psychologist. It prevents a child from learning to cope with life and from developing his own methods of dealing with unpleasant experiences.

Conflict, pain and anxiety are a part of life. If parents make a goal of eliminating all of their child's conflicts, he never learns how to handle them. Wherever possible children should be allowed to live through their own troubles and work them out for themselves.

Move Logs With Copters

Woodworkers who have been stubbornly resisting the advance of mechanical appliances in the bush to replace the horse and manual labor may soon find their eyes set against yet another competitor — the helicopter pilot.

The hint came from the Pacific Northwest's logging industry in the United States. Next spring in continuation of experiments undertaken by the United States Forest Service, helicopters will be used for the first time to transport logs on the first stage of their journey from woods to the mill.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

Being a square, I have never yet heard a comprehensible definition of a square. At a recent family gathering of young people, I undertook enquiries, and it seemed that most of the people over thirty, and about eighty per cent of all people under thirty, were squares.

I maintained that this was far too generous a definition, and best definition I obtained from an elderly teen-ager in the group, aged twenty-four, with a beard. He said it was perfectly simple.

"A square," he said, "is someone who won't or can't fit in to any other classification from with other squares. A square is an uncontrollable shape. You can't pigeonhole him or mould with other squares, see?"

I saw at once.

"Those who aren't squares, then," I realized, "are sort of a hexagons, and circles, and of kinds, eh? You can pack a hundred of them in a carton of square, and fit them in a kitchen. They sit. They have no shape to form themselves to, and adapt themselves to..."

Whiskers suddenly realised I had said "confirm."

"No, no!" he protested. "It's the squares who confirm! They have to, to fit.

But I still think the most conforming thing in the world is a basket of...er...um...mush?

SCOTT'S SCRAP BOOK — By R. J. SCOTT

BEEF ON THE HOOF — What is possibly Canada's only steer feeding ranch inside a city is operated by Charles Parm in the Hillcrest area of North Belleville. Seen above is part of a herd of 70 Hereford steers at the Parm ranch which are being marketed today. Steers in background are at the feed trough.

C. Parm, Belleville Farmer, Runs Steer Raising Ranch Within Limits of the City

Belleville's city manager has been asked to check whether the city has a by-law ruling against the keeping of livestock but whether or not there is one in existence it has so far made no difference to Charles Parm, who possibly is unique in his operation of a cattle feeding ranch within the limits of a city.

The cattle ranch is in the former Hillcrest area and today another 70 head of steers, grain fed on the Parm ranch for the past nine months, are on their way to market in Chicago and Toronto.

Already Mr. Parm has been buying up replacement steers which he will feed until they are ready for market.

Feeding steers has been a lifetime business venture as well as lucrative hobby for Mr. Parm, whose steer feeding ranch was taken into the city by annexation two years ago.

Every afternoon about five Mr. Parm rolls out the feed barrel and the fat steers line up at the feed trough for their daily ration of grain.

And the long line of steers eagerly munching their grain is a sight to gladden the rancher's heart.

Mr. Parm is always ready to buy local feeder steers of the right type but he is partial to Western Herefords of which he has numbers shipped in each year.

Some of the steers in today's market quota are nearing three-years-old and range in weight up to 1,700 pounds but the majority were purchased as yearlings about nine months ago. Mr. Parm says he will receive about 24½ cents per pound "on the hoof" for his market steers.

Mr. Parm's "know how" on steer feeding was handed down from his father who also was partial to the raising of prime beef. His father was local manager for the old Harris Abattoir which half-a-century ago wintered up to 1,500 steers at Corbyville each year.

It was at the Corbyville stables where Belleville's inside the city steer raising farmer got his start in the steer raising business. That was when he was but 13 years of age.

FEED ON SPOT

Before the present system of drying grain mash was introduced at Corbyville, the grain was fed on the spot to hundreds of steers tied in stables along the river north of Corbyville. The steers were tied in stalls with chains rented at so much per chain per month.

"My father asked me if I thought I could look after the steers and my first job was putting the chains around the steers' necks," Mr. Parm recalled.

But putting the chains around the steers' necks was the small end of the job. They had to be fed; the stables had to be kept cleaned and the chains had to be checked regularly.

It seems the wet grain mash put fat on the steers so rapidly that the chains had to be checked regularly to keep the steers from choking. Chains which were right in the morning could be so tight by night that they would be cutting into the steers' necks.

"We used to go through the steers by lantern light at night," Mr. Parm said. "The tight chains were easy to find or we could smell the raw flesh where the tight chains had cut into the steers' necks."

BIG CATTLE DRIVES

Also in those days Belleville used to see some real cattle drives passing right through the heart of the city on the way to Corbyville.

Back in 1913 Mr. Parm recalls helping his father, along with Jack Clarke and Bob Miles, drive close to 300 steers from summer pasture at Massassauga. The drive went over the old lower bridge, up Pinnacle Street and along Station Street and Cannifton Road to Corbyville.

He remembers that when they started over the bridge across the bay with the first ten head of steers — the other steers would then follow — the swing span broke loose and swung open.

The steers "rode" the bridge until bridge tenders swung it back and secured it. In the meantime the cowpokes had to ride herd on the main body of steers to keep them from straying all around Roxmore.

The 300 steers was the biggest cattle drive ever to pass through Belleville.

Another time Mr. Parm recalls helping to drive cattle all the way from Cobourg to Corbyville.

But the Eastern style cattle drive of 50 years ago didn't follow the time honored Western method.

The Western cowpoke would be caught dead without his chaps but the Cattle drivers in the East did their driving from the ground.

They walked!

Oh yes, that city ordinance which if in existence might rule out the keeping of steers in the city.

Council was asked to check into the matter a few weeks ago when some of Mr. Parm's steers got out and ate some corn in a neighbor's garden.

The city manager was advised to look into the matter to see if it was legal to keep livestock in the city.

BERLIN CRISIS

said Canada has been regarded for years as a sort of broker between the U.S. and Britain. It was only another step to become the go - between for the U.S. and Russia.

"Is it beyond possibility that our destiny is to be a bridge between a neighbor to the north and a neighbor to the south?" he asked.

Judy LaMarsh (L — Niagara Falls) said she also hopes that Canada may occupy such a role on the world stage.

CAN'T EXPECT

The west has no right to expect that West Berlin can be continued "as a means of subverting the East German government," said Mr. Pitman.

"Are we going to war because we will not recognize a state which exists," he asked.

Speaking as the New Democratic Party's only clearly-labelled MP, Mr. Pitman said in part:

"The worst thing we can do is to try to reduce this complexity (of divided Berlin) to an emotional catch-phrase such as, 'rescue the West Berliners from Russian tyranny' or, on the other hand, 'guard the socialist people's state from western imperialism.'

"The worst thing also that we can do is to inject into this political situation the heart-rending problems of the East Germans."

"The only way we can help these people on the other side of the Iron Curtain is by a long and continuous process of working toward peace and convincing the U.S.S.R. that the heavy hand is less and less necessary."

AS A BROKER

Mr. Matheson said that for years Canada has been regarded as a sort of honest broker between the U.S. and Britain.

"Is it beyond possibility that our destiny is to be a bridge between a neighbor to the north and a neighbor to the south?"

The only way to defeat the present world situation was with some measure of understanding. Canada could play a key role in this respect and might emerge as the country with the solution.

But in this role Canada would need independence of thought.

Mr. Matheson said he found it "passing strange" that a Conservative government which was swept into office on complaints of adverse effects of U.S. actions now, at least in international affairs, was saying "we'll do exactly what you say."

Miss LaMarsh said Canada would not find its destiny in rattling sabres, shooting or increasing its military might. This country should do anything and everything to keep the door open and "keep them meeting at all costs." Canada should be "the waiter who stands and holds open the door."

The greatest danger to the world was that the U.S. and Russia would so solidify their positions that one or the other, willy-nilly, must start a war. It didn't matter how this war started. It would lead inevitably to the destruction of mankind.

The reception was held at the Royal Hotel, Picton. The bride's mother chose a dress of robin egg blue embroidered silk organza over taffeta, sheath style with matching duster, white accessories and corsage of pink rosebuds. The groom's mother was wearing brown flowered silk with white background, pleated skirt, white accessories and corsage of yellow rosebuds.

The bride's table was centred with a three-tiered wedding cake on pedestals topped with a bouquet of pink rosebuds and misted with white tulle about the base interspersed with pink rosebuds. The bridal bouquets and all white candles in candelabra added to the effective arrangement.

For a trip to Prince Edward Island, the bride donned a linden green pure silk sheath dress, maroon colored accessories and corsage of tinted melon carnations.

THE FAMILY COUNCIL

Myrtle A. — I'm so crabby I don't see how Leo puts up with me.

Vera T. — You should go places and do things, kids or no kids.

Myrtle A.—I expect the bot tom to fall out of things any time now. I'm so tired I can hardly stand myself.

With three little ones under 5, I'm just tired, tired, tired all the time. And I'm full of little aches and complaints which seem really petty as I stand there each evening pouring them out to Leo. Then, when he tries to cheer me up with a few jokes, he's brought home from the office, I don't even listen.

I have a slight skin rash which the doctor says is due to my nerves. He gave me some medicine and it helps. But he agrees that I need a rest more than anything. Since I can't get it away, my friend Vera thinks joining a gab club will fix me up. That's nonsense.

* * *

Vera T. — You're a close friend of Myrtle and it upsets me to see the state she's in, so frankly since she won't even try the cures I suggest, I have children, too, although there are only two and they're a bit older. But I find ways to "get out of sin" several times a week, at no expense and with a no harm done to home, husband or family. In fact, all are better off than when my nose was out of joint from keeping it to the grindstone!

My trick is to join adult groups that permit you to bring the kids along. I belong to two — a ballet class at the Y and a glee club in the church. My children can either watch and listen, or have fun in nursery groups on the premises. I'm sure Myrtle would feel refreshed by this.

* * *

The Council — Vera proffers ideas for partial rescue of Myrtle's vigor, disposition and balance. Certainly Myrtle needs the stimulation and reassurance that comes from being part of a cheerful, alert group. But she also needs relief from the attitude in which to "bear herself stalwart" and take everything in stride. Fatigue and aches are scumbling her sensitivities.

I have her physical symptoms as diagnosed by her physician given to be unified to her distraught condition induced by mental and emotional exhaustion. Here are some such procedures as the following to untie Myrtle's knots:

1. Now is the time for all good friends and relatives to come to the aid of a "worked-over" for Myrtle and Leo. This would only entail the care of the kids — at home, if the parents can get off for a little away, if Myrtle and Leo prefer to stay home and get to know each other all over again.

2. Next, Vera can be a friend in need and in deed by offering special form of baby-sit for a tired, mother, namely a relaxing afternoon's work of the evening. With only a light supper, quickly over, these parents can chat and relax with the children for an extra hour, anyway.

4. Finally, there's Vera's tip. Bringing children along while shopping for young mothers nowadays because her charges are welcome and provided in recreation centres. The guilt feelings and worry about what's going on at home are ended. And the kids feel happy to see Mommy happy. We got a photo the other day of a girl on her back doing the bicycle-pedal exercise in a reducing class while her baby sat beside her holding her hand!

Worry is good Myrtle, when it propels you toward improvement.

QUESTION:

Could you please tell me how to thicken ordinary relish, as for e.g. the hot dog relish you can buy at stores. Is it possible to do this by adding flour? — Susan G.

ANSWER:

I think the following is what you mean.

CUCUMBER CHOWDER:

Vegetables: Two quarts cucumbers, peeled and seeded, 2 quarts cabbage, 2 onions, 2 green sweet peppers. Sauce: One-half cup flour, 1½ tablespoon each turmeric and mustard seed, 2 tablespoons each celery seed and dry mustard, ½ cup vinegar. Chop together all the vegetables and let the mixture stand for 6 hours in a brine made by adding ½ cup salt to 4 cups of water. Drain well. Make a smooth paste of sauce ingredients. Heat 8 cups of vinegar (this is an additional amount), and thicken with the above paste, stirring until it comes to a boil. Add the chopped vegetables and bring back to boiling. Seal in sterilized jars.

QUESTION:

Can green peppers be frozen? — Mrs. McL.

ANSWER:

FROZEN GREEN PEPPERS (or Pimentoes):

Do not scald. Wash carefully, remove stem end and seeds. Cut in halves, slices or dice. Use small polythene envelopes, and pack in each only the amount that will be used at one time. Several small envelopes are then packaged in a pint or quart carton, and only as much as is needed is removed at one time. Freeze at once.

QUESTION:

Would you please give recipe for Crock Pickles? — Mrs. W. M. C.

ANSWER:

CROCK PICKLES:

Four quarts freshly gathered cucumbers (small ones or large ones cut up). Wash and cover with 2-3 cup salt and boiling water to cover. Let stand overnight. Drain and add: 2 quarts vinegar, 6 teaspoons salt, 1 teaspoon pound ginger, 6 teaspoon mustard, 6 teaspoons white sugar. Next day add ½ cup sugar and add ½ cup sugar each day for 13 days. This makes the pickles sweet and very crisp. At the end of 13 days, sterilize jars and put pickles and juice in jars or leave in crock. I would suggest putting these pickles in jars unless you have a cold storage cellar.

Hems Stay Just Below Knees in Dior's Collection

By CAROL KENNEDY

LONDON (CP) — Christian Dior's London booth Wednesday led off the winter fashion parades with a collection as crisp and bracing as the first tang of fall in the air that accompanied it.

It is probably the most distinctive show seen in London this year. Everything in it is stamped Dior 1958.

But the 1930s flapper line of spring and summer has left some legacies behind — short skirts, an affection for bead and fringe trims and an impudent, devil-may-care gaiety.

It is basically a look for the young and slender, executed in fine tweeds, wool crepes, and evening fabrics of a subdued richness like old-gold brocade.

Here are some of Dior's ideas:

Hems — stay just below the knee.

WAISTS INDENTED

Waists—are back, sometimes defiantly clipped with a broad leather belt or velvet cummerbund; more often gently indented in a smooth-flowing unbroken line.

Skirts—Flare stiffly from hi-level or are gathered at the waist with a slight outward curve. Lots of swirl and swing; even the so - called "straight" skirts have a subtle built - in flare. Pleats, last season's rage, are out.

Suits—Newest idea is the overjacket for extra warmth without extra bulk. It is collarless so that the jacket collar can fit neatly over it. Jackets are mostly straight in front, gently fitted at the back.

Coats—Either flare dramatically from a high empire bust or are slightly concave in front with a fitted back. Dior is fond of the double-breasted look with big bold buttons.

Colors—lots of tawny yellows, gold-greens and flashes of brilliant red. Dior ignores the Paris fashion pad for brown this season.

Writer, Artist Finds Self At Home With Mennonites

SASKATOON (CP) — Maria Strieffler is reversing the old story of the tourist who goes to the old country to seek out her ancestral tree.

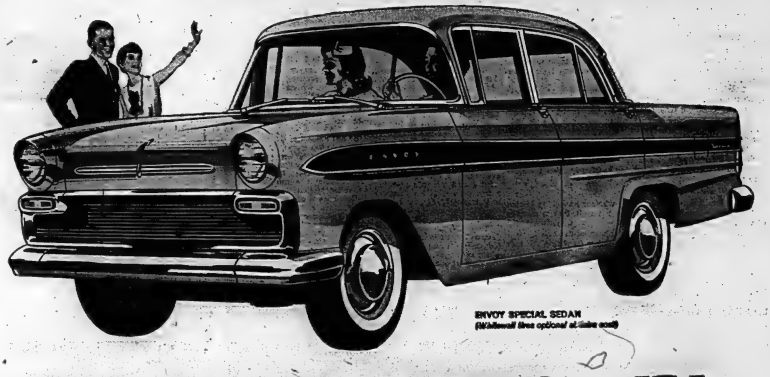
She is interested in finding out about ancestors who came to Canada and the United States from Germany. She has found the same dialect of her native Palatinate, in West Germany on the left bank of the Rhine, spoken by Mennonites in Ontario who have been in North America for 200 years.

Miss Strieffler became interested in Canadian Mennonites when they sent relief after the Second World War.

She has been in North America a little more than a year and has spent most of her time among the Mennonites of Pennsylvania, Ontario, Manitoba and Saskatchewan.

With her facile pen, she makes ink sketches which she says catch impressions of her subjects better than a camera. She says she hopes to write, and illustrate, a book on the North American Mennonites, who first emigrated to Pennsylvania from Germany in 1721.

After the American revolution they were promised freedom from conscription if they settled in Ontario and many of them did.



In Manitoba and Saskatchewan, she said, there is a Russian-German influence in the Mennonite homes, such as the high beds and the samovars.

Miss Strieffler said the Mennonites in Western Canada seem to be losing many of their old customs and traditions. She said she thought the old German dialect eventually would be lost.

She also plans to visit Mennonites in the Peace River area of Alberta, who came from Mexico.

First Few Weeks Can Decide School Success

By JACK HUTTON

Question — Which is the most embarrassed musical group around today which also has a hit tune blaring forth from juke boxes all across Canada?

Answer — The U.S. Bonds. Their latest song hit, close to the top of most hit parades in Canada is — School Is Out.

The tune may be making a small pile of money for its backers, but you could never prove its title by the thousands of Canadian students who have just finished their first week back at school.

Bonfires on the beach are now just memories for another year. And do you remember that girl (or boy) who seemed the most in June but turned out to be unbearable by mid-August?

What about that summer job? Well, so what if we didn't make all the money we expected to? Count yourself fortunate if you had a summer job at all this year — because many looked in vain.

I imagine that by the end of this first week you're up to the ears in advice. Most schools advise each teacher to deliver one pep talk to each class. Let's see, six classes a day adds up to . . . hmmm.

I'm not going to add my two cents. But I can't help recalling a university president I interviewed some time ago and his analysis of those who would make it and those who wouldn't. The words still ring in my ears.

"No one really fails in the spring. Most of them do it in the first few months before Christmas has even approached," said Dr. Hugh Sanderson of the University of Manitoba.

Dr. Sanderson, a tall, friendly man who concerns himself with each one of his students, explained that that the pattern of success or failure is set in the first few weeks of the school year.

"It's too easy to become caught in a social whirl," he said. "I don't advise by any means that anyone cut out social activities. But everyone has to establish a reasonable compromise."

His words were directed towards university students, but they apply just as clearly to any of us in high school. His advice: establish a regular time for homework and stick to it.

"It is so easy," said Dr. Saunderson, "to figure that, well, I'll just catch up in a week or so. Before you know it several weeks have rolled around and the deadline for catching up is rapidly passing."

The student making better marks than you, he added isn't necessarily someone with more brains, but of the secret lies in being better organized than the next fellow. We might call it "one-up-manship" with a timetable.

Anyway, 'nuff said. The best of luck to you this year with your academic problems. Drop us a line if you have any problems on which you might like some advice from others.

BACK FROM THE NORTH

WEs mentioned at the beginning of the summer (seems a long time ago, doesn't it?) 30 young Ontario people who went north to help teach children in several northern Indian communities.

They've now returned — and probably will never have quite the story view about life again.

Carole Goode, a Grade 11 student, declared: "You can get awfully narrow-minded, when you have so much like we have "at home." All of her summer colleagues supported her wholeheartedly.

The group, sponsored by the Anglican Young People's Association, helped to build and rebuild churches and to teach Indian children. Might be something to keep in mind for a future summer project.

THIS IS HUMOR?

Some weeks ago we questioned whether something known as "teen-age humor" actually exists and invited some samples of what you find funny.

Well, "Dennie" of Victoria, B.C., is keeping us well-supplied with jokes enjoyed by her friends. I rather liked this one that she tells:

"A big gamebuster in Africa came across a sleeping lion, shot at it, missed and shot again, but the gun was jammed. The lion awoke. He tried to fire again, but couldn't so dropped to his knees and started to pray.

"He couldn't believe his eyes when he looked up to see the lion kneeling beside him, praying too.

"Wh-wh-what are you doing?" he asked.

"I don't know about you," said the lion, "but I'm saying grace."

JURY NOTES

West Coast friends tell us that poetry readings are becoming more popular out that way. Several high school students with the help of university friends have organized readings of the modern poets with going "beat" — our poll on restricting adult movies to people "18-or-over" has been reprinted by two American trade weeklies and will be considered by the Canadian Film Censors' Conference in Regina in two weeks.

Sunday School Lesson

History of a Church

By ROY L. SMITH

Once that we get below the bare facts, we discover that the first century Christian Church of Corinth had an extremely dramatic history, and a colorful founding.

TWO DP's

It cannot be precisely proven, but it appears very probable that it was some kind of conflict between Dr. Dews and the Christians in Rome, which resulted in the expulsion of all Jews from the city by Augustus, in the year @ A.D.

Among those driven from the city was a prosperous tent-maker named Aquila, together with his wife, Priscilla. How they did it no one knows, but after what must have been months of weary trudging over the mountain roads, and much suffering, they finally arrived in the Roman city of Corinth, in Greece. It is quite possible that they may have come by boat from Rome over to some friend or manager, and that they may have left Rome by the same route from it while in exile.

The Uniform Sunday School lesson for September 10: "Aquila and Priscilla, Ahls Teachers," Acts 18:1-11, 18, 21, 24-28; Romans 16: 3-5a.

At any rate, the two of them arrived as DP's in Corinth and there they established with capital ships and the streets of the city crowded with sailors with empty pockets.

Rome was in the process of altering her corn laws, revising them to let maritime affairs, and otherwise disorganizing life for the native area. How Aquila and Priscilla ever managed to get the business started, no one knows.

UNEMPLOYED TENT-MAKER

They had not, probably, been in business long, though there appeared at the door of their shop one day an unemployed tent-maker from the island of Tarsus—a man named Saul, who had adopted the Greek name Paul.

He had arrived in Europe, according to the story he told, as the preacher of a new religion, having had great success in his mission from the start. In one city after another he had become embroiled in riots, brawls, and disturbances of one sort and another until, sick, discouraged, lonely and nearly penniless, he arrived, he had angered in Corinth

Aquila, probably out of the goodness of his heart, gave the unemployed tent-maker a few hours work, and discovered that he was a good craftsman. More than that he became greatly impressed by the story he told about a prophet from Nazareth who had been crucified by Pontius Pilate, in Judea, because He had been represented as being a political rival.

"But He was the Messiah of the Jews," the tentmaker declared "and the Savior of men."

And whenever he could get anyone to listen he expounded on his theme. So carefully did he work at the task, and with such learning did he interpret the Scriptures, that before long Aquila and Priscilla found themselves vastly enamoured of the tale.

FOUNDING OF CHURCH

It was late one night in the tiny little hired apartment in which the two DP's made their home when the three of them stood together, and lifting their hands in a holy vow, declared: "Jesus is Lord." It was the creed of the Christians to which every member of the infant Church was required to subscribe. And as the tent-maker and his wife, together with the new convert, Epaenetus, stood and declared their common faith, the Church in Corinth was born.

In time it became one of the important centres of the Christian movement, and several centuries later it became one of the great foci for the Christians of all the world But it began in the hired apartment of "two DP's, in the midst of a depression, as the result of the mobility of an unemployed tentmaker.

Successful Living

By Doris Clark

(A Canadian Social Worker Helps with Human Problems)

Has Trouble With English

DORIS CLARK

DEAR DORIS:—How can I train myself to think in English? I am French Canadian, 30 years of age. Have been speaking English in business and social dealings for the past 10 years.

I still feel that I am translating half of the time. Should I simply accept the fact that I will never be perfectly bilingual or do you think there is something else I could try?—MISS L.S.

DEAR MISS L. S.:—Does "perfectly bilingual" mean, to you, thinking in English or speaking without the trace of an accent? Or both? Because there is a difference.

You can learn to think in English. It is a matter of establishing habit patterns. Think about a specific situation. Talk your way through it in English, supplying all the correct words and grammar. Then go over and over it. Eventually you will be able to express the ideas in your discussion without conscious translation. Do this in all areas of your life.

Speaking without any accent whatever is something else again. Habits related to the pronunciation of letters of the alphabet were formed in childhood, and have a lot to do with the way you handle those letters and sounds whenever you see them. A French Canadian has learned to pronounce the letters "The" as "Tay," and this carries over so that wherever "th" appears, the inclination to sound it like an English Canadian sounds the letter "t."

That is just one example. Rubbing out such a habit is seldom done with complete success except in childhood.

NIKITA READY

Khrushchev is trying to force a German settlement.

"This is true," Khrushchev replied. "I understand it and take it into account."

But the Soviet premier went on to say that he had first presented his proposal on Germany and a "free city" of Berlin in 1958 and in subsequent meetings with Western leaders "we have a lot of chins discussing this."

TREATED LIKE BOYS

Implying that he had given the West ample time to come up with a counter-proposal, Khrushchev continued: "They want to treat us like schoolboys —sit still, put your hands on the desk, don't dare take a step — to sign a peace treaty. But we are men, too, and we are a strong nation to boot."

Khrushchev urged that both East and West revoke their measures to build up their military forces—except for steps on nuclear tests. He said France had been testing during the three-year moratorium observed by Britain, the United States and the Soviet Union, but before that the West had conducted more tests than the Communist world.

"We Socialists also have a moral right to equal conditions as regards measures to ensure our security," he said.

Khrushchev also told Schberger that no Soviet long-range missiles or atomic warheads had been given to Moscow's allies, and none are stationed outside the Soviet Union except "perhaps in East Germany." Schberger reported Khrushchev feels that Britain, France and Italy would refuse to fight a war for Berlin and are "figuratively speaking, hostages to us and a guarantee against war."

The Times columnist wrote:

"I have the impression that Mr. Khrushchev is supremely confident he can count on the present test of iron wills without recourse to war and that although he admits the present crisis is now acute, he is sure the Western world will in the end come to accept his basis for a new Berlin dermula."

Speaking earlier at the meeting in the Kremlin, Nehru called for the great powers who hold the key to war and peace to remove the threat of war and lead the world to peace."

Nehru, on a three-day official visit to the Soviet Union, came from the conference of non-aligned nations in Belgrade, which urged talks between Russia and the United States.

The conference, Nehru said, "expressed the minds of hundreds of millions of people."

"Every effort must be made to settle these problems. Only talks can lead to fruitful results.

"Today we face the last possibility. A wrong step could wipe out the future for mankind."

Nehru said that if the danger of war could be removed in talks between the two major powers, "the way would be opened toward examining the problem of disarmament."

"If they fail to achieve disarmament they will never achieve peace," he warned.

Nehru spoke for 16 minutes before yielding the platform to Khrushchev.

TELLS OF TESTS

Khrushchev then made the first public reference in the Soviet Union to the four recent nuclear weapon tests which the United States has reported Russia made in central Asia. The tests breached the East - West moratorium on such experiments.

"Military preparations in the West have been stepped up," he said. "Taking this into account we could not ignore the interests of the security of our country and the Socialist camp.

"The Soviet Union had to defer demobilization and to increase military expenditure. Because of direct threats we had to face the necessity to carry out nuclear tests."

On resuming atom tests, Khrushchev said President Kennedy "acted without waiting for a reply from the Soviet Union—incomprehensibly meaningful a reply to the joint British - American appeal to the Soviet Union to stop nuclear tests in the atmosphere by Saturday.

Khrushchev did not go into details on this, however.

President Kennedy has already stated that the United States is resuming tests in the laboratory and underground without the consequences of dangerous fallout that accompany tests in the atmosphere.

WILL SAY 'NO'

Plainly indicating that Moscow will say no to the proposed to stop atmospheric tests, Khrushchev said:

"The Western proposal to stop tests in the atmosphere is merely a propaganda move designed to deceive public opinion."

He also said it is unrealistic to ask Russia to stop tests while France is free to do so.

The meaning of the Western proposal on tests in the air "is to obtain one - sided advantages," he said.

He warned that the Soviet Union "has enough strength to give a destructive blow to any aggressor."

The Soviet premier said no country in the world has suffered so much from war as Russia and therefore it realizes the importance of averting war.

SEES WAR AHEAD

"The fact, however, is that mankind is on the brink of another military tragedy. Aggressive forces want to plunge into another war."

Khrushchev said the establishment by all states of diplomatic relations with East and West Germany would contribute to peace and legalize the existence of two German states.

Admission of both into the United Nations would be another step toward peace and "would restrict West German militarists and those supporting them.

The Soviet premier said it is impossible to postpone a German settlement any longer because "the peoples will not forgive us any more postponements."

rope will be increased by 2,000. The 280-plane RCAF Air Division now numbers 8,900 and the Canadian Army 47,000 all ranks.

The navy's 42 warships will be brought up to full wartime complement by adding 4,000 officers and men.

Most of the manpower increase for the army is for national survival operations, the new term for civil defence.

The army's manpower in Canada will be increased by 8,350 and the RCAF's by 900.

New manpower ceilings for the services, with previous standings in brackets, are: Army 50,000 (49,000); RCAF 43,000 (41,000) and navy 22,000 (20,000)

The 153,000-manpower ceiling compares with the present strength of about 10,000 and a Second World War figure of a total of 45,000 men and women serving in the armed forces.

Mr. Diefenbaker said "I would not want these measures to be interpreted as being taken in contemplation of an early outbreak of war. Rather, they are insurance which the government, realizing the possibilities, must take as prudent safeguarding measures."

STAND WITH NATO

Earlier, he said: "It is hoped that these decisions will be regarded not as provocative but rather as a manifestation of Canada's intention to stand solidly with NATO partners."

Defence Minister Harkness estimated that the new defence measures would cost Canada in the current fiscal year which ends next March 31 declined to estimate the annual cost.

The $55,000,000 figure would be in addition to the $5,000,000 defence budget of $1,820,000,000.

Mr. Diefenbaker said specialts will not be formed but that existing forces will be brought up to strength. "We are abolishing the dark so far as government proposals are concerned," he said in respect to defence policy."

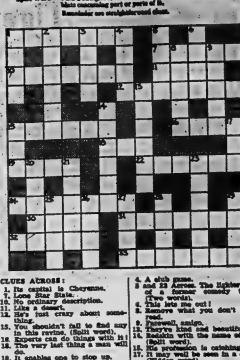
Defence Minister Harkness informed the Commons of several national survival measures, including an unspecified increase in the strength of the militia.

These measures also include faster stockpiling of food, dispersal of civilian and industrial supplies, acceleration of the civil warning system, selection of alternate sites for target area headquarters and purchase of more rescue equipment.

Newfoundland Fire Threatens More Villages

ST. JOHNS, Nfld. (CP) — Fire swept during the night to give firefighters a chance to prepare for another attack today on Marystown, the Burgeo River fire on Newfoundland's southeast coast, which threatens to force evacuation of several more communities.

Provincial headquarters said Thursday night the RCMP cutter Fort Fleck was proceeding to Monkstown on the eastern edge of the fire in case evacuation of the community of 300 families is necessary.



Two other vessels were put on alert for standby duty in the area. There was a possibility nearby Davis Cove and Prowestown would have to be evacuated, but few details were available. The 2 communities have about 500 families each.

The resources department announced that the latest calculations shows more than 2,300 square miles of woodland, larger than Prince Edward Island, have so far been ravaged by the province's worst fires.

The figure represents nearly 1,500,000 acres of forest land, or about half of it spruce needed in the manufacture of newsprint.

Maris Sparks Yankee Win With No. 55

Whip Tribe, Tigers Lose

By ED WILES
Associated Press Staff Writer

Roger Maris, an old hand at busting pitchers, the ones crashed through a wooden fence chasing a fly ball, now is within the home runs of tying Babe Ruth's 34 - year - old record of 60.

Maris hit no. 55, his second in two games, as New York Yankees crashed Cleveland Indians, 7-3 Thursday night. Only three other challengers to Ruth's supreme 60 in 1927 ever have been this close — Jimmy Foxx, Hank Greenberg and Hack Wilson.

Foxx got to 58, but no nearer, with the old Philadelphia As in 1932. Greenberg also finished 58, for Detroit in 1938. Wilson stopped at 56 with Chicago Cubs when he set the National League record in 1930.

Ruth is the only other slugger ever to hit as many as 55 in one season. He did it in 1921 when he got his 60 and also hit 59 in 1927. But in the 23 years since Greenberg's try, no one has come closer than 54 in the majors, that by Klner hit that many for Pittsburgh in 1949.

Maris, who startled Cleveland defenders with a crag beat that brought in a run his first at-bat Thursday night, still is seven games ahead of the Babe's record pace. He has 14 games in which to tie Ruth's mark within the limit of 154 team decisions set by commissioner Ford Frick.

Teammate Mickey Mantle, his total still at 51, fell two games behind Ruth's pace when he failed to connect for the second straight game. But the Mick doubled home the tie - breaking run that gave the Yanks their eighth straight victory and a run - away, six - game lead over Detroit in the American League pennant chase.

The powerful place Tigers lost their seventh in a row, 5-4 at Boston, in an afternoon game. Third place Baltimore edged within ½ games of Detroit by whipping Washington 6-3 in the only other AL game scheduled.

Pittsburgh defeated Chicago Cubs 7-5 in the lone National League game.

Maris whose solo homer came in the third inning on a 1-0 pitch by losing left-hander Dick Stigman, shrugged off his earlier sacrifice of a swing for the bunt. "I was up there to get the run in," he said. "That was my job."

At the moment, Maris also is doing the best RBI job in the majors. He regained the lead from Baltimore's Jim Gentile by driving in three for a total of 126, one more than the Orioles first baseman, while breaking out of his latest hitting slump with a 3-for-3 night.

Mantle's double put the Yanks back in the lead in a two-run sixth after the Indians had tied it in their sixth on Tito Francona's three - run, inside-the-park homer off Ralph Terry. The Yankee right - hander, now 13-2, retired the first 13 men he faced and finished with a five - hitter for his sixth straight victory over the Tribe since June of last season.

It was the Yanks' 14th in a row over Cleveland in New York and reduced their magic number to 14. Any combination of New York victories and Detroit losses totalling 14 gives the Yankees another pennant.

The Tigers, a week ago just 1½ games behind New York, blew a 3-1 lead at Boston as their ace, Frank Lary (19-9) lost on his third try for victory No. 20. An error by Norm Cash and Frank Malzone's three - run homer put the Red Sox even in the third, and Chuck Schilling's single put it away in the sixth for Bill Monbouquette (13-12).

Baltimore came from behind with five runs in the second against rookie Carl Bouldin (0-1). Milt Pappas (12-7) was the winner as the Orioles made it five in a row. Jim Piersall clubbed the Senators into the cellar with their 22nd defeat in 28 decisions and eighth in a row.

Pittsburgh beat the Cubs and Jim Brewer (1-7) with five runs in the third on five hits, a walk and four errors. Bobby Shantz (6-3) was the winner in relief.

Bans Return Bouts

NBA Gives Patterson Extension

HERSHEY, Pa. (AP) — The National Boxing Association Thursday changed its six-month rule and gave heavyweight champion Floyd Patterson another six months to defend his title.

At the close of the 42nd annual NBA convention, delegates voted unanimously to double the period in which heavyweight champions must defend their titles.

The action came just six days before Patterson's six months were up. He last defended the title March 13 against Ingemar Johansson.

Champions in all other divisions still must defend every six months.

The convention also unanimously adopted a rule banning return-bout clauses. New York, California and Massachusetts are not NBA members.

WANT COMMISSIONER

Delegates approved a motion in favor of legislation that would establish a national boxing commission.

They also elected Dr. Charles P. Larson of Peoria, Wash. president. A fight over eligibility rules for NBA officers faded in the last hours of the annual convention and Larson's election was unanimous.

A proposal that rules change whereby elected officers would have to be active boxing commissioners in their home states was withdrawn before the balloting in a harmony move.

Charles P. Mayer of Montreal and Stanley Goldberg of Laporte, Ind., withdrew from the fight. Both had been let out of their respective boxing commissions earlier this year. Mayer had been scheduled to be advanced from first vice - president to president.

Nicholas of Toronto, Ontario Athletic Commissioner, was elected third vice-president.

In Sherbrooke, Que., Gerard Berard, president of the Canadian Boxing Federation, said he is considering sponsorship of a motion to sever affiliation with the NBA. In a statement he describes the NBA's action in handing over Mayer the presidency as "an insult" to Canada.

Berard said the action is "a lesson for countries outside the United States with boxing officials who would aspire to the presidency."

The Canadian federation for many years has held a form of associate membership in the NBA. Full membership was withheld because the federation was not incorporated and did not contribute funds to the NBA.

Berard said the federation has recently applied for incorporation in Ottawa. He added that the federation raised enough money to send a cheque to the NBA June 17.

At the start of the Hershey convention, it was returned and the federation was advised Mayer would not be eligible for the presidency, said Berard.

Talks With Kramer

Laver May Turn Pro

FOREST HILLS, N.Y. (AP) — Rod Laver of Australia, overwhelming choice to win the United States national tennis championship, admitted Thursday he has talked money with professional promoter Jack Kramer.

"But," said the carrot-topped goalpost, "my plans are indefinite until after the Davis Cup challenge round. I'll definitely remain an amateur until then."

This has been Laver's year. He has only one black mark against him—a loss to cup-mate Roy Emerson in the final of the Australian championships. He has partially atoned for that by winning at Wimbledon.

Thursday he blasted his way into the quarter - final round with a 6-3, 6-4, 6-3 decision over Chris Crawford of Piedmont, Calif. His opponent today is Don Dell of Bethesda, Md., who downed John Sharpe of Edinburg, Tex., 7-9, 6-3, 6-2, 8-6.

Rafael Osuna, Mexican Davis Cupper, pulled into the quarters by upsetting Bob Mark of Australia, 6-3, 6-4, 2-6.

In the women's division, defending champion Darlene Hard of California, seeded No. 2, posted a semi-final with a 6-3, 6-1 triumph over Yola Ramirez of Mexico. Margaret Smith of Australia defeated No. 5 eliminated Christine Truman of Britain 8-10, 6-4, 6-3 to reach the semi-final.

Spotlight on Eskimos

Conference Leaders Clash In East

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The West invades the East in a weekend of Canadian Football League action that pits the Western Conference leaders against the two teams tied for first spot in the Eastern Conference.

The attack from the Prairies will highlight when Saskatchewan Roughriders, third in the Western Conference, meet the last - place Montreal Alouettes of the Big Four. The Riders move to Toronto Saturday to game against the third - place Argonauts.

But the eye - catching battles will be Saturday when Edmonton Eskimos, top in the West, meet Ottawa Rough Riders and Monday night when they visit Hamilton Tiger-Cats.

The Riders and Tiger - Cats are tied for leadership in the East with eight points.

More than 18,000 tickets have already been sold for the Monday night game — a season record — the biggest advance sale in the capital ever — and there is talk of a possible record crowd. The Riders beat the Eskimos 16-4 in last year's Grey Cup game at Vancouver.

MAY RETURN

Offensive halfback Ron Stewart, tied with three others in the eastern scoring race, is expected to return to action after a one-game layoff with an injured knee. He is considered a definite non-starter because of an injured left knee and Gerry Collins is expected to take over at centre.

The Eskimos, despite a heavy thumping when they edged Calgary Stampeders 104 Monday, are in very good condition. Quarterback Don Getty suffered a bruised back and fullback Mike Lashuk a banged-up shoulder, but both will be dressed Saturday.

The Tiger-Cats will have one drawback when they meet Montreal there Monday. It will have been a week since Hamilton played, compared to the usual two days. Coach Jim Trimble gave the Hamilton club a couple of nights off practice this week to rest after their Labor Day game against Toronto.

For the Montreal game tonight, fullback George Dixon is expected to rejoin the Alouette lineup after several games' absence with a hip injury and a pulled hamstring muscle.

Vancouver fans get their first chance Saturday night to pass judgment on the trade that brought Intrepid Columbia Lions a new quarterback in a four-for-one deal. Frank Tripucka will be on hand to see if the six-year-old pro can regain the form that made him one of the most feared passers in the league.

Joe Theil, Grant Heffernan and Jim Wilhoit each scored two goals for Hastings Thursday night. Singles went to Dave Drummond, Jack Armour and Roger Grant.

Bob Bond scored twice for the losers and singles were added by Johnny McCaleer, Norm Bignall and Barry Fendley.

Wants Pros In All-Star Classic

NEW YORK (AP) — Harry Wismer, owner of New York Titans of the American Football League Thursday suggested that the annual game between the AFL and National League.

The proceeds of such a game, said Wismer, should go towards a pension and insurance fund for football players.

"It is my opinion that the current all-star game between the NFL champions and college graduates is obsolete," he said. "It is no longer an attraction because the game has become one-sided."

Bay Filly Brings $16,000

TORONTO (CP)—A bay filly foaled and owned by Cordelia Farms, Brantford, brought the top price of $16,000 Thursday night at the Canadian Thoroughbred Horse Society begins its annual yearling sale.

The filly, by Windfields out of the mare Cosie, was purchased by J. M. Clark of Meadow Lake, Sask.

Fifty-two yearlings were sold for a total of $117,600, an average of $2,262. Another 55 will be auctioned today.

Good prices also were fetched by other Conklin stock. Dual Man out of Victory Girl, W. J. Farr of Meadow Lake, Sask., paid $4,400 for a bay filly by Slew Man out of Victory Girl, W. J. Farr of Meadow Lake, Sask., paid $4,400 for a dark bay filly by Selector out of Bobs Miss and Jerry Jacobs of Buffalo paid $7,200 for a bay filly by Better Self out of Cheery Cross.

Garden City Stables, St. Catharines, paid $2,100 a brown colt by Selector out of Bobs Miss consigned by Barney Farm, and Paul Lafiamme, St. Catharines, paid $2,000 for a dark bay Eternal Reward out of Foxy Scot.

Hastings Wins Title

BRAMPTON (CP)—Hastings Legionnaires won the Canada Junior lacrosse title Thursday night, defeating Brampton Excelsiors 10-6 in the seventh game of the final.

The Ontario Lacrosse Association men's Vancouver Norburns for the Minto Cup and the Canadian championship in a best-of-seven series starting in Port Credit Saturday.

Hastings won the first three games against Brampton, then the four-time champions came back to win the next three.

Joe Todd, Grant Heffernan and Jim Wilhoit each scored two goals for Hastings Thursday night. Singles went to Dave Drummond, Jack Armour and Roger Grant.

Bob Bond scored twice for the losers and singles were added by Johnny McCaleer, Norm Bignall and Barry Fendley.

Jets Drub Vees 9-5

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

A post-mortem to Richmond's drop from second place in last year's International League finish to a second division spot this year would have to include the ineffectiveness of the pitching staff.

The 1961 champions from Columbus will happily attest to this, after their 9-5 drubbing of Richmond Thursday night. In the only scheduled IL contest of four Richmond pitchers, none of them with winning records, were battered for 14 hits.

Starter Jim Bronstad survived a rocky first inning but tumbled under a five-run attack by Columbus in the fourth.

With the outs, the Jets knocked out five hits, including run - producing singles by Kel Saida and pitcher Tom Sisk. Reliever Duke Maas couldn't put out the fire without giving up two more runs, and this proved to be enough for an easy Columbus win.

Columbus starter Tom Sisk, in gaining his second win in three decisions, yielded 10 hits and blew a two-run lead in the third inning when Don Lock clouted a home three tallies.

Dick Gray and Larry Elliot were the big spoilers in Richmond's home park finale. Gray scored three runs and Elliot batted in three, with two doubles. Elliot's two-bagger in the ninth for two runs off Gary Blaylock, pitching in relief of Bill Short, closed the lid on the Virginians. Bronstad's loss made him 6-13 for the season.

AMERICANS FAVORED

MONTREAL (CP) — Crews from eight districts in North America start competing Monday for the Mallory Cup, emblematic of the senior North American sailing championship. Robert Masbecher of Houston, Tex., who won in 1958, and Harry (Bud) Melges of Lake Geneva, Wis., who won in 1959 and 1960, are favored. The three days of races, over six - mile courses in Lake St. Louis, will be sailed in dragon-class boats with a crew of three.

Houston Inks Richards

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP)—Paul Richards Thursday signed a three-year contract, at a reported salary of $60,000 a year, as general manager of Houston Colts, who enter the National League next year.

Richards, who resigned Friday as field manager of Baltimore Orioles of the American League, announced at a news conference the appointment of Eddie Robinson, Baltimore's field director, as one of his special assistants.

Richards said his first job will be the selection of players from the National League and Houston.

The contract frees Richards from all front office duties such as ticket sales and stadium maintenance, but said he has first man in mind who would do an admirable job as field manager of the Colts.

Discuss Racing Broadcasts

WASHINGTON (AP) — The question of Canadian and Mexican radio stations broadcasting race results into the United States came up at a hearing Thursday.

Dee W. Pincock, assistant general counsel of the Union Commonications Commission, said U.S. broadcasting treaties with Canada and Mexico do not cover radio station programming. The only treaties of this type he has are technical in nature to prevent stations operating on the same frequency from interfering with each other.

Pincock said Station CKLW Windsor and many Mexican radio stations broadcast results that can be heard in the United States.

A.F. League Opens on Weekend

DENVER (AP) — The American Football League shows off on its second season Saturday and Sunday with the repeat of an exhibition game headlining the opening schedule.

Dallas will be out for revenge in the first crack out of the box because the Texans clash with San Diego Chargers in a televised game in the Cotton Bowl Sunday afternoon. It was San Diego that downed the Texans' hopes last Sunday with a 31-10 beating.

Both aspects aren't good for the injury-riddled Texans to do any better in the league game.

Coach, the defending champion, gets the league race started Saturday night in a clash with Oakland Raiders while New York Titans visit Boston Patriots.

Juniors Will Defy Drafts

WHITBY (CP) — Two Whitby Junior B players have announced they intend to defy drafts to play in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A loop.

During the summer Ricky Gartner was drafted by Guelph Royals and George Ashley by St. Catharines Teepees. Both said they plan to continue playing in Whitby in the new Metro Junior A loop.

OHA rules say a drafted player may choose to stay with his old team but may not play with any other team in the same classification as the drafting club.

Two other Whitby players, Brian Fletcher and Roland Mackie, reported to have signed with the Junior B team in Guelph, also are balking.

All four are awaiting rulings from the OHA.

Junior Puck Loop Formed

The Eastern Ontario Junior Hockey League announced plans for expansion to seven or eight teams for the 1961 season at the league's first meeting of the season here last night.

Representatives from Belleville, Cobourg, Picton, Peterborough, Kingston, Trenton and Oshawa attended the meeting, chaired by OHA executive member Jack Dennett.

All expressed desire to play in the loop this winter. Napanee, Brownsville and Queen's University, Kingston, will be contacted in an effort to round up at least one more club.

Last year, operating under a "B" league ruling, were Kingston, Peterborough, Belleville, Picton, Cobourg and Whitby. Whitby has moved up to Junior "A" this season.

Gananoque Islanders, who went to the all-Ontario Junior "C" finals last spring, said last night that they expect a 50 per cent sure of an entry in this loop.

Oshawa, out of junior hockey last year, will enter a team if final arrangements can be made, it was declared there. The town, although populated for a Junior "B" team, received special permission from the OHA to enter Junior "C" play. Oshawa Kiwanis Club sponsored the Oshawa Generals, Memorial Cup champions in 1957.

The final boys scored two in the fourth as a result of a two-man advantage but Trenton Flyers Saggerty balled out the game-winning homer in the fifth inning.

The Flyers dropped their shovels and clipped the Hallers for a pair in the seventh on two walks and a single.

Works Claim Hallers Used A 'Ringer'

The Public Works softball team of the "City League" figures they were given the works last night.

They were nudged 3-2 by the City-Hallers — and the affair may end up in the Supreme Court of Canada.

They charge the Pencil - Pushers spanned in a "ringer".

But it was not until the ringer belted the game-winning home run that the Works decided to see their lawyers. This happened in the fifth frame.

So the game was protested in the seventh and will probably be heard by league executive today or by jury in the near future. It was not forfeited as was reported at the smoke had cleared away.

The scorekeepers and only ump pencilled last night's game score 3-3 was so low that there are reports of giving the respective hurlers a rather bad. Or else investigate their brand of breakfast food.

Focus on Health

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Topics this week: Strange incidence of death from a fearsome disease, tranquillizers for childbirth and what may be three dangerous months to be born.

CLUSTERS OF DEATH

Eight cases of deadly leukemia were found in a community of 30,000 persons in just a three-year period—and they have led researchers to suspect the disease may have been transmitted by a virus.

The eight cases represent 20 times the incidence rate of the disease in the United States.

Furthermore, all the cases were the same sort of leukemia. And the children had recently moved to the community from Chicago. All had either attended the same school or had older brothers or sisters or a friend in the school. Seven of the eight were girls, between the ages of three and 14.

Half a dozen other U.S. communities also showed similarly suspicious clusters of leukemia deaths, said a report in "Medical World News."

RELAX, MOM

Tranquillizers are helping new mothers in childbirth.

There is less vomiting, less fear, and delivery time is shorter when tranquillizers are used, says Dr. Robert H. Stewart of the University of Washington.

Delivery times for tranquilized women, having their first babies were two hours shorter, on the average than for non-tranquilized women. The tranquillizers were also useful for mothers delivering their second or later children.

DANGEROUS MONTHS?

Are the first three months of the year—January, February and March—a bad time to be born?

Some studies indicate they may be. One indicates a higher birth rate of the mentally ill during those three months than in any other three-month period. It also shows the lowest rate of mentally ill during the second trimester — April, May and June.

However, not all investigators agree. One study in fact claims that more retarded men are born in the first three-month period, fewer in the second three-month period.

ONE IN TEN

Perhaps one baby in 10 is born with some defect, slight or life-impairing.

Most common are those that involve the bones and joints. Second are defects of the heart and the circulatory system. Third is childhood.

Some 70 per cent or more die in the first year, two-thirds of those in the first four weeks of life.

'Life of Christ' Will Be Produced as Scheduled

By JAMES BACON

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—No satire on Hollywood ever hit so many comic touches as did producer - director George Stevens' recent brush with the Wall Street bankers who apparently are running 20th Century Fox.

If George will direct and Cary Grant will play the hero, (Stevens), there's a sure hit comedy.

Stevens has been at Fox for two years preparing The Greatest Story Ever Told, a Carl Sandburg scripted movie about the life of Christ. Some $2,500,000—including $1,500,000 salary to Stevens—has been expended so far on the film.

For lost $25,000,000 in production last year which explains Wall Street's part in the script.

"For some time we have been playing the game Who Is Fox?'" says Stevens. He assumed it was Spyros Skouras, still president of the company who weathered a recent, rough stockholders' meeting.

CONFIDENCE GREAT

"George Jr. and I were knocking last week with Skouras in Hollywood while the committee of Wall Street bankers were meeting in New York. Skouras expressed great confidence in our picture.

George Jr. interrupted: "In fact, Skouras bought us the amber light to go ahead."

But the Wall Streeters shared the picture. They decided in effect, that the life of Christ is not a commercial as Cleopatra with Liz Taylor.

With this move, Stevens said he knew he answer to Who Is Fox?" so he packed off to New York—taking along a legal brief he had prepared.

George said his meeting with the Wall Street crowd was against all type-casting.

They were capricious, whimsical artists—and a mystery to the businessmen. They think that the movie business is not a business and were surprised when we behaved as businessmen should.

At this, George Jr. interrupted, again:

"They didn't seem interested in figures or any of the things bankers usually are. They talked for about five minutes about how Wall Street felt about the picture and then they were trying to cast parts.

The Life of Christ, they felt, was not commercial at this time — even though they had never read our script."

George Sr. said the bankers wanted to "postpone indefinitely" the picture.

"I knew this meant forever, so I brought out my legal brief. My contract was an unique one. Fox may not have known where they were going the last two years but we knew where we were going at all times.

"One of the lawyers said my brief was the greatest law suit ever filed.'"

Result of the meeting is that Stevens now owns the movie lock, stock and barrel. Fox will get back the $2,500,000 it expended only after the picture makes a $5,000,000 profit.

Minister of Labor Brings To Cabinet Down-to-Earth Approach on All Problems

By ROBERT RICE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA (CP) — Michael Starr brings to the federal cabinet a down - to - earth approach.

As minister of labor, he looks at problems and people with the eye of the ordinary man. He tries to look at labor problems as a laboring man would—in terms of people rather than abstract entities.

"The laboring man has this to sell," he says, holding out his two big hands. "His hands, his health and his know-how."

And in the cabinet Mike Starr offers the same things—only his "know-how" is the product of years as a short-rental salesman, mayor of his hometown of Oshawa, Ont., a Rotary Club member and a community worker.

When he relaxes, he does it the way most Canadians do—in old trousers and a sport shirt, in his backyard behind the six-room house he helped build.

For Mike Starr, bigness never had any real appeal.

FRUGAL HABITS

They tell the story of him pausing at the doorstep of Government House in 1957 to butt his half-smoked cigarette and drop it in his pocket.

When he came outside again, as Canada's new labor minister, responsible to the people for 15 acts of Parliament and 15 branches of a $45,000,000-a-year department, the man in the middle of labor and management, he pulled out the butt and lit it.

"I was brought up to be frugal," he says.

Born Nov. 14, 1910, at Copper Cliff, Ont., of parents who came to Canada from the Ukraine, Mike Starr, came up the hard way.

"The basic principle in our household was good housekeeping and frugal ways of living. But on meagre pay my father always managed to pay his way. His example to us was to be honest and conscientious."

ALWAYS WORKED

He was out of school after grade IX and at work. At age 15, he was a printer's devil in the Oshawa Times; $5 a week. At another job, he framed pictures for 15 cents an hour.

When he had the chance he went back to school to earn a commercial diploma from the Oshawa Collegiate and Vocational Training Institute, taking 13 courses in one year with an average mark of 89 per cent.

From his own experience, he knows the value of education—even more so now that education and vocational training are a cornerstone of long-range government policies to meet the unemployment problem.

"For many thousands of Canadians the frontier of the future lies in the realm of expanded educational opportunities," he says.

His department, one of the smallest in terms of staff but one of the most influential in terms of working conditions and pay, plays a major role in trying to fit Canada for its future needs as an industrialized country.

NEEDS FOR SKILL

"This is the age of the skilled worker—the age of automation. In the field of technical change, our industrial operation must never be allowed to become so big, so aloof, so indifferent as to lose sight of the individual and his needs."

Behind the man in the neat grey single-breasted suit is the practical politician, a man who first took his politics on a second-hand bicycle.

"There's no better way of winning votes than getting out on a bicycle and seeing that complaints about roads are attended to," he says, recalling how he campaigned as an alderman for Oshawa.

Cycling days are behind the 50-year-old cabinet minister now. He drives a car, he leaves it in the garage at home, preferring to walk when he can in Ottawa.

He was an alderman from 1944 to 1949 when he was elected mayor of Oshawa. He won four mayoralty elections, two by acclamation, before entering the Commons in a 1952 byelection in Ontario constituency, which includes his hometown and a wide rural area around it.

EARLY RISER

A man who likes to start early, he leaver his hotel room at the 8-week bedroom—and walks the two blocks to Parliament Hill for breakfast in the Parliamentary restaurant. Walking helps keep his husky figure down to 190 pounds.

"I'm methodical," says Mr. Starr. "I enjoy office work—it's what I've done for over 24 years. I think I'm exacting but not hard on my staff. We work as a team here."

Perhaps the key to the staying power of his easy-going, friendly person is his ability to relax—even to grab a snooze in the evening on his office couch.

Away from work, he likes to read a light novel, watch a western on television, and back in Oshawa talks to people on the street and with "the boys" in the Rotary Club.

"I'm not too fussy about parties, but I enjoy them when I can meet some of my friends I don't generally see often."

SERIOUS CREED

His sums up his creed this way:

"The critical element in labor-management relations is good faith. You cannot legislate good faith if it isn't there. If it is there, you don't need legislation.

"I advocate an open-minded approach in labor-management

MINISTER WITH EXPERIENCE — Labor Minister Michael Starr brings some experience as a worker to his cabinet position. He was out of school and working at age 15 but later returned to school to earn a commercial diploma. relations.

"One thing is certain. The human element in labor can be ignored only with peril. Labor is not a commodity. Labor means men and women, bringing up families, educating children, paying taxes, supporting the community."

ATTEMPT TO MURDER DE GAULLE FAILS

Sarnia Mother, Son, 10, Found Beaten To Death

Bodies Discovered In Weeds Near Home

SARNIA (CP) — A mother of five and her eldest son were beaten to death Friday night with a blunt instrument and their bodies dumped beside a weedy footpath near their home.

Neighbors stumbled over the beaten, bloodstained pair about 2 a.m.

Dead in what police termed a double slaying are Mrs. Leroy Port Moore, 35, and her 10-year-old son Danny.

One of her daughters and a neighbor's child for whom she had been baby-sitting said she was dragged from her apartment Friday evening by an apparently drunken man and never returned.

But her husband's brother, Bert Moore, said he passed the woman fleeing home just before midnight on his way to work and saw her run. Moore thought the front window, apparently watching tele vision.

Constable Bob Currie, who lives with her three daughters in an apartment above the Moore family residence, bumped into the body of the young boy, his head in a wood pile a couple of yards away.

He was beaten at the side of a narrow footpath that runs through an area of weed and bush from the library roadway to an adjoining street. Mrs. Moore's body was in the weeds about 10 feet from the path.

Mrs. Currie was walking home with a young girl when Mrs. Moore left the apartment together.

GAVE NO ALARM

Mrs. Moore, whose husband has been in hospital for the last month with a back injury, lately sat Mrs. Currie Friday evening.

Mrs. Currie said she was unable to find Mrs. Moore when she returned home. All the Moore children except nine-year-old Danny were spending the night in a neighborhood clubhouse, were asleep in the downstairs apartment when Mrs. Currie arrived.

She was surprised, she said, because she had never known Mrs. Moore to leave young children alone.

Later she left to walk home with Mrs. Crawley.

SEE INTRUDER

The other Moore children in addition to Leroy, Jr., are Sharon, 7, Delnor, 6, and Penny, 2. Mrs. Currie's daughters were with them in the Moore apartment from early in the evening until Mrs. Currie's return early this morning.

Rosemary Moore and Linda Lee Crawley, both police of the arrival of an intruder during the evening.

They were watching television," said Linda. "There was a knock with a back injury, lately sat Mrs. Currie Friday evening.

Pair of Legs From Suit of Undies Found

PETERBOROUGH (CP) — Staff Sergeant S. W. Palmateer said Friday provincial police mobile patrols, searching the Hastings county bush for $185,000 in cash and securities stolen from a Havelock bank last week will be doubled over the weekend.

"No discourage unauthorized persons from joining in the search."

He said police have been using a helicopter to help them plan an intensified search during the weekend.

Latest clue searchers have come up with is a pair of legs from a suit of long underwear, Staff Sgt. Palmateer who is heading the search believes the legs belong to a suit of underwear worn by one of the five men arrested in a field last week-end's manhunt and charged with the bank robbery.

Police found the legs Friday near Bass lake, seven miles east of Havelock and also found an abandoned car they believe was one of the getaway cars in the holdup.

World history taught that peace was not ensured by such surrender. In fact, war might become inevitable through such action.

"Is there no choice then between the impossible alternatives of a Berlin ultimatum? There must be," Mr. Pearson said.

Mr. Pearson said it was erroneous to describe the New Democratic Party did—that the dissolution of NATO and the Warsaw Pact of Communist nations was a comparable thing. NATO had the Western states together.

Mr. Pearson appealed for a far greater effort in NATO to co-ordinate the foreign policies and planning of member nations.

He said NATO policies must be worked out in advance as much as possible instead of being left at the time to "the immediate reaction of individual members."

THE GOLDEN YEARS

Merle Stence, Bancroft, Dies After Car Crash

Merle Stence, 15, of Bancroft, was dead on arrival to the Bancroft Red Cross Hospital after his vehicle left the road at the junction of highway 109 and Cardiff Road and struck an embankment at 3.30 p.m. last evening.

Constable M. A. Baker of the Ontario Provincial Police said he apparently failed to make a sharp turn in the road and plowed into a bank on the far side.

Constable Baker said a passenger in the car at the time, Gerald Marois, age 23 of Bancroft, is in the Peterborough Civic Hospital with undetermined injuries.

The deceased is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Pomeroy Stence of Bancroft.

Hasty Pees Will Start Campaign To Get Recruits

Lt.-Col. Angus B. Duffy, commanding officer of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, has announced that campaign committees will start an extensive recruiting campaign coupled with an intensive training program is about to be launched in order to bring the unit's strength to full requirement up to full strength and preparedness.

Commencing next Monday evening at the Belleville Armouries the 1961-62 training year will open. New recruits in the form of able-bodied men of 18 years of age or over are invited to attend.

Lt.-Col. Duffy advises that there have been some changes in the local Militia organization in order to stay ahead of army requirements and to maintain the outstanding record which the Hasty Pees have sustained since 1957 of leading all other Canadian militia groups in national survival training.

Recruiting, previously handled by the headquarters company, will now be handled by a special training company organized under Captain C. W. Bishop, assisted by Capt. A. Fullerton and Lt. B. L. McChesnie. This unit will be swinging into action this coming Monday to welcome the large number of new enlistments which are expected.

Man With Money Takes a Look At Good and Bad of Retirement

BY THOMAS COLLINS

An investment broker, who has been nibbling caviar since his retirement 19 months ago, thinks it is encouraging to see the lowly business man who is nearing retirement.

Maybe he has. Brokers are more interested about life than these some people. And when they are rich, as this one is, they can take a detached view of things.

Here is what he has to say:

"A businessman who is closing up to age 65 should realize from the start that there are X number of things bad about retirement and X number of things good. Quite obviously, he should ignore naive or contrapromise the bad ones. Then go for broke on the good.

"What are the bads and the good? It depends on the individual. Some people want to depend on money beyond enough to live well on. Here is my list and I think it fits most people:

THE BAD

"1. Compulsory retirement at 65 hurts your feelings. Suddenly old men who take orders, failing old men who went to work in the mornings, youngsters who must move up — all these are lumped together as the unemployable world. At 65. And though you're the sweetest guy who ever punched the time clock you're lumped into the same pot. It hurts your feelings. That's bad.

"2. A man feels lost after retirement. Nobody pleads with the company's No. 1 Bi. Nobody fusses at him except his wife. He gets up and goes to bed on directives. There are no rules, no discipline and no corporate meeting. The man who has worked for a boss all these years it's disconcerting. That's bad.

"3. A man doesn't know what to do after he retires. He might like to run a shoe-shine stand, or fish every day, or hang around in the moonlight. He doesn't dare. Somebody back at the company might beg him for advice, keeps looking back over his shoulder at the people who used to know him and won't do anything that might make them laugh.

"4. A man doesn't know where to go when he retires. He's a geographical ignoramus. He never went anywhere except where his family took him or where business took him on vacations. Those places aren't usually the places for retirement. Nearly always there is somewhere better for a businessman's retirement than where he goes or where he remains. But he's never taken the time serious research over several years to find it. That's bad.

THE GOOD

"1. The retired businessman is free. The next day, of worrying about mergers or being squeezed or striking for a raise or fearing a cut; of meeting quotas; of tolerating the boss's whims; of trying to work with; of getting nasty notes from the auditors; of paying back taxes, lunch money, income tax on a salary, etc., etc. There are no rules. He can play golf or a business man ulcers and heart attacks. He can retire and be done with them. That's good.

"2. The average businessman lives according to the clock. His job is there. He runs himself into believing it's there. But he's stuck with it. But he wouldn't really inflict it on a psychiatrist. The day he retires he is free to go. And where he is free to go he can take, but still he's free to make a choice. That is good.

"3. A businessman is reborn — or can be — the day he retires. All the inhibitions, all the delicate matters connected with his company and his position, all the business he's broken in the nearest creek. From then on he has a guaranteed monthly wage in his pension. He is free to spit on a sidewalk, or go fishing with a beer. He's always the nearest thing to pure freedom he has ever had. That is good.

"4. The businessman in our system is an unusual fellow. He has succeeded at blagbob up to age 65 he has proved his perpetuated, the beliefs on which the country was founded. He's a living, breathing product of the capitalistic system. Not so noble as a doctor, poet, writer, music man or statesman? I think he is — or more so. And I think the country has made him what he is — when applied to the freedom that retirement gives a man might lead him to some pay dirt that most other people never find after 65. Retirement to him, more than to most, can be very good.

Premier Lesage Will Seek Capital to Expand Economy

QUEBEC (CP) — Premier Jean Lesage is leaving for Europe Wednesday to seek new capital and to stir up interest in Quebec's French Canadian business to expand its economy.

But the problem uppermost in his mind as he faces a Liberal press conference before taking off on a tour of England, Italy, Belgium and France was unemployment and reorganization of unemployment assistance services.

Mr. Lesage said he can see only two solutions — both of them effective only on a long-term basis—to perennial unemployment in Quebec. One was the establishment of manufacturing industries an dthe other to relocate his government has started in the field of electricity.

He said if unemployment in Canada remains at the present level and gives no sign of stabling he will ask Prime Minister Diefenbaker to call a federal-provincial conference to consider the possibility of joint action on a wider scale.

He said he and Ottawa but the provinces as well, have a responsibility in alleviating the present situation.

COSTS RISING

On assistance to the unemployed Mr. Lesage said the situation apparently has been getting out of hand with costs to the Quebec and federal governments rising from an initial $1,000,000 monthly to $7,000,000 monthly in July.

As a result the government has decided to turnover control of assistance to the social allowances commission and has given social welfare agencies, which handled much of the assistance, four months to revise their records.

Mr. Lesage said the government has discovered a "monstrous" situation in some regions where some persons prefer to stay away from work and collect government welfare. He said the government is quite willing to pay assistance to the genuine unemployed but cannot tolerate "laziness and luxuration."

Fleming, Hees Aboard Plane Forced to Land

GANDER, Nfld. (CP) — An RCAF Comet carrying Finance Minister Fleming and Trade Minister Hees to a Commonwealth meeting in London was forced to land here Friday after one of its four engines developed trouble.

A damaged bearing forced an engine shut down for the 1,200-mile flight from Ottawa to Gander.

The four - engined plane returned 90 minutes after takeoff. It had jettisoned most of its fuel over the water to reduce weight for landing.

A fire truck met the plane as a precaution on landing here but there were no incidents.

On board the plane, piloted by Flt. Lt. A. L. Auld, of Ottawa, were an official party of 13 and 16 officials and servicemen.

The experience obviously had little effect on the athletic Mr. Hees. He stepped out of the plane and walked to a hotel—a distance of more than two miles.

WESTERN EUROPE

regarded Khrushchev's statements on West Berlin and German questions as further evidence that he has resorted to blackmail tactics because of his loose talk friends in the neutral world.

They said his statements still offer negotiations on terms the West has already indicated are unacceptable.

Berlin reports said the East German Communist regime is faced with continuing outbreaks of opposition from its ten-pressed population but the threat of a full-scale revolt appears to have passed.

PROTEST INCIDENT

East Berlin police Friday night trained searchlights on West German commercial planes but the pilots managed to land safely despite the blinding light, West Berlin police said today.

The incident brought a protest from Ottawa to the Soviet command and received a promise from East Berlin police that the searchlights would in future be turned off when planes are landing at West Berlin's Tempelhof airfield.

The pilots said they were so blinded by the big beams that they had to make their landings by instrument.

In Washington Western efforts to open up the Berlin crisis for negotiation of a Berlin settlement were reported today to have been unsuccessful so far. U.S. officials still expressed confidence, however, that exploration through diplomatic channels, including the American Embassy in Moscow and contacts at the United Nations, will eventually lead to negotiations between Russia and the Western powers.

Stuck for a Word?

Have you ever been "stuck for a word?"

Of course you have. It is what makes one say "err" and "ahh" when one is speaking. "Err" and "ahh" are the most frequently used words in the English language.

The same thing happens to most of us when we write. For the great majority of us who write for a living, being "stuck for a word" is a common occurrence, but nonetheless frustrating by reason of its frequency.

The typewriter chatters along and then comes to a sudden halt. It has caught up with the mind. Yet how can this be? The words already typed have been carefully arranged. They make sense, as far as they go. But they do not go far enough. They desperately need a verb or a noun—or perhaps that verb or noun is already hovering in the background waiting for the adverb or adjective which alone will make its use appropriate. So many words, so carefully paraded, yet with the fate of all depending on one little word still missing. How could they have been marshalled without thought? They could not have been , comes the instant reply.

It is impossible to write, or to speak, impossible even to think, without words. So we have been taught. Yet there is a contradiction here. Can a thought be meaningless? If not how explain this meaningless array of words, all awaiting one companion to take on life? How could they have appeared on paper unless that companion had also accompanied them in the parade through the mind? That missing word has been forgotten, then? But no, a search of the mind does not reveal it lying around loose on the edge of consciousness. It is hidden somewhere deeper than that.

All this is very puzzling — or was until a few days ago when we read "Generation of Vipers" by Philip Wylie. The noted American iconoclast, in the final chapter, claims that most of what we consider thought is really feeling.

This explains the lost word. We had a feeling and one can feel without words. What we are trying to describe is that feeling and rummaging through the storehouse of our vocabulary we cannot for the moment discover that word which best conveys this feeling.

There is a sense of relief. One is not, then growing terribly-absent-minded, losing without traces those precious words between the time when they are marched out for inspection by the mind and the time when the order to reproduce them on paper is dispatched to the fingers. Nor is one forced to reject the rule that one cannot think without words — or perhaps this would be more accurately stated as without words or a mental vision of the objects or actions which these words represent.

But the sense of relief is short-lived. One grows aware of ominous implications in this discovery. If, so often, the missing word has never been thought, but its meaning merely felt, it follows that so much of our writing — and our speech and even our so-called thoughts — is not the product of our reason but of our emotions. True, these emotions may have originally produced by reasoning, but there is no guarantee for that. One becomes aware that much is suspect where one once felt safe. The missing word, once a mere annoyance, is now at least a red blinker, urging caution; better still to regard it as a stoplight, while reason surveys the sentence and decides whether it is worth while, after all, to continue that hunt for the one word which will give it meaning.

Two Wrongs?

The announcement by President Kennedy of the United States that his country would resume nuclear weapons testing is certainly an understandable reaction to the Russians' unwarranted resumption of nuclear tests.

It is also, unfortunately, regrettable.

The fact that the Russians have conducted three tests in very short order undoubtedly precipitated the American President's decision, which, we are sure, was a difficult one to make. He can hardly be condemned by world opinion for taking this course of action and it is unlikely that he will be.

We believe, however, that if the Americans had refrained from following the Russians' lead there would have been, in the long run, a greater strengthening of ties between the western and neutral nations of the world in the cause of world peace. That such solidarity as could have been achieved in this fashion would have weakened Russian influence much more considerably than the current course will is, of course, a moot point.

History has proven, however, that two wrongs do not make a right especially when it comes to armament races.

Urges Special 'Citycars'

By Alex Jardon in Imperial Oil Review

The day is not far off when traffic in a dozen large Canadian cities will cease to be a bumper standstill—at least, that great "bumper" is gone. The total length of cars, buses and trucks will shrink to only the total length of city streets.

Some planners and officials, aware of the impending chaos, have suggested banning all cars from the downtown area.

Most of the other proposed solutions are based on the idea that the fixed element—the streets and highways—should be remodelled, while the mobile element—the motor vehicles—remain unchanged.

Perhaps the answer lies in a revolutionary new concept in cars.

* * *

At no time to my knowledge has there been a conscious effort to design a car for the express purpose of easing traffic problems. Small European cars and the American compact have helped to a certain extent—as anyone who has ever parked a big car in a meter next to a baby vehicle can testify.

But the main reasons for the small European cars were probably price and economy. They won popularity in Americas through their lower prices, ease of parking, operating economy and, in some cases, sheer originality. American compacts were introduced mainly to meet European competition.

The "Cars of the Future" displayed by North American manufacturers are equally low. They have little air resistance—but they take up a lot of space, and this "traffic resistance" is the problem.

* * *

The length of the current North American models could be reduced by one-third without changing the inside dimensions, producing traffic-wise a vehicle no higher than that of small imports. But to achieve really effective results, the automobile design could split into at least two branches: general purpose, or highway cars similar to the existing types, and special high density traffic vehicles or "city cars," specifically designed for city traffic, just as a racing car is designed for pure speed or a motor scooter for pure fuel economy. A city car is like a pipe dream now, but let's become automotive designers for a moment and see if we can guess a future trend.

The citycar would be about 12 feet long, 5 feet wide and not be another midget model or bear any resemblance to the imported light-weight models, excellent as they are for their own purposes. It would be designed to be used about the same as those of any current North American sedan: permitting comfortable three-abreast seating. This could be achieved in a car not quite as wide as current models, increasing height, placing the engine under the floor, in the rear, and eliminating trunk space.

* * *

The engine could be a flat six (cylinders mounted horizontally instead of vertically or in a "V") already in use in some sports and compacts, or even a conventional six altered to permit horizontal installation.

Despite the increased height, the under-floor position of the engine and transmission would keep the centre of gravity low.

To further lower the centre of gravity, the top section of the body would be of light metal plastics reinforced with steel fibres for safety.

Steering of this model would consist of partially inverted handlebars, similar to those on the city bike without heavy baggage. Lockers for small luggage could be provided under the floor, in the space occupied by the drive shaft in conventional North American models.

The increased height and reduced length would give the citycar a short and dumpy appearance dominated by curves, no compound curves, but the sleek horizontal line of current models.

Citycar would have exactly the same smooth surge of power, would ride as exclusively and have the same solid feeling as cars nearly twice its length. Engine power would be just the neighborhood of 100 brake horsepower. Weight would be only slightly reduced. There would be no attempt to scale down the size of every component to save weight beyond what is required by sound engineering practice. Metal and glass would be of standard size, preferably in inches.

* * *

Aside from its reduced length, the citycar could incorporate other specialized features. Via a very small turning circle, rubber - faced bumpers all around, a transmission geared for city use, easily replaceable body panels, front-wheel-drive and power steering for parking.

It would also have safety features such as bent rests, hydraulically - mounted bumpers and a flexible, though rigid, safety - steering wheel.

* * *

No difficult engineering problems need be involved in the production of such a car, as it would use mostly components already on the market. The main obstacle is purely psychological—a matter of overcoming inherent resistance to radical change in styling, and convincing people that a car-to-park and car-to-handle car does not have to be somewhat cramped.

Infection In Hospitals

Financial Post

"As far as possible, children (and for that matter, adults as well) should be treated at home unless conditions there can be sent to hospital.

So says an editorial in the Journal of the Canadian Medical Association.

It is discussing the infections which patients contract while they are in hospital. Treatments they would not likely suffer had they not been hospital patients.

"Surgical infection," says the CMA Journal, "is still a problem even in the well-run modern hospital which has the courage to publish its figures."

In what the Journal presents as one of the best-run hospitals in Canada, the figures show that almost one fifth of all the children undergoing treatment for bare lip and cleft palate in 1952 developed infection in the hospital.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

When we reached the cabin that had been promised us for overnight, the guide announced a little indignantly that the woodpile contained largely of balsam.

"And balsam," he said, "hardly wants to burn at all."

It seems to hate to ignite. When it does, it makes sparks, spatters.

"But I'll fix it," said the guide, as he laid the fire in the grate. "I'll put a stick of pine in under it."

And lo and behold the stick of white pine made the fire. A stick of balsam to go to work with a will.

One of our party of three was an executive of a flourishing industry.

"By golly," he said, "that's true that is!" In an office or a plant, you've got a whole bunch of sticks that don't want to burn. But put in one person with gim-and-go to him, and he ignites the whole bundle."

DON'T JUMP TO CONCLUSIONS

Are you in love with love?

Some people think they are in love, when as a matter of fact they are simply in love with love. They pick out someone and say "I love that person." As a matter of fact they have a deep longing to love and to be loved. They are not necessarily in love with that particular person. They are in love with love.

Now all this has a certain amount of good in it, but it also has mistake and error which may involve a person in later suffering. Romance is a very beautiful thing. It is one of the most beautiful things in life, especially between the ages of fifteen and thirty. But some people are fascinated with the whole idea of being involved in romance. They must be loving somebody and having somebody love them.

But perhaps the right person has not come along yet. If you are not sure, wait and ponder. You either stay married a long time or if you seek the divorce route then you suffer and pay no end. Sometimes you do in fact it is divine. But do not be swept off your feet by it. You think you are inspired by it. Perhaps you are only fascinated. Get your mind and heart together on the issue. Don't listen to the testimony of either one alone. Match the whole situation up to the hard reality of facts.

Then you will see clearly.

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

Left parked behind the owner's premises on Front Street, a Bell Telephone truck for Seven Electric Company was reported stolen Saturday night. Sergeant Arthur Earman investigated and found that a bicycle had been damaged near the scene where the truck had been parked. The officer reported that in his estimation whoever stole the truck had headed it into parked bicycle, badly damaging the bike. Later the truck was found abandoned at Trenton.

A tourist, Mrs. Pearl Hill of Windsor, sustained a fractured knee cap, face lacerations and chest injury when the automobile which she was driving collided with the rear of a parked Martin transport two miles east of Belleville early Sunday morning. The injured woman was rushed to the General Hospital where the fracture was reduced.

Robbers gained entrance at the rear of the City Hotel and stole cash and War Savings Stamps valued at $40. The agency and stamps were taken from the hotel safe, which is located in the office at the rear of the building, police were informed, after Ben Yanover, manager of the hotel, discovered the theft Monday night.

Members of the Belleville Red Cross are most appreciative of the generous response of the public of this district to the flag day appeal in Trenton, when well over the one thousand dollar objective was reached by the lassers. The co-operation of the citizens of Belleville and surrounding district is a source of encouragement to those who are carrying out the work of the Red Cross.

History Lies As Usual

The Printed Word

Ralph Allen's new book of Canadian history once again tells of Sir William Mackenzie and Sir Donald Mann, the railway builders and "pauper knights".

These have been a few people who argue with some force that Messrs. Mackenzie and Mann were not always as pure as sinning.

The project of the Canadian Northern Railway, as originally planned, was a wheat-carrying railway from Edmonton to Port Arthur. It probably was a sound project and, if it had been left to that, it could be that Canada would not have any more of a railroad than the United States has, where the bailiff's wringer takes care of most of the trouble, or did until quite recently.

The politicians got into the Mackenzie and Mann act, with the result that the railways went bankrupt quickly and the financial burden on the country still exists. The Canadian Northern was manoeuvred into extending its line southward from Edmonton to Vancouver. The politicians encouraged the Grand Trunk in its unwisdom to establish the Grand Trunk Pacific, with a terminus at Prince Rupert. That line is still remarkable system of canals. unprofitable. Quebec politicians were anxious that Quebec get part of the action, with the result that the National Transcontinental was built from Moncton to Moncton. There also was built the Quebec Bridge, to carry the great Grand Trunk line into Moncton where they would connect with the Intercolonial. The bridge is a monument to engineering and a memorial to the more than 90 men who died in the two disasters that occurred in the course of its building. Today the Quebec Bridge carries scrub automobiles and one or two trains.

The result of all this was financial collapse for Mackenzie and Mann and for the Grand Trunk and the Grand Trunk Pacific. The politicians got off scot free, although as much responsible for the debacle as were Mackenzie and Mann. His is the case of correction not a hope that the memory of these men will be hampered for as George Bernard Shaw causes Genie-man Johnny Appleseed (later Field Marshal) to say: "History will lie as usual".

Perspiration Problem Often Lessens as Age Increases

By Dr. Joseph D. Wilson

"Dear Dr. Mister: This problem to me is one for sure. Myself did you who perspires very freely? His shirts are stained and smelly and he is seemingly unconscious of this. He is a happy and well-behaved boy. R. T."

First: The degree of perspiration varies considerably from person to person.

Second: Heavy perspiration of this sort is more common in individuals who are apt to be self-conscious, apprehensive, or timid.

Third: Adolescence, with its nervousness and sensitiveness, may have something to do with all of this which is reasonable.

Fourth: Suggest shaving the area under the arms, and applying any of the anti-perspirant sprays or sticks or lotions (it is not necessary to buy the very good). These are on the market in profusion. Why? Simply because so many people have this same problem. I hope that you gather from the letter that he's not suffering alone. He has lots of company.

Fifth: Frequent baking soda douched on the area may help to dry it up. Use enough but doesn't get the idea that there's any simple, complete, and effective solution to this problem. If he'll be content to keep it under control, instead of those cramps, but very gradually. Third, several of the matters mentioned will do quite a lot to relieve them cramps, so I suggest that you read over, carefully. "I keep having cramps at that time of the month, so will you please tell me what I can do?" Mildest says that. It's possible to relieve them."

World's Happiest People

National Geographic Magazine

Even remote Hunza is contributing its own population explosion.

The hardy mountain people live so long they are beginning to crowd their mysterious little state high on the roof of the world. Hunzas themselves put 90 and retain their vigor well into old age.

The 6,000-square-mile region's 85 miles over treacherous mountain trails by a day to degree. A message, for example, said that it he hadn't been pressed for time, he would have ridden a horse.

Hunza is tucked between Pakistan, Chinese Turkestan, and Afghanistan. It is surrounded in internal affairs, though under the protection of Pakistan.

Locked in by 30,000-foot peaks of the Karakoram Range, the Hunza River Valley is seldom more than a mile wide. Thus the space in which to live and grow is limited.

* * *

In the past, people of Hunza have so lived in idyllic, almost tranquil homeland that few left unless they were banished or criminals. Their primary occupation has grown from 7,000 to 23,000 in the past half century. Over crowding is forcing Hunzakuts to find new lives in the world around. A few struggle down into Pakistan each year.

The remaining Hunzakuts use their meager land well. They terrace the slopes and irrigate with glacial water through an unprofitable system of canals. The mountaineers long have prized fruit trees, related crops, and plowed in contours.

The farmers grow barley, potatoes, carrots, turnips, apricots and wheat, but the staples of the Hunza diet are apricots, grapes, apples and walnuts. The trees on which these grow are given or willed separately from the land they stand on. A Hunza girl hesitates to marry a man who knows where apricots won't grow.

Hunzakuts who become engaged during the year are all married on the same day. On a Thursday in mid-December, known as Marriage Thursday, all diners, couples of each village gather for a big ceremony.

* * *

Everyone in Hunza knows on March 31 whether the first second floor of his simple, square house. Even the blind, deaf, and senile know. A family weathers the blizzards of late winter together, and when it emerges in April another child is added to one window and is sadly hushed. Spring and summer are spent in one occupation or another, with every overlooking valley and mountain. Hunzakuts say they are at home with no roof than one with no view."

The Hunzas have no written history, but legend relates that they are descended from soldiers of Alexander the Great who took Persian wives and settled in the valley 2,000 years ago.

In the old days, Hunzakuts were poor warriors. Even the Chinese empire, at the height of its power, paid tribute to Hunza power, paid tribute to Hunza power, but Mir of Hunza from raiding Kashgar and Yarkand in Chinese Turkestan.

Today the Hunzakuts live in peace. The Mir, Mohammed Jamal Khan, says: "Our lives are simple but pleasant. We have few laws, almost no taxes, and no police. No one is rich, but neither is anyone in need. We live in the world's happiest people."

A Lift for Living

The Ingredients of Greatness

By DR. RALPH W. SOCKMAN

Are we as interested in greatness as our grandfathers were? To be sure, we have a keen interest in prominent personalities. Our reading matter reveals that. Fill a book with personal success stories and it will outsell many times a thoughtful book dealing with ideas. The public eagerly devours news about the follies and weaknesses of well-known figures.

A notorious criminal sentenced to serve a lifetime in prison, wrote to a life-sentence friend, asking his friend to be sure to send him any stories which mentioned him. None of the stories would enlist him for meritorious achievements. They would have to refer to a vicious, lawless career. No matter what the stories contained, this convicted robber and rapist wanted to read about himself.

Headlines do not make greatness. Henry Van Dyke once said that "Fame is to nobirsby what solemn music is to a tood noise." In this publicity-proud age and spotlight seeking age, it behooves us to consider what true greatness is. (No wonder editors have over-sized waste-baskets.)

Some years ago Van Dyke unveiled the bust of Whittier in our National Hall of Fame for Great Americans. On that occasion Van Dyke gave the definition: "Fame is durable good renown, earned by service, approved by the wise, and applauded by the common voice." IT'S NOT GREATNESS

A public relations expert once said to me that some men in his profession held that it was good publicity just to have the person or product talked about, regardless of whether the comment was favorable or unfavorable. He himself did not agree. Nor do I. Just to be talked about is not fame and it certainly does not constitute greatness.

Some time ago a magazine compiled a list of fifty persins whom it regarded as the "immortals" of the first half of the twentieth century. The list was brought to me as the Director of America's Hall of Fame with the request that I write a few introductory paragraphs. In the group I noted the name of Al Capone. And I said that I could not lend my endorsement to any list of so-called "immortals" which contained the name of Al Capone. "Why not?" said the reporter. "Al Capone will be talked about 50 decades to come. Nero wasn't good, the Borgias weren't good, but they are still talked about. That is fame." No, merely to be talked about is not fame. Fame is good reputation.

And to be truly great the fame must be durable. For that reason America's Hall of Fame requires that no person is eligible for its colonnade until twenty-five years after his or her death. Did the person work for the prizes of the moment or for values that last?

The second phrase in Van Dyke's definition of greatness is "earned by service." In earning social standing people are sometimes rated by the number who serve them, but greatness is rated by the number they served.

Every person who seeks public office must at least pretend that his motive is to serve the public. And the basic difference between a statesman and a politician is that the former does serve the people.

The worldly way is to seek money and material things by the mastering of men. Christ's way is to be great by the mastering of money, and things for the making of men.

TRICKS OF TRADE

Go on to the next mark of greatness — "approved by the wise." There are tricks in every trade. And cheap talent may dazzle when it first flashes on the public. But the test of worth in every realm is the approval of those who know.

Doctors measure their colleagues not by the spare bench-lenses of their practice but by their contribution to their profession. Lawyers do not hond a fellow lawyer with the accolade, "dean of the bar," because he cleverly wins his cases, but because he confers distinction on the practice of law. Ministers do not measure the greatness of preachers merely by the crowds they draw but by the messages they give and the causes they serve.

Now recall Van Dyke's last test of true greatness — "applauded by the common voice." Prophets and pioneers are not usually popular at first. Golle the apostle: "The Best Man who ever lived went to the cross with the crowd clamoring for His death." That is the faith on which rests this "government of the people, by the people, for the people." That is the faith on which Christ staked His hope.

But give the people time and their sense of values can be trusted to recognize greatness.

STORIES of FAMOUS HYMNS

By HORACE B. POWELL

"Throw Out The Life-Line"

"Throw out the Life-line;

Throw out the Life-line;
Someone is drifting away;

Throw out the Life-line;

Throw out the Lifaline;
Someone is sinking today"

Almost any night, in gospel missions across the world, one is apt to hear the chapel rafters echoing with this grand old soul-winning hymn. It was written in 1880 by the Rev. Edward S. Ufford, a Baptist minister.

Mr. Ufford, who lived on the Massachusetts coast, went one day to visit the life-saving station at Point Allerton, on Nantasket Beach. While he was there the station crew went through a rescue practice and some of the men told the patter-poet about a recent shipwreck near the beach in which the life-saving apparatus had been used to bring many passengers to shore and safety.

Mr. Ufford was fascinated by the drill and by the rescue story. As he heard the command given again and again to "throw out the life-line" and watched it line go out to imaginery victims in a storm-tossed sea, he thought of how men and women, buffeted about on the sea of life, need the saving message of the great Life-Saver. He went home to write the hymn which, through the years, has proved a life-line to Christ for thousands of drifting souls.

During the ceremony traditional wedding music was played by the church organist Mrs. G. H. Rennie including repeats of Lohengrin's "Wedding March", "O Perfect Love", and "Ave Maria" by Schubert during the signing of the register.

The bride given in marriage by Mr. Arthur M. Merritt of Bancroft, was lovely in a bridal gown of white silk organza sheer, over taffeta, accented by a circular neckline outlined with appliqued lace and having long fitted sleeves. The full skirt flowed to a semi-chapel train and was shirred with lace and taffeta edged with lace applique. Her headdress was a tiara adorned with seed pearls which held in place her finger-tip veil. She carried a bouquet of white carnations and white feathered carnations with variegated ivy.

The matron of honor was Mrs. Wayne Coe, Belleville, sister of the bride, gowned in white lace over taffeta with mauve cummerbund and mauve picture hat and sheer. She carried a bouquet of mauve gladioli. Mrs. James Kierstead of Kingston, sister of the bridegroom was bridesmaid, wearing white lace over taffeta, accented by a cummerbund and pink picture hat with matching shoes. She carried a bouquet of pink gladioli.

The little flowergirl Miss Shirley Ann Coe of the bride was a pretty picture in pink silk organ dress and carried a basket of baby 'mums and tiny pink Sweetheart roses.

Mr. Ted McGovern of Toronto was groomsman, while Mr. Wayne Coe, Belleville, brother in law of the bride was usher.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at Club Canada, Belleville where the bridal table was prettily appointed in white damask, centred by a three-tier wedding cake, topped with a cluster of Sweetheart roses and baby 'mums with misty tulle about the base. The bridal bouquet was placed in front of the cake added to a pretty nuptial setting.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Henri VanGyzen are pictured following their recent marriage in the Chapel of 6 R.D. Trenton. The bride is the former Sharon Ann Davies, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. E. Davies, Belleville. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. H. VanGyzen, Wellington.

VANGYZEN — DAVIES

Pink and white gladioli decorated the Chapel of 6 R.D., Trenton, for the marriage on August 19, 1961, of Sharon Ann Louise Davies, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. E. Davies, 113 Hunswood Drive, Belleville and Robert Henry, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. VanGyzen, Wellington. Flight Lieut. Padre R. Blair officiated at the evening ceremony.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was gowned in white nylon with embroidered bodice and panel down the back of the skirt, round neckline and short sleeves. Her veil was held by white flowers and she carried a prayer book with pink baby roses and Stephanotis-valley.

Miss Ann LaGrave, 29 B. Lawrence Drive, Trenton, bridesmaid, was wearing a turquoise dress with sequined top and jacket. She wore a circular veil held by white flowers. She carried a crescent shaped bouquet of white flowers with centre tinted to match her dress.

John VanVaals, Ontario Street, Trenton, was groomsman and ushers were Ronald VanGyzen, Wellington, and Donald Davies, Belleville.

The reception was held at the home of the bride's parents. The bride's mother wore a beige sheath with jacket, green hat and gloves and corsage of pink rosebuds. The bridegroom's mother chose a blue linen flowered nylon dress with matching hat and gloves and corsage of pink carnations.

Mr., Mrs. W. R. McCreary Happily Wed 50 Years

Well known residents of Belleville's East Hill area, Mr. and Mrs. W. R. McCreary, 122 Bridge Street, East, celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary on Wednesday when they were "at home" to approximately 100 guests.

Last Sunday at the Lakeshore Hotel a family dinner was held in honor of the occasion. Present were Mr. and Mrs. McCreary, their four children, and eight grandchildren.

A well known figure in the Bay of Quinte district cheese business for close to half a century, Mr. McCreary was born here. Mrs. McCreary is the former Ethel Mather, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. James Mather.

With the exception of three years in Montreal following their marriage the couple have lived in Belleville all their lives. They are members of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church.

Mr. McCreary has been in the cheese business since 1914 and at one time made regular trips to nine district cheese boards to purchase cheese.

TRANSPORTING CHEESE

Two decades ago, he instituted transport of cheese to Montreal by water and his package freighter the old Citm Allan was a familiar sight on its weekly trips in an out of the local port.

Following the war he purchased a larger all steel freighter built for the Chinese coastal trade. As the "City of Belleville" the new boat was used on the Montreal run until it was sold a number of years ago for service along the British Columbia coast.

As president of the Canada Transport Ltd. Mr. McCreary is still active in the business which he built up. The firm now owns a fleet of about ten transports and has a cheese warehouse and storage on Pinnacle Street. All three sons are in the business as is the family business.

Mr. McCreary formerly took an active interest in municipal affairs and is an ex-member of the Belleville Board of Education and also ex-member of city council.

He is proud of his 30-year jewell as a member of the Eureka Masonic Lodge which he received this year.

Anniversary congratulations were received from Prime Minister John Diefenbaker, from Provincial Secretary Irvine Yaremko, and from the federal members for South Hastings Lee H. Grills. Dozens of cards and other congratulatory messages, as well as flowers and anniversary gifts were also received.

All three sons William, Allan and Harry McCreary live in Belleville; while their daughter Edra is secretary of Canada Transport Ltd.

Many Honor Pastor, Family On Departure

TWEED — The Rev. Keith Sprackett, pastor of Tweed Pentecostal Church for the past two and half years, conducted his farewell service on Sunday evening with a large congregation in attendance.

His Mrs. Sprackett and their two children left early on Monday morning for their new pastorate in the Pentecostal Tabernacle in Orangeville.

Since coming to Tweed the Sprackett family have earned the respect and friendship of the community and their departure is greatly regretted, not only by the congregation but everyone who has made their acquaintance.

Mr. Sprackett is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ross Sprackett of Timmy and a grandson of Mr. James Sprackett, ex-warden of Hastings County and reeve of Tudor and Cashel for more than 30 years. After graduating from Bible College, six years ago, he was engaged in evangelistic preaching throughout the United States and Canada, until his appointment to Tweed.

His wife is the former Jean Faulkner, of Belleville.

On the evening of August 25th the members of the congregation gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Leake, 24 Tweed, to honor Mr. and Mrs. Sprackett and their two daughters and they were presented with several lovely gifts.

At the Saturday morning service, Mr. Sprackett was presented with a beautiful Bible by the members of the congregation.

Mr. Sprackett has yet been named to the Tweed pastorate.

Woman Enjoys Driving in Sulky Races

CALGARY (CP) — Owner, driver, trainer, groom and "stable boy" Mrs. Monrief prefers the role of the harness race sulky driver to that of the spectator—it's less nerve-racking.

Here during the summer circuit of the trotters and pacers in Western Canada, Miss Morrisey usually can get all keyed up when I'm looking on. I feel much better when I've got the reins myself."

She left her farm in Bellingham, Wash., in June and has been on the road all summer. She raced in meet at Ladner, B.C. before coming to the Calgary meet.

As a full-fledged driver, in 1958 she travelled the circuit from Reg Meadows, Calif., to Santa Anita to Richelieu Park in Montreal.

Apart from driving, she trucks her two standard-breds from meet to meet, grooms, feeds and waters them and cleans their equipment.

While she's on the road, Miss Morrisey's sister stays at the farm and looks after her other horses—a stallion, mare and one-year-old stallion in foal. The 30-year-old stallion is the first horse Miss Morrisey rove in a race.

Few women take up racehorse driving, but Miss Morrisey says: "I'm more nervous driving a truck on the Los Angeles freeway. I wouldn't say I'm a dangerous sport . . . I sometimes scarres the life out of a woman."

For her, there's a special touch of excitement.

"It's that rush for the first turn. . . ."

Delicious refreshments served by the ladies, rounded out the evening.

When Youth Replies 'I Can'

By ALMA MASON

Someone has said that the only difference between a difficulty and an impossibility is that one takes a bit longer to accomplish.

Emerson said, "So high a grandeur to our dust; so near is God to man; when duty whispers low 'Thou must' the youth replies 'I can'."

Jesus said, "With God all things are possible." Determined endeavour liberally sprinkled with courage and faith in God will move mountains.

When children in a home said "I'm afraid" or "I can't" the father used to remind them of an old fable story. He used to tell them of an immense cylinder which hung from the roof of a large room in a scientific institution. Dangling at the end of a string in front of the cylinder was a tiny cork. The cork weighed one ounce. On the interest of science a man reputedly threw the cork against the cylinder. To the amazement of many people the cylinder, afterhall an hour the cylinder would tremble and finally swing back and forth. The feebis but persistant blows of the cork accomplished what seemed an impossibility.

It is so easy to cultivate a negative or haphazard attitude to personal progress. Perhaps humans can be divided into two classes; The one class possess a latent desire to do something worth while; to function in a bright and dazzling manner to endeavor, yet doubt and hesitate and delay. Their lives run out without soaring to the heights of accomplishment they would well scale. These are the folk with a "Yes - but" attitude.

In the other class one finds people who' vision a goal, have definite objective and strive with bone and brawn and sinew to attain it. Hindrances and handicaps only spur them on to greater efforts. These are the folk with the "Yes - I can" attitude.

Where does one receive the motivation and the faith and the extra push that projects one into the class who shout "Yes - I can" policy? Usually this attitude is developed early in life. It must commence springs from home and gallant and concerned soldiers called "Mom and Dad".

Mary Lyon worked in her brother's home for nine years before Mount Holyoke Seminary, Massachusetts, was founded. She herself was its principal until her death.

I'm sure one would say that a baby who became deaf, dumb and blind at nineteen months of age would never become a writer and lecturer; yet, Haine Keller, whom scarlet fever deprived of sight, hearing and speech at that age, achieved remarkable knowledge and wide-deserved fame in both these pursuits.

A famous woman doctor said she owed her success to the example her mother had set her. She said, "Her face mounted and conquered a difficulty and blank life. Her ever ready courage was subjected to a ruthless economic pressure and to dreadful grief and disaster. She was dauntless and unafraid. I often asked myself about the source of her unfailing courage and her unfailing optimism. She said, 'When you just have to do things and face up to distressing situations you don't have to think about the needed courage to do them. You disregard the fear. What discouraged me the ones who have a chance to stop and think about things are how they are feeling. When something has to be done and there is no alternative to do it can you call on God for help and obtain your answer?"

No wonder the great surgeon called the pranks of removing. How could she not feel at one with such a philosophy forever ringing in her ears?

A world renowned scientists said, "I believe that any seemingly impossible project can be accomplished by the exercise of boundless faith, mustard seed faith and prayer, mental interest and ceaseless work".

No more wonderful bequeaties faith and prayer were placed garment in the children of this great family. Mental interest seemed a necessary factor to spur him on into the halls of fame.

As the small cork in the laboratory story moved the giant cylinder, faith and noble continued effort will move mountains. Faith will bless and strengthen effort will turn a doubtful and shadowed soul into one surging with power and obedient purpose.

Do you need courage for the task,
You who in slothful sun now bask,
Does your weak heart need Faith's blessing
Your shrinking body gallant food?

Hark to the whisper of the grass,
Who toil beyond the sunset gate;
Who scoff at weak and wayward man;
Who bravely, blithely say
"I can."

He who now stands on heights of fame,
A lonely, bitter highway trod,
But grew his roots in home and God
To gain the irksome path he trod,
"I can."

Readers' Saturday Column

As conducted by Mary Moore

QUESTION:

I would like to offer this suggestion to the lady who wrote to ask for a dessert for her 40-person barbecue. In the United States this is pommonly known as a "Hershey sandwich" — chiefly because one generally uses a Hershey bar. Any plain, milk chocolate bar will do. Each person makes his own sandwich: simply put a small square of chocolate on a graham wafer; toast a marshmallow and place it hot on the chocolate; top this with another graham wafer and press gently together. This is very tasty, albeit rich. There is a restaurant in Seattle, Washington that specializes in what they call a "French Dip Sandwich". This is thinly sliced, rare roast beef in a small, individual French loaf and one dips this into a sauce. Have you a recipe for this sauce? When I tasted it it seemed chiefly made with bouillon and red wine. Absolutely delicious and an excellent application for left over roast beef. I would like to thank you for offering a consistently interesting and most helpful column. Mrs. W. F. G.

ANSWER:

Thank you. The following may be the sauce you are seeking:

WINE SAUCE (for pork chops or leftover beef):

½ cup dry white or red wine, 1 onion, chopped, 1 small carrot, chopped, ½ cup chopped celery, garlic clove, minced, 2 tablespoons butter, ¼ cup flour, 1¼ cups beef bouillon, 2 tablespoons chopped parsley, 1 bay leaf, crumbled, 6 peppercorns.

Saute onion, carrot, celery and garlic in butter for 10 minutes. Add flour and cook, stirring constantly until brown. Add bouillon and stir until thickened. Add wine and remaining ingredients, cover and simmer for 1 hour. Strain.

QUESTION:

. . . We have a flowering crab tree and it is loaded with fruit. Can the fruit be used for jelly and if so, how? — Hattie.

ANSWER:

Yes, the fruit of the flowering crab is edible.

CRAB APPLE JELLY:

Wash, stem and cut crab-apples into quarters. Just cover with cold water. Boil until fruit is soft and mushy, crushing if desired with potato masher. Pour into moistened jelly bag and allow to drain until dripping stops. Do not squeeze bag. Measure jelly. Do not make up more than 3 cups at one time. Boil juice 3 minutes. Test for pectin. (See Thursday, September 7th under Grape Jelly). Add slowly 1 cup sugar for each cup of juice. Boil briskly uncovered until when dipped up with metal spoon it runs off in a sheeted stream but separates into two distinct lines of drops which finally flow or "sheet" together, the jelly stage has been reached. Immediately remove from the heat. Let hot juice stand in kettle for about 1 minute and remove last bit of scum. Pour into hot sterilized jelly glasses leaving at least ¼" space at top. Let stand until partially set, then pour a thin layer of hot, melted paraffin to completely cover the jelly and leave until hardened. Then add a second layer of melted wax, rotating the jar so that it will adhere to the glass to form a close seal. Cover and store in a cool, dry place.

Going Places

By Shirley and Bob Sleane

Paris — Everyone, it seems, has the idea that to enjoy Paris he must discover the "real" Paris.

This, we gather, is some kind of fourth dimension world occupied almost exclusively by Ernest Hemingway characters, Charles de Gaulle, the Baroness de Rothschild, Yves Montand and Givenchy. Only the recognoscenti — the finders of quaint bistros, secret salons and places that are whispered about — may enter it.

In the face of such notions, it is sometimes difficult to explain that few cities of the world are as wide open to the visitor as Paris — including most of the places that are just whispered about.

New York has its restaurants where you may not even get in unless you're a celebrity, and London has developed a sub rosa world of private clubs and hidden shops. Even staid Rome has become notorious for its La Dolce Vita high society that moves as unnoticed as possible through private haunts of its own.

CLOSE TO SURFACE

But in gregarious Paris, the world's most beautiful and civilized city, it's all close to the surface. Whatever you'd like to do or see is readily discoverable and probably done by the Parisians.

There is, for example, nothing terribly mysterious about attending a salon showing of a couturier. The great names of the fashion world are not averse to selling their garments to tourists or to anyone else. An introduction to a salon is technically necessary, but travel agents can usually arrange one or more. If not, hotel concierges are managers can.

The last thing the world's greatest restaurants want is to remain secrets. One of the joys of dining in Paris is that even the most renowned places are moderately priced. By North American big-city standards and they house tourists as graciously as they do their regular clientele.

Two of the most famous and supposedly exclusive are Maxim's and Tour d'Argent — the "21" and Four Seasons of Paris, the places to see and be seen. Outlanders are write treated with disdain, the service is always solicious and impeccable, the food specialities (sole Albert, pressed duck) indescribable and only the extravagant need spend more than $70 a person for dinner, including cocktail, wine and service.

The out-of-the-way bistros that many consider the gourmet soul of Paris are rarely so out of the way that you couldn't discover a few yourself. It isn't always as easy as walking down the street and picking one out, though that often works. But just as often you might find the equivalent of one of our diners or luncheonettes. Hotel concierges (a concierge is a glorified bell captain) keep lists, of all the city's recommended eating places, including the smallest, and guide you according to your taste of the moment.

A bistro, in case you didn't know, is not a dive. It's traditionbound and usually family-operated restaurant with a limited menu. But the specialties have been cultivated to a zenith of culinary art refined over a few generations. They may or may not have what we call a top sphere, but they always have personalities of their own and much that makes conversation for years to come.

THE FAMILY COUNCIL

Rachel C. — I tell my sister not to encourage guy's dancing attentions.

Carla T. — Guy's an artist through and through. They cannot help styling!

• • •

Rachel C. — My sister and her husband don't see anything to be worried about although their 10-year-old son likes to wear his older sister's dresses, his mother's shoes and hats and make believe he's a female. We live nearby and I think when he comes to visit carrying a doll!

I know there's danger in this, but I haven't been able to put my finger on exactly what it is to convince Carla in time. She's sure he won't be homosexual. She insists that all great artists are normal men who have a feminine appreciation for beauty. This is her way of encouraging Guy to become a great artist.

• • •

Carla T. — I don't see anything wrong with Guy's enjoyment of dress-up games or his primping and preening in my high heels and lipstick. He must must every boy be a rootin'-tootin' cowboy? Lord Byron wasn't. Frank Lloyd Wright wasn't nor was Nijinsky.

Guy's a healthy, normal kid there are no complaints from his teachers. It just happens that he excels in artistic fields and not in athletics, even though he's fast enough at baseball and swimming.

My husband and I know that he is afraid of. But she needn't worry. Guy knows he's a boy and he'll grow up to be a talented man, sensitive to beauty.

As for entertainment, Paris has as many clip joints as any big city. But if you're a frequent them, the trick is to nurse a single drink for an hour. Any thing — the standard minimum — and if they try to bring you another, politely but firmly say through — and they will — just cancel it.

But Paris' best and most honestly priced entertainment is found at its most famous showplaces, the Lido night club and the Folies Bergere. At the Lido, only the moderate price of a good dinner, you can enjoy the world's most spectacular floor show, a dazzling extravaganza of color, music, costumes and inoffensive nudity that runs through ice skating, water ballet, football and comedy for no less than five hours. The clip joints pale by comparison.

The Folies Bergere is a less expensive version of the same thing. Many visitors are disappointed in it after the Lido, but most have to try it once.

In a city that is the world headquarters of civilized woman, shops are the easiest of all pleasures to find. Hairdressers, jewellers, milliners, art and antiquities stand cheek to jowl on what seems like mile after mile of shopping streets. All you need is a stout pair of walking shoes plus a natural born sense of bargain. Your woman hasn't got it?

Walking is perhaps the most subtle pleasure of Paris. A stroll along the quais, the banks of the Seine, the walks of the Bois de Boulogne, the sun-and-shade dappled boulevards, the bitter of the Marche aux Puces (Flea market) and the clatter of Les Halles (the produce market) or the honky-tonk of Place Pigalle lends them an intimacy and reality that no sightseeing bus can.

It doesn't take long to feel what everyone eventually feels that just to be in Paris is enough.

MAIL CALL

Question — Recently some friend brought us a bottle of red wine when they came to dinner. I already has some on white wine clothing, so I put their bottle away. Later, my husband said I should have opened the gift wine, since it obviously was intended for that purpose, and that I pulled a boner. Did I? — M. O., New York City.

Answer — It wasn't a big blunder, so it wouldn't fret over it. If the wine was a type that didn't go with the meat course, then it wasn't necessary to uncork it. If it was, it probably would have been more diplomatic to serve it and hold the other in reserve.

ask henry

The writer of this weekly advice column is an 11-year-old boy. The advice he gives is strictly his own. It has not been changed by his parents or the editor. He welcomes letters from parents. If you want him to discuss your problem write to ASK HENRY in care of this newspaper.

Dear Henry:

I have noticed that most of the children your age do not help their parents with household and garden chores the way we did when we were young, and my grown sons did when they were kids. Why is this so? Do you think your generation would be happier and better off if they shared home responsibilities?

WORRIED GRANDMA

Dear Worried Grandma:

Sorry it took so long to answer your letter but I had a few responsibilities to carry out first. A few responsibilities make a kid feel one of the family. With two many of them the kid might not want to be in the family.

A little more praising and a little less nagging would make it much easier for parents to handle the mischievous adults.

HENRY.

Dear Henry:

You are certainly hearing and reading about the many problems our world is facing today. You probably know how difficult it is to find a solution so that people can live happily without worrying that tomorrow they may be turned to ashes. Tell me Henry, does this depressing situation affect you kids?

INQUIRING.

Dear Inquiring:

Children are happy, they don't worry about the situation. Their biggest problem is how to get home free in a game of "hide and seek" or how to make good marks at school. Their biggest worry is that the television could break down one day. Only the more mature kids have mixed feelings and worry about a war.

HENRY.

Dear Henry:

I have this six-year-old cousin and he is always getting me in trouble by starting a fuss. How can I keep from fussing with him?

CAROLYN.

Dear Carolyn:

HENRY.

Be deaf, dumb and blind to him.

Dear Henry:

I have four children, oldest 16 and youngest 16 years. The youngest is a great starter of things and appears ambitious, but he is a poor finisher. He failed his first year high school so he may fail again. The teachers tell me he is quite bright and he even led his class last year in typing. What should I do?

FRUSTRATED.

Dear Frustrated:

Most bright boys get tired of doing one thing too much. The only solution is a lot of encouragement, no matter what. Your boy slows down when you slow down in giving praise. Turn down the accelerator and give him more gas.

Dear Henry:

I am 13 and have three sisters. The two oldest and myself have to take turns in looking after my little brother. Every time I want to go somewhere it is my turn to baby sit. Could you tell me how I could get out of baby sitting? I have tried to pay one of my sisters or trading with them.

BABY SITTER.

Dear Baby Sitter:

You can't get out of it so you better baby sit or your father will make it so that you won't be able to "sit" at all.

HENRY.

Your Car

Steering Easily Affected by Many Things

By EUGENE B. MILMOE

Does your car steer easily on turns and curves, tend to straighten itself out when a turn is completed and hold a true course on a level straight-away?

Many things affect steering. Two of the most common conditions, misalignment and unbalance wheels, can bring on a variety of troubles — hard steering, wandering, pull to one side, shimmy or wheel shock. If these do not cancel about the pressure — especially too little or uneven inflation — don't expect steering to be as safe and sure as it should be.

Worn, grease-starved or poorly adjusted front wheel bearings rate a good share of the trouble. Even faulty springs and shocks will cause steering troubles. If worse, you can't write off the steering gear and system, itself. Wear, lubrication and adjustment are the picture here, also. But, generally, the more likely culprits are those first mentioned.

H. W. asks: "Can a 6-volt light bulb be installed in a car which has a 12-volt electrical system?"

(A) It can — but it will burn right out.

G. G. writes: "I once read that it is possible to get better gas mileage by blowing the carburetor air cleaner. Is it?"

(A) Whoever wrote this must have been a car salesman or an engine modifier. The only part which would be constantly rushing in through the carburetor would ruin the engine just as surely as if you had poured a few buckets of sand.

Pro m.R.D.: "A car whose front wheels keep blowing parked in front of my house. The owner reached under the hood, grabbed a plastic engine sector on the wire leading to the horn and it stopped. I don't have anything like that on my horn wire and wonder if you do?"

(A) You can buy one. It's a line switch which is easily installed in the wire. If a short or other trouble causes the horn to continue blowing, pressing this switch to off position will stop it.

W. J. writes: "After riding a while my engine gets too hot. Sometimes it will and occasionally backfires into the carburetor. If I stop, I usually can't get it started again for 10 or 20 minutes — just like vapor lock."

(A) This is a good description of the headaches which follow overheated heat valve sticks so that exhaust heat is continually bypassed to the intake manifold.

Will Not Hide Radioactive Danger Here

TORONTO (CP)—Health Minister Dymond said Thursday night "the truth of any danger" from radioactive fallout in the province will not be hidden from the public.

"We are watching closely, especially since the resumption of nuclear tests," Dr. Dymond said.

Ontario's new radiation protection laboratory, opened here two months ago, will keep track of fallout samples from 22 stations.

Daily readings are under way but the laboratory reports no appreciable increase in the radiation count. Any increase in atmospheric radiation from nuclear tests is not expected to show up for about two weeks.

Successful Living

By Doris Clark

(A Canadian Social Worker Helps with Human Problems)

Too Old at 37?

DORIS CLARK

DEAR DORIS:—Referring to your reply to John Senior in today's paper with regard to his son and university, I have a problem which has changed my mind about higher education.

My son-in-law, like the boy in your article, was offered a position with good promotion possibilities upon his graduating from grade 12, but acting on his mother's advice he went on to a B.A. and a teacher's diploma. He taught high school for 12 years but unfortunately had to leave the profession owing to ill health.

He has now fully recovered and has been trying for over a year to work in any capacity other than teaching, as the doctor advised. He has a wife and four children to support, but every employer and firm he has visited have the same objection. I.e., "too old at 37".

How about this for higher education?—An ANXIOUS MOTHER-IN-LAW.

DEAR ANXIOUS MOTHER-IN-LAW:—I'm sorry. This is a terrific blow.

But the argument is not for lower education. The best is about the age limit imposed by industry for beginning a new kind of work. If ill-health had steered your son-in-law away from any specialization — dentistry, law, engineering — the problem would be the same.

My suggestion would be for him to see a vocational guidance counsellor for ideas about how best to use that trained mind of his to earn a living. Not all jobs close doors at 37.

• • •

DEAR DORIS:—This problem may be a little odd but it's ours and we need help. My wife recently received an invitation to a shower and I don't know what to wear. Could you please suggest something and is there any particular way my hair should be styled?

Should I wear a hat and gloves? I'm 14 so should I wear make-up? If so, what? My mother, who is 40, has the same problem.

It is to be held in the country and we don't want to look like gypsies. We want to make an impression on our relations. —FOURTEEN.

DEAR FOURTEEN:—Showers are informal, sociable affairs. A dinner dress with short sleeves and of street length is right. It may be in a light or dark shade, with some pretty trim and a bright pin or earrings, or both.

When it comes to hair styles, look your age — nothing extreme or sophisticated; just nice clean, wavy hair in a style the girls are wearing at your age.

For an evening shower a hat is not necessary but short or medium-length white gloves always give a well-dressed look to the costume. A little light make-up is permissible — a natural pink lipstick is about all. The gypsy look comes of splashy jewellery and too heavy make-up or bright spots of rouge, dark lipstick, noticeable eye shadow, garish nail polish — so don't do it!

For your mother a little foundation cream, rouge skillfully applied so that it looks natural, a dusting of powder, perhaps a little eyebrow pencil — these are the beauty aids which can help. The secret is to have make-up so subtle that it looks natural and helps — not hinders nature!

• • •

DEAR DORIS:—My husband and I were married without any frills or guests in the minister's parlor three years ago. My mother and some other relatives were very annoyed at us and our wee daughter, since there was no wedding picture.

We are planning to have a photograph taken and would like some advice about what to wear. Should I wear a long or short gown, or would a suit look better? If a suit, would I wear a hat and gloves?

Would a formal dress be o.k.? Would I wear a hat with it too? What accessories and jewellery? Would it look right to wear a corsage? My husband will wear a black suit; my daughter a little hand embroidered white dress.—MRS. F. B.

DEAR MRS. F. B.:—A short informal afternoon gown with good lines and no ornamentation would be right. A light in color it will provide a nice contrast with your husband's suit; but I would not advise anything with a pattern in it.

This is a picture which is meant to last, so avoid anything which would date it. Hats change radically over the years and a hat hides the face; so that's out. The less jewellery the better; perhaps something as conservative as one or two strands of pearls but nothing splashy or dated. Wear high heels.

Flowers would have been fine for a wedding picture but not now. Do without the corsage as this is a special-occasion accent.

Most large department stores now have fashion counsellors who would be glad to help you choose a style and color which will photograph well, as well as shoes to go with it.

(Doris Clark, Master of Social Work, is a graduate of McMaster, Toronto and McGill universities and has had broad experience in social work. If you would like help with your "problems, write to her in care of this newspaper, enclosing a self-addressed, stamped envelope.)

Berlin, Twenty-Two Years Ago, Focal Point of Crisis

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Twenty-two years ago, Berlin, as now, was the focal point of East-West tension.

But in 1939 the crisis was not about Berlin. It was created by it.

On Sept. 3 that year Hitler's Germany struck at Poland. The United Kingdom declared war on Germany the same day.

Seven days later, on Sept. 10, 1939, Canada formally declared war on its historic ally Britain against the Nazis.

Nearly 42,000 Canadians perished in the Second World War, less than a generation after 60,000 had died in the war of 1914-18.

Even in present-day high school students, born since the end of the Second World War, the irony of the current situation must strike home.

COLD WAR ALLY

Thousands of Canadian soldiers and airmen are stationed in West Germany to help protect that country—an ally of Canada in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization — against Soviet aggression.

Parliament, which reconvened Sept. 5, decided to discuss government measures to strengthen Canada's defences in view of the increased menace to Berlin.

It was a special session of Parliament in 1939 that took the decision to send Canada into the fight against Germany.

The bulkheap from a defence force of a few thousand men had made a major contribution to the Allied victory.

The army's top strength overseas was 287,713 and the total army intake was 730,000. The RCAF had a peak strength of 215,000 and the navy 106,522.

FIGHTING DEFENDERS

The RCN operated more than 400 combat ships and escorted nearly 182,000 merchant ships in convoys from North American ports to the United Kingdom. It sank or helped sink 27 U-boats and 42 enemy surface ships.

Canadian troops were among the first to land in Sicily in 1943 and on the Normandy coast on D-Day, June 6, 1944. The 1st Canadian Army helped to thrust the Germans out of France, Belgium and The Netherlands.

The RCAF became the world's fourth largest air power during the war. At peak strength it had 57 squadrons, 47 of them overseas. Canadian airmen fought in the 1940 Battle of Britain and they later hailed "tall boy," "cookie," "blockbuster" and "grand slam" bombs to Berlin by air.

Catholic Church in Cuba Looks to Future With Deep Foreboding, Priests Flee

The church's position in Cuba is set out in the following story by CP reporter Jack Best, now in Canada, after a three-month sojourn in Cuba.

By JACK BEST
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Shaken by the calamity that has befallen it in a few nightmarish months, the Roman Catholic church in Cuba looks to the future with deep foreboding.

The cream of its largely Spanish priesthood has fled the island since the Castro government seized on the clergy after April's abortive invasion attempt.

The parochial school system, which embraced hundreds of institutions of learning, has ceased to exist.

Ecclesiastical officials say churches have been broken into and priests subjected to humiliation. Because of the apparent decline in vocations, many churches have closed.

In the provinces today there are more parishes without priests than with them, according to a highly responsible Havana source. The remainder have to work hard.

FEAR NEW MOVES

"Practically every priest is saying three masses on Sunday, priests and parishioners," he said. Religious leaders are disturbed by reports the government is working to establish a national church.

"Here we are part of the church of silence—almost," said a clergyman sitting in his barely furnished office in Havana. What he meant by "almost" is that priests are still permitted to say mass and administer the sacraments. But other activities are closely circumscribed.

They complain of being spied on by militiamen and the G-2 military intelligence police as being unable to move about as freely as they would like.

Similar troubles have been experienced by Protestant clergy. Castro, trying to push out inside the four walls of our churches buildings," said one minister.

Protestant churches in Cuba have not been under an open attack as the much more powerful Catholic church, whose difficulties were compounded by the fact that most of its priests were Spanish, denounced by the government as counter-revolutionary "Falangist."

PROTESTANT SETTLEMENT

The principal Protestant churches in Cuba are Episcopalian, Methodist, Presbyterian and Baptist. As of the beginning of this year they are estimated to have had 60,000 active communicants. Another 400,000 to 500,000 Cubans are said to have been "under Protestant influence."

More than 90 per cent of Cuba's 6,000,000 people are Catholics—at least nominally. Traditionally, it is said, only a fraction have been faithful church-goers.

The church's main support in Cuba has come traditionally from the middle and "upper classes. This contrasts with many Catholic countries in Europe, where the church draws its steadiest support from the peasant class.

In Cuban religious circles there is apprehension about what Fidel Castro's government may have still in store for the battered, reeling church.

COULD BE JAILED

For some months, reports have been circulating that the government is trying to get a national church into operation. This would follow a pattern set in other countries where communism has become entrenched, notably China.

"Maybe the remaining priests will be asked to sign a declaration of loyalty to the national church," said a responsible ecclesiastical source. "And if they refuse—they may be jailed or forced to leave the country."

Said another: "Priests who refuse to sign may have to go underground."

A handful of pro - Castro priests are believed working in the national church movement—the remainder have refused to have anything to do with it.

The two best known are Rev. Guillermo Sardinas, with Castro since guerrilla days in the Sierra Maestra, and Rev. German Lesca, Church authorities are understood to have taken disciplinary action against Father Lesca, forbidding him to say mass.

AGREEMENT SOUGHT

Meanwhile, the Catholic church is trying to achieve a modus vivendi with the Castro government that would preserve its essential identity and allow it to carry on.

Ironically, in the beginning the church was a warm friend of the revolution. When Castro was fighting in the Sierra Maestra he received a great deal of moral support from the Catholic hierarchy.

Some observers feel, however, that the church was deeply compromised through having accepted money and favors from dictator Fulgencio Batista. Now, strapped for money-earning properties have been seized by the government.

MASSACRE

The church supported Castro's early social reforms, including the agrarian reform law, proclaimed in the spring of 1959, a few months after the revolution had triumphed.

Trouble began last year when the church began speaking out against the increasingly Communist complexion of the revolution.

LETTER TO CASTRO

Angrily, the government struck back by telling Cubans that any anti-Communist statement or commentary was also a counter-revolutionary one.

Then began Castro's arch-bishops and bishops later described as anti - religious campaign of national dimensions." They complained in an open letter to Castro Dec. 4 that this campaign was daily becoming more violent.

Agents provocateurs have many times interrupted religious functions in our churches, without penalty," the letter said.

But the storm really broke with April's abortive invasion and Premier Castro's May Day address in which he decreed the takeover of parochial schools and said foreign priests would have to get out of Cuba—all except those certified as not counter-revolutionary.

In the third week of May, the exodus of religious personnel began, and soon became a flood. Nuns and brothers had to go as well as priests, since with the takeover of schools there was nothing left for them to do in Cuba.

CANADIANS DEPARTED

Among those who departed were 62 Canadians representing religious orders in Quebec.

With the departure of a final large contingent of Spanish priests July 20, the main exodus was completed. An informed source estimated then that of about 2,000 Spanish missionaries based in Cuba at April 17, including perhaps 600 priests, only 200 remained.

Reports tell of churches having been invaded by militiamen looking for gold or money, or both "This happened everywhere," said an informant. "Wherever they found anything they just took it."

Camaguey province, in eastern Cuba, a group of priests is said to have been kept locked up in latrines for nearly a week.

The day after May Day a group of armed militiamen moved into a convent occupied by Canadian nuns at Colon, in Matanzas province. For seven days the nuns were prisoners, unable even to go out to buy supplies. Finally, after complaints from the Canadian embassy, Premier Castro sent a personal representative to clear out the intruders.

TOOK REFUGE

Among scores and perhaps hundreds of priests arrested were Msgr. Evelio Diaz, coadjutor archbishop and apostolic administrator of Havana, and

ROSARY AND UNIFORM—Catholic and Protestant churches in Cuba have come under sharp attack from the government of Fidel Castro but the majority of Cubans remain intensely devout. Wearing rosary beads over one shoulder, this militiawoman attends an outdoor mass at the Church of Plaza de la Revolution. (CP Photo)

Msgr. Eduardo Boza Masvidal, auxiliary bishop of Havana.

In the same period, Manuel Cardinal Arteaga, Archbishop of Havana, left Cuba to seek refuge in the Argentine embassy. At latest report he was still there.

Protestant clergymen have had their troubles also. Many ministers have left the country. Hardest hit in this respect has been the Methodist Church which has lost about half of its 60 ordained ministers, including all the American missionaries. Five Presbyterian clergymen, two Baptists and two Episcopalians have also left.

Ministers' children have a special problem. Unwilling to submit them to a Communist-style education, they have to send them abroad for their schooling. Many parents, to decide whether to accompany their children, have divided their wives with the children and stayed on alone.

Four of the Protestant clergymen are reported to have joined the government's national church movement.

The Jewish religion has not suffered any persecution under the present regime, said a reliable source. Jews in Cuba number about 7,000. Most make their home in Havana.

A semi-religious school was taken over by the government but Jewish leaders are trying to get it back for their children can be taught Hebrew language and history.

Jobless Fund Nearly Down To Last Penny

OTTAWA (CP) — The unemployment insurance fund will be down to its last penny by early 1963 unless federal grants are made, the government has been warned.

The fund's advisory committee says another winter of high unemployment can be expected to empty the coffers by next May, when seasonal benefits end.

The committee's report was tabled in the Commons Thursday. It was for the fiscal year ended last March 31 but includes forecasts for the current year.

Balance of the fund — which has been shedding for three years — was $134,685,000 at March 31, about half the $265,- 852,000 a year earlier. The fund's peak was $936,736,590 at Dec. 31, 1956.

Latest published figure since the fund's year ended shows an end-of-July balance of $130,771,- 909.

The report urges the government to make special grants to the fund, from which unemployment insurance is paid, to carry it over until the precarious state of the fund can be corrected by amendments to the Unemployment Insurance Act.

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

Hockey has Howe, Hull and Geoffrion; and baseball boasts Mantle, Spahn and Maris. The National Football League, too, claims its share of super-stars — players whose ability and color draw extra thousands of fans to games.

Canadian football fans will have a chance to see many United States pro-football stars in action when World of Sport presents NFL games on 14 consecutive Sundays beginning Sept. 17 at 3 p.m. EDT on the CBC-TV network.

Going by past performances, players to watch carefully include Sam Etcheverry of St. Louis, Paul Hornung of Green Bay, Sam Huff of New York, Jimmy Brown and Bill Plum of Cleveland, John Unitas of Baltimore and Chuck Bednarik of Philadelphia.

Etcheverry is known to Canadian gridiron fans; the passing records he made as Montreal Alouette quarterback for nine seasons in the Big Four earned him the sobriquet, The Rifle. Although bothered by sore shoulder in pre-season games this year Etcheverry many CFL sportswriters predict, could be all St. Louis needs to win the Eastern Conference and NFL championship.

Paul Hornung, former Notre Dame star who, as halfback for Green Bay Packers led the NFL scoring race the past two seasons, is a player to watch. Hornung's 176 points in 1960 broke the NFL record of 138 set by former Packer, great Don Hutson in 1942. Included in Hornung's totals were 15 touchdowns, 41 extra points and 15 field goals. The Notre Dame boy known as a team player, is also liked by Hornung, were last year's Western Conference winners with a record of eight wins and four losses.

The New York Giants exemplify defensive football that wins. The Giants' defensive squad, led by six-foot-seven-inch, 250-pound Roosevelt (Rosey) Grier Huff, is mainly responsible for many American football experts picking New York to finish high in the Eastern Division this season. Speaking in a tough, contact sport, and Huff and the other Giants defenders revel in the rough going.

Four-time NFL ground-gaining-champ Jimmy Brown of the Cleveland Browns carries his six-foot, three-inch, 215-pound frame with speed and agility of a sprinter. His four-season total of 5,855 yards gained puts him in third place in all-time NFL records. Just 25, Brown has a chance to smash all existing NFL yards-gained records. The 1,527 yards the Cleveland ace gained in 1958 is a league record for one season. He carried the ball 215 times during 1960 for a league-leading 1,257 yards, an average of 5.8 yards per attempt.

Besides Jimmy Brown, another reason many experts select Cleveland for a top spot in the Eastern Conference is the presence of quarterback Milt Plum in the line-up. In 1960 Plum completed 151 of 259 passes thrown, for 2,297 yards and 21 touchdowns. He had the added distinction of not having a pass intercepted until the 11th game of the season.

Baltimore Colts, NFL champions in 1958 and '59, pose a major threat for the Western Conference title again this season. The Colts are led by 28-year-old John Unitas, considered by most experts as the best quarterback in the NFL. Despite the Colts' dismal six-won and six-lost record last year, Unitas threw the most completions for the most yards gained — plus the most touchdowns — of any quarterback in the league. With Unitas in good form, Baltimore is a strong contender.

Philadelphia Eagles linebacker Chuck Bednarik is one of the main reasons the Eagles won the NFL championship last season. With the 35-year-old veteran of 13 seasons in the line-up again this year the Eagles must be ranked as a possibility to repeat their '60 triumph, despite the loss of quarterback Norm Van Brocklin — now coach of the Minnesota Vikings.

There are many other stars — of varying stature — in the NFL. There are also the rookies, any one of whom could become a star overnight. Canadian fans will have an opportunity to see most of them in action on World of Sport, starting Sept. 17.

Tigers Lose Another

By ED WILEY
Associated Press Sports Writer

Mickey Mantle, shrugging off a shin bruise, blasted back into the race for Babe Ruth's record with his 52nd home run Friday night, hitting a 3-2 pitch off righthander Gary Bell into the lower right field seats at Yankee Stadium in the fifth inning.

The bases - empty shot, which capped a trio of three - run frames as New York made a booming return visit to the American League pennant race with a 9-1 breeze over Cleveland, put Mickey within three of leaving Roger Maris, whose home total stayed at 55 in a 0-for-3 night.

That left Mantle two games behind Ruth's record-set pace of 1927 while Maris is six games ahead, but gave the Yankees' McMen a lot to cheer about — major league record of 107 homers in a season set by the Babe and Lou Gehrig in 1927.

"This thing isn't over yet," said the Mick after giving way to a pinch runner in the eighth inning. "I don't think I'm out of it," he added in reference to his race with Maris for Ruth's supreme 60. At the moment, they have 18 games in which to catch or surpass Ruth with the limit of 154 team decisions set by commissioner Ford Frick.

As for the bruised shin:

"It doesn't," Mantle admitted. "But it will have be be pretty sore for me to play."

The Yankees, incidentally, backed right - hander Bill Stafford (12-11) all the way, one two - run homer by Tony Kubek off Bell and now have walloped 213 home runs, right shy of the major league record. The Yanks set them in 1936 and ahead of second - place Detroit.

The 4-1 victory over Tigers, checked on two hits by Dick Stallard and reliever Mike Fornieles, sent the eighth in a row, 9-2 at Boston. Baltimore edged within two games of the Tigers with a 3-1 and 4-2 twinnight sweep over Washington. Kansas City whipped Minnesota 6-4.

Jim Pagliaroni batted in five runs for the Red Sox, two with a third inning double that beat Jim Bunning (12-13), and the other three with a homer. Fupcakes (9-8) was the winner, adding his 11th major league homer. One of the Tigers hits was a four-run blow by Dick Brown, off Stallard.

Whitey Herzog's single capped a two - run rally in the first game for Baltimore, shut out until then by three hits by loser Pete Burnside (1-8). Herzog also singled in a two - run seventh as the Orioles broke up a 2-2 tie in the nightcap against Ed Hobaugh (6-9). Hoyt Wilhelm (9-7) won the first game in relief and Dick Hall (7-5) took the night cap with a four - hitter.

Minnie Minoso's two - run homer won it for the White Sox and Wilhelm reliever Billy Pierce (9-8). Jim Donohue (4-7) lost it.

The As came from behind with four runs in the seventh and beat Jim Kaat (7-13). Dave Wickersham (2-0) was the winner, in relief.

Softball Meet Laid Over To Sunday

The special Belleville and District softball league meeting, called in a rush yesterday noon for last night, was postponed in fact as big a rush yesterday afternoon.

League secretary Olliff Belch contacted the team managers and was told that Picton, ECAF and Bosloco could not make last night's meeting. Coburg also preferred a later date.

Union ump Jeyess and Coberry, the two team lawyers, would be represented if was decided to re-schedule the meeting for Sunday (Sunday) afternoon at the CNE Park ball diamonds.

All teams - managers are asked once again to attend this all-important meeting tomorrow.

Hometown Housewives Back Mick

COMMERCE, Okla. (AP)— Even the women of Commerce are loving baseball these days. Housewives daily prepare the home run hitting of Mickey Mantle and Roger Maris of New York Yankees and Mickey hits that 80th home run to tie Babe Ruth's 1927 record, the women will join in in a big celebration.

The Lions Club in the town where Mickey grew up has nothing special planned yet. But president Richard Mauldin says the club will "come up with something" when the time comes.

Mauldin said the whole town of about 3,000 persons is talking about Mantle's bid for Ruth's record.

Otto C. Chandler, a drug-gist, bears little else. Chandler calls Mantle a Commerce auto dealer, Mantle's part-would fan.

"Personally, if he can't break the record, I'd just as soon Maris wouldn't. Shucks, they've both good boys. Seriously deserves it more than Mickey."

YONKERS, N.Y. (AP)—Cold Front, an 18-to-1 shot, rushed up from seventh place in the stretch and won the $110,000 William H. Cane pace by three-quarters of a length from Henry Thomas Friday night. Flying Raceway Friday night. Flying Baker was third in the field of 11 three-year-old pacers.

The time of 2:06 3-5 for the 1 1-16 miles was the fastest a second slower than the world record.

Though idle lately with a rib injury Wertz was batting .262 this season in the American League and has 276 runs batted in and 11 home runs.

Giants Whip Dodgers

Reds Shade Cards, Cling To Lead

By ED WILEY
Associated Press Sports Writer

Are Cincinnati Reds on the way out in the National League race? Not when they can come from behind in the ninth inning and then fight off a threat to their hold on first place with an extra - inning victory.

They did just that Friday night, beating St. Louis Cardinals 3-2 in 10 innings after being shut out on three hits for seven frames. The win gave the Reds a two - game lead in the pennant chase as the second - place Los Angeles Dodgers were beaten 7-3 by San Francisco Giants.

The Dodgers could have made it back on top if they could have paired a victory with a Cincinnati defeat.

The Pittsburgh Pirates joined the Giants in helping out the Reds by clubbing the third - place Milwaukee Braves 9-1. The Braves dropped seven games behind. Chicago Cubs defeated Philadelphia Phillies 4-1.

Cincinnati won in the 10th inning on Jim Brosnan's pitch single, a sacrifice and Eddie Kasko's single. Brosnan (9-3) relieved Bob Cards in the eighth inning when loser Ernie Broglio (9-11) gave up a single and two runs scored. Frank Robinson's two - run homer in the ninth got the Reds back in the game. Jim Brosnan (9-3) was the winner in relief.

PODRES STOPPED

The Dodgers' bid for a fifth straight victory ended in the first inning at San Francisco. The Giants stung Dodger starter Johnny Podres (18-5) for two had won 16 games in a row on the strength of four runs. Joey Amalfitano started it with a triple and came across on Jim Davenport's single. Willie Mays added a two - run homer and Orlando Cepeda socked his 39th home run of the season.

Lefthander Mike McCormick (8-10) pitched a five - hit shutout in the second inning, was the winner.

Jim Piersall's managed only four hits but beat rookie Bob Hendley (3-4) with two runs in the fourth on two walks, Robert Clement's single and a double by Felipe Alou. Hendley was the winner, getting Frank Bolling to hit into a forceout with the bases loaded in the ninth.

Southpaw Dick Ellsworth (8-10) limited the Phils to three hits. The Cubs beat Art Mahaffey (10-13) with three runs in the second inning, scoring the clincher on Moe Morhardt's first major league hit, a single.

Dick Hurst Tries Out With OAVC

GUELPH (CP)—The Ontario Agriculture Veterinary College, one of the powers in the Ontario Intercollegiate Football Conference, will have a new look this year.

Don Hayes an Ottawa - born graduate of Springfield College, takes over as head coach from Ken Farquharson. Dave as his assistants Chuck O'Connell, former lineman with Kitchener-Waterloo Dutchmen and Saskatoon Rugby Football Union, and Earl Hunt, who played at one time with Dalhousie University of Toronto.

There'll also be a flock of new faces in the lineup with only 15 lettermen returning.

Among candidates for the quarterback job is freshman Dick Hurst of Belleville. Other promising new comers among the 40 candidates who've been working out twice daily this week are Jim McMillan, former Western Mustangs guard, Bruce Grove, a 225 - pound defensive guard from Cornwall, and Pete Kenyon, a tackle from Leamington.

The Redmen make their first start in Kingston Sept. 23 when they meet Queen's in an exhibition game. Their first league game will be at home Sept. 30 against Carleton University.

Hockey Star Successful In Baseball

HAMILTON (CP) — Dennis Ribaut, left winger for the Hamilton Red Wings Junior A hockey team last season, has found success in professional baseball and is not expected to play hockey this winter.

He is working out with Milwaukee Braves although he is ineligible to pitch for the National League club this season.

Ribaut 17-year-old Detroit native, started the ball season in the Class D Midwest League, where his 17-2 record earned him promotion to Austin of the Class AA Texas League. He had a 4-3 record there but because of his late call-up was not eligible for the playoffs.

Milwaukee plans to have Ribaut play winter ball in Florida.

Ribaut scored six goals and had 14 assists for Hamilton last winter.

Golfers Get Under Way

TORONTO (CP)—The Canadian Professional Golfers Association's best-ball clubs competition opens officially today but scores have already been received from some of the 300 golf clubs across Canada invited to enter.

In each club, amateur golfers are lined up to play in groups or individually. Best individual score for each of the 18 holes becomes the club's score for that hole.

Marshall said that about 1,000 to 1,500 golfers are expected to play. The competition runs until Sept. 17.

Marshall said all the returns will be in Sept. 21 and a national trophy will be awarded.

MAY LEAD H.

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — There is a strong but quiet campaign afoot to make George Sisler Jr., general manager of Rochester Red Wings, the next president of the International Baseball League, a story by Ralph A. Ryman, Rochester Times - Union executive sports editor, says. The presidency comes up for vote at a December meeting. Tommy Richardson was elected to a one-year term in 1960.

AND OTHERS RUN — Meanwhile back at the campus of BCIVS the potential players for that school's senior team have lost no time in getting right into football rig and trying to outrun the heat. This is, of course, a great conditioner for anyone over 14.

Sasky Riders Nip Larks By Point

By MARVEN MOSS

MONTREAL (CP)—The West pulled even with the East Friday night in Canadian Football League play.

The sawoff developed when Saskatchewan Roughriders beat Montreal Alouettes 16-15 on a last-minute point.

That gave the Western and Eastern Conferences five wins apiece and a tie in 11 games under the interlocking schedule started this season.

But a shuffle is in the offing. Three inter-conference games are scheduled between now and Monday, all in the East.

Edmonton Eskimos go against Ottawa Rough Riders in the capital today, a battle between the two Grey Cup finalists of last year.

Sunday it's Saskatchewan against Toronto Argonauts and Monday the Eskimos meet Hamilton Tiger-Cats, sharing the Eastern lead with Ottawa going into today's play.

DECIDES ISSUE

Ferdie Burket's single with 40 seconds to play was the deciding point for Saskatchewan here Friday night before a crowd of 18,943.

It was his second bid for the point.

His first kick, from Montreal's 42, sailed behind the goal line a good 12 yards. But Montreal's Glen Beretta booted the ball back out.

Tackle Bobby Oliver of the Als grabbed the ball and rumbled downfield with no defender within 20 yards of him. But since no Saskatchewan player had touched the ball it was a no-yards penalty against Montreal and the officials gave the Roughriders a first down on the Montreal 15, the reprieve for Burket.

Alouettes had 20 first downs to Saskatchewan's 12 but the Riders tied their scoring thrusts together more effectively to emerge with win No. 3 in seven starts, good for third place in the WFC. With only a tie to show for six games, the Als were left in the EFC basement.

At halftime Montreal led 1-0, the point a 45-yard single by Berretta.

ROOKIE TAKES OVER

Rookie quarterback Dave Ross from the University of Oregon came in to steer the Saskatchewan attack in the second half.

Gross, 22, passed to end Jack Gotta for one touchdown and scored another himself on a one-yard buck. Both plays came in the third quarter.

Veteran Reg Whitehouse converted both Saskatchewan touchdowns and Burket picked up a single early in the final quarter.

Ex - Roughrider Dan Allred went all the way at quarter for Montreal and his touchdown pass to half Jack Espenship made it 15-15 with six minutes to play after Bill Bewley converted.

Whip Wins, Kudo Disqualified

It wound up in a near-donnybrook with the Whipper getting the nod over the "Great" Kudo by virtue of disqualification.

The Kudo couldn't beat the Whip after a choking session in the first fall so he enlisted the aid of the roughie toughie Stan Stasiak.

His ruse the referee didn't think it was cricket and after he had the smoke cleared he lifted the hand of the Whip in victory.

The import from down Kingston way didn't lose any time in the first act. He went to work promptly before the Whip got his angles warmed up and after five minutes of pure cussedness managed to wrap his sash around the Whip's tonsils and tie it in a bow knot.

Watson was in no condition to tell the referee what was going on so he had to say "uncle".

But it was different in the second fall. An angry Whip lost no time in demonstrating to the "Great" the form that brought him the British Empire heavyweight championship.

He "snapped the whip" the hold that brought him, early fame and had the Great One going in circles. He was still in a daze when Watson clamped his famous Commando Uscounclus hold on the portly one and eased him into bye-byeland.

Kudo showed far greater respect in the third fall and was getting by far the worst of the deal when he signalled for help.

Enter Le Stasiak.

Stanley as he was named in his boyhood lost no time getting into the ring. Apparently there is no love lost between the "Arvida Assassin" as he has been dubbed by sports writers, and the Pride of East York.

He teamed with Le Kudo and the pair was giving the Whip the well-known works as spectators milled around ringside. Finally the referee decided to call it a day and awarded the Whip the fall and bout.

Stasiak and handsome Tony Martino staged a rip-roaring semi-final bout that went the thirty-minute time limit to a draw.

It was fast exciting action and a bout that stole a lot of the thunder from the main event.

Karol Kalmikoff failed to show up so John Foti took over. He bowed to Man Mountain Campbell in the preliminary.

RETURNS TO SCHOOL

CONROE, Tex. (AP)—Heavyweight boxer Tony Harris announced Friday he will enrol at the University of Arkansas Law School. Asked whether he is quitting fighting he said "it all depends on how the fight business livens up. It doesn't look too good right now."

Football Pools Bribe

WASHINGTON (AP)—An Oregon football player told Senate racket investigators Friday that he blocked a bribery scheme last fall. But apparently Bills happened to the two gamblers whom he said offered him $3,000 to fix the Oregon - Michigan game.

Michael Bruce, 20-year-old defensive halfback for Oregon, testified before the Senate investigations subcommittee. He pointed out another witness, Frank Norman Rosenthal, as one of two men he met in a hotel on the eve of the game at Ann Arbor, Mich., last September.

Rosenthal, a Miami Beach gambler, stard impassively as Bruce leveled a finger at him. Then he invoked the Fifth Amendment's protection against self-incrimination and refused to talk when chairman John L. McClellan (D-Ark.) asked him about the incident.

Subsequent testimony indicated that by the time police, called in by Bruce via the Oregon coaches, reached the hotel Rosenthal had left and apparently never was arrested. The organization, named as David Dodin, was arrested on a charge of possession of the hotel under a false name.

Dodin was fined $300 on the charge after entering Coach Bruce's committee counsel Manfred Ach as a former New York school teacher who was involved in a football fix scandal and was fired from his school job. DIDN'T KNOW

Detective Carl Robinson, chief of the Michigan State Police rackets squad, said he did not learn until Friday about Rosenthal was the man with Dodin.

Robinson testified that contrary to the police had in trying to develop the case was Bruce's unwillingness to testify. The detective told reporters later that Bruce didn't want to go into court because he was publicity-shy.

The hearings are intended to determine whether gamblers have corrupted any college football teams as they have some college basketball players.

Astrological Forecast

By CARROLL RIGHTER

Sunday, September 16, 1951

General Tendencies: Until noon most everyone will have all he or she can do to keep head above water and to avoid depression. Really live the Rule-of-Gold now. Then, through tonight you find that everyone becomes much more co-operative and is willing to look at the other fellow's point of view. Show you appreciate what he appreciates now.

Aries (March 21 to April 19) — Morning finds you getting distraught over the unimportant, if you will. Be calm instead, even in the face of some vital crisis, P.M. now you know what to do for those who are in need and look to you for assistance. Be generous.

Taurus (April 20 to May 20) — Important you live your religion now, not merely mouth it, and be a source of inspiration to others who are floundering on the sea of despair. Be controlled and sure of yourself. P.M. fine for taking health treatments you need.

Gemini (May 21 to June 21) — If you maintain a smiling exterior today, you will help others greatly who are nervous and insecure and worried. Dwell on the beautiful. P.M. sit down and plan the new day's activities intelligently. Make notes on paper. Retire early.

Moon Children (June 22 to July 21) — Ideal day to carry through with any promises you have made to kin, willingly, efficiently. Be sure you do not lose your temper under any circumstances. Get out and buy little gifts of candy or flowers for loved ones. Be devoted, kind.

Leo (July 22 to Aug. 21) — Important that you drive most carefully today, no matter where you go. Also, think before you speak and remember that a kind word drives away wrath, but a thoughtless one could start a terrific battle. Cultivate the quality of gentility.

Virgo (Aug. 22 to Sept. 23) — Be very sure you have come through with any promises to kin or friends — if not, this is the finest day to get back into their good graces. P.M. set up a personal budget for yourself that you can really adhere to and profit by.

Libra (Sept. 24 to Oct. 23) — If you are not careful in conversations, you may find this to be a difficult day in dealing with others. Forego those social events that you feel will be too taxing on you in one way or the other. Improve appearance.

Scorpio (Oct. 24 to Nov. 21) — While you may find that you are limited and imposed upon, this is not a day to dash off on some tangent or other that would only get you deeper into the water. Remember that everyone is tested, so remain calm, watch TV. All will be well.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) — Instead of telling your good friend off in that Sagittarian way, try to place yourself in his or her shoes and do understanding, then you really have a friend and can do untold good for your fellow man. Cement fine relations.

Capricorn (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Important you think of your good name today, no matter what the provocation. Act circumspectly, don't lose your temper. Don't permit anyone to lead you into any situation from which you cannot extricate yourself honorably. Grow.

Aquarius (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) This is one of those days when you want to make radical changes and destroy long-standing alliances only to get yourself caught with others who are not half as reliable or as desirable. Hold fast and clear up any misunderstandings.

Pisces (Feb. 20 to March 20) While your hunches are very fine right now, it is best to discuss situations with personal advisors and experts informally, and refrain from making definite decisions for action until the following day, preferably in p.m. Be cagey.

If your child is born today— he, or she, will be one of those volatile individuals who early must learn to control the temper and remain loyal to one person or one ideal, not to incessantly be swerving from left to right. Also teach patience and how to be of real service to others, otherwise the fine success in this chart will never materialize and your progeny will be misunderstood by everyone. Help your quasi-genius.

Monday, September 17, 1951

General Tendencies: This is an unusually good day for you to get the wholehearted co-operation and support of whomever you wish to be allied and associated in days to come. Be sure you handle all that pertains to real touch and fine finish in art, decorations ,apparel, hangings, color, music art and beauty as well. Add to present culture. Co-operate, now.

Aries (March 21 to April 19) — Ideal day to associate with associates and exchange views. Later ,try to reconcile with those who have been inimical to you and set up better relations for the future — co-operation is always better than fighting. P.M. retire early.

Taurus (April 20 to May 20) You can put out a great deal of work today if you get the co-operation of fellow workers that you truly admire. Later, take any health treatments you need and be sure to make your surroundings as clean and orderly as possible.

Gemini (May 21 to June 21) Turn this into a rosy Monday by planning your day and evening early and wisely. Then off to the activities that please and inspire, and you will find that these fine aspects can extend into tomorrow as well. Be on the qui vive.

Moon Children (June 22 to July 21) — It would be wise to carry through with any duties or promises to family that are vital and also to quietly express your own desires. Then through co-operation much can be accomplished and tonight you can entertain at home. Have fun.

Leo (July 22 to Aug. 21) — Get out and shop early since this is one day when you can find just the right article at the right price. Buy the gadgets that will make your work easier, too. P.M. step out with good friends for a delightful evening of fun.

Virgo (Aug. 22 to Sept. 23)— Take a look around and find out what must be done to make your real estate-holding more valuable and comfortable, beautiful. Then roll up your sleeves and get busy. Get the right people to help you, too. P.M. set up budget.

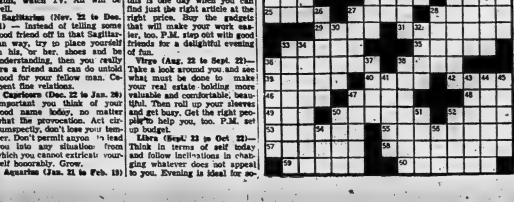
Libra (Sept. 24 to Oct. 23)— Think in terms of self today and follow inclinations in changing whatever does not appeal to you. Evening is ideal for social pleasures and talking over ambitions informally with highups.

Scorpio (Oct. 24 to Nov. 21)— Every opportunity is yours now to indulge that ability for investigation into whatever does puzzle you. Also, discuss matters with authorities or higher-ups as well. P.M. assist those who are in dire need. Be generous.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) — The right day to have a meeting with someone in order to carry through with whatever ideas you may have in mind. Be sociable and make new contacts, too. Be courteous with everyone and if you are obligated in any way, do your share now.

Capricorn (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) You are also now to get greater support and personal acclaim, if you make it a point to go directly to the right people in influential circles who are willing and able to extend the favors you require. Dress nicely, be charming.

Aquarius (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) If you contact highly intellectual and educated persons today and tonight, you can get just the right ideas and technical knowledge you need in order to carry through with your pet projects. There is power in numbers — combine.



Pisces (Feb. 20 to March 20) If you concentrate seriously you will know exactly how to improve on any business system so you become far more successful in the future. And by the same token, you will be able to come to a far better understanding with loved one.

If your child is born today — there will be such a wonderful personality here that others will be drawn to your progeny like flies to a bowl of honey. Teach early to earn what is desired or your child may become so spoiled the habit of work can never be acquired. A great potential here for the public life and fame is definitely in the chart, especially where the theatre and the arts are concerned or the political life. Give good spiritual training, too.

Science at Work

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Topics this week: Radio station at the pigeons' head; ideas for daughters; a shaped space platform and navy plans for a new submarine sonar.

STATION P-S-G-S-O-N

A new miniature radio that can be strapped piggy-back to a homing pigeon may lead to a breakthrough in solving the problem of the "missing link in air-to-ground communications."

That is the word from scientists at the office of U.S. Naval Research.

A Philadelphia firm (American Electronic Laboratories) has devised for them a powerful miniaturized "radio beacon," weighing less than an ounce. It's capable of sending signals detectable for 30 miles in all directions when "broadcasting" from the back of a pigeon in flight.

In a recent test, a pigeon was successfully tracked throughout a 20-mile flight to its home loft.

Naval scientists are also planning to attach similar radio signals to sharks, porpoises, whales and marine turtles.

SPACE DOUGHNUTS

Space scientists see possibilities of developing "inflatable space structures, which would be, in effect, flying doughnuts.

According to one idea, a metal capsule would be lofted into orbit. Then, lightweight inflatable material would be blown up around it in a doughnut shape. The astronaut would open a hatch in his capsule and enter the doughnut—and have room to move around comfortably for a flight lasting several weeks.

TOM TETHERS OCEAN GALE

The U.S. Navy has a brand new "model size ocean" for subjecting dwarf - sized versions of its ships to storms up to virtually all the rigors of a gale at sea.

The laboratory "ocean" is a water-filled basin 360 feet long, 240 feet wide and 20 feet deep. By means of pneumatic "wave-makers" located at one of the walls, engineers can create "a confused sea state . . . which would approximate the cross-sea of a true ocean in a full gale."

COLD WATER

British scientists have come up with the surprising finding that physical exercise tends to make a man even colder if he's immersed in cold water. Thus, they recommend that men should not attempt to swim or do strenuous work when waiting for rescue from cool water but rather, if possible—should float still and on the side of a life jacket.

CHECK FOR DEFECTS — These operators examine coins for surface defects in the examining room of the Royal Canadian Mint, Ottawa. Dies may continually destroyed by small imperfections which would make coins valuable for collectors. Last year the mint produced a record 196,121,753 coins. (CP from National Film Board).

Guards Check Each Person In and Out of Biggest Gold Refinery in North America

By JACK VAN DUSEN

OTTAWA (CP) — The Royal Canadian Mint is a heavily guarded castle - like building erected in 1908 on a cliff overlooking the Ottawa River.

Molten gold pours from red-hot cauldrons and dimes, nickels, pennies and silver dollars chatter through dozens of machines of every shape and size.

Guards check each person in and out of the rambling structure where Canada's coins are made and her gold refined.

A stroll through the plant with Mint Master Norval Parker is without a watering experience.

You can stand in an irongated, slab-in vault filled with silver and gold in gleaming bars refined from crude ore sent to the mint from mining companies across Canada. You can look at a small cart piled high with gold bricks—worth $1,000,000—each about twice the size of a pound of butter.

BIGGEST REFINERY

"It's the biggest gold refinery in North America," Mr. Parker said proudly.

Last year it processed 4,024,-636 troy ounces of gold and 572,803 fine ounces of silver—worth $67,658,258.

The general public is never allowed into the refining section, sealed off by mechanically-operated doors. Employees working on the big blast furnaces and in many fabrication laboratories are carefully screened.

Refinery and coin production workers each have a special locker in which they keep their work clothes. They aren't permitted to take the key home with them and they aren't allowed to change to street clothes until all materials are checked to make sure nothing is missing.

"If anything is missing the boys are held until a check is made," said Mr. Parker, 53-year-old native of Ottawa who has been with the mint since 1935. But, he added, this happens rarely.

BURN REFUSE

No refuse ever leaves the building. It would contain precious metal. Dust and waste are burned within the mint. When work clothes are worn out they too are burned.

Growing popular as a tourist attraction, the mint had 37,009 visitors—by appointment only —last year. Chains regulate their route through the plant.

Manufacture of the coins in what Mr. Parker described as "one of the most up-to-date mints in the world" starts with raw copper, silver, zinc and tin.

The coin alloys are made at the plant and rolled into huge sheets from which coins are punched, much like cookies being cut from dough, at a rate as high as 2,500 a minute.

The blanks are edged, washed, dried, scrubbed, polished, hardened and softened in a multitude of machines and processes before being pressed between chrome-plated, hardened steel dies to become coins.

EXACT WEIGHT

Th finished coins must be "the" exact legal weight and free of imperfections. Last year the mint produced a record 196,121,753 coins.

Dies are continually being destroyed to avoid imperfections which would make coins valuable to collectors.

Coin-collecting by the mint staff is frowned upon by Mr. Parker. "It would be taking advantage of their position and there would be the danger of an employee marring the design of a coin for his own gain."

PICTON

Parking Fine Paid by Going to Church

PICTON — A member of Picton Police Force, Constable George Wright broke one of the town's by-laws and as a result received a different kind of summons. He had parked the police cruiser in the driveway of the Church of St. Mary Magdalene while making a check. It blocked the entrance to the rectory as well, and Rev. R. B. Dellbaz Wright had opportunity to get even for the tickets he had received for overtime parking. But, showing Christian charity, he did not make an official complaint, but put his own ticket on the cruiser. It read, "Fine for parking in non-parking area — your attendance at church on Sunday."

The Constable paid up on Sunday and it cost him as much on the collection plate as if he had received a town parking ticket. The rector does not admit that he expected a dollar as well as attendance.

OFF TO HOT START

The married life of a young Picton couple got off to a hot start this week. After the ceremony, they were paraded through the town in a gaily decorated car. Suddenly the carburetor backfired and flames shot up from the hood. The bridegroom, Doug Ferguson, pulled his bride to safety and rang in the fire department. Prompt action saved the vehicle but they were forced to spend the first night of their honeymoon at a local hotel. Mrs. Ferguson was brought more than 600 people to the scene and resulted in a full house at the wedding.

1,006 ENROLLED

Prince Edward County Collegiate Institute staff has been increased to 43 this year and has at present 1,006 students registered. This is an increase of 90 over last term, Principal Ralph Syrett stated.

Picton public schools have a total of 853 enrolled, there being 471 at Queen Elizabeth school, 215 at Mary Street school and 66 at York Street school.

Society Will Provide Floral Decorations

PICTON—Horticultural Societies in District 2 will have a display at the International plowing match to be held Oct. 4-7 near Belleville. The activities will be held in Belleville when suggestions were made at the meeting of Ontario Horticultural Association, Ontario Dept. of Agriculture, by J. S. Shapley, son, Kingston, District director, presided.

Detailed arrangements were left in the hand of the Belleville, Stirling and their secretary, G. Nicholson, and they are to provide materials for the setting which will include a map of the district showing where societies are located. Floral decorations are being provided by Stirling, Belleville, Picton and Kingston societies, each society feature is to be available.

The district societies will also sponsor competitions for floral arrangement demonstrations one day of the match, this to be a special feature being planned to entertain the ladies. As well the societies will be responsible for landscaping the entrance to the headquarters occupied by plowing match officials. Members of district societies are to be in attendance at the exhibits to answer queries. Mrs. Armstrong and Mrs. Wannamaker of Stirling and Phil Dodds, Picton president, are also members of the planning committee.

Tear Gas Used As Hardrock Miners Skirmish

Mine, Mill Local Ready To Join Labor Congress

SUDBURY (CP)—A meeting called as a possible curtain-raiser to a walkout by local 598 from the International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers (Ind.) broke up in disorder Sunday night and a rival union announced it will try, starting today, to muscle in.

Hardrock miners skirmished, police used tear gas and union officials said there will be trouble in port in vain, to be heard above the din of about 4,000 persons jammed into Sudbury Arena to support their side of the bitter struggle for the separated Local 598 from its national officers.

After the meeting two officials of the United Steelworkers of America (USA) said Steel-workers would be available to the workers tomorrow."

The disputes that led to the split at the May 21-28 Mill 598 President Don Gillis' wish to get the 17,000-member local into the Canadian Labor Congress. When Mine-Mill was kicked out of the CLC in 1949 over disputes with the Communist-dominated Congress of Industrial Organizations. Steel was given jurisdiction by the CLC.

CAN'T HEAR HIM

CLC President Claude Jodoin was the feature speaker at the meeting but his intended speech of welcome to the CLC was all but lost amid the din made more raucous by a squawky public address system.

"I wish to congratulate you, Sudbury free trade unionists, in speaking and staying here while the people (supporters of Nationalist Ferdinand Rem Smith) are trying to destroy the spirit of democracy.

"I want also to assure them that if they do call a meeting, that the people will know the voice of freedom will be heard."

William Mahoney, Canadian director of organizations and a vice-president of the CLC, and Larry Sefton, also a CLC vice-president and a Steel director, also spoke briefly, hearing the cheers of the crowd and promising a welcome should Mr. Jodoin move to get the loyal into the CLC via Steel.

They issued the statement that the United Steelworkers of America (USA) in Steel is committed "to give the workers in Sudbury the opportunity to exercise their democratic rights."

Later the national office Mine-Mill group sabotaged the effective meeting with a statement to the meeting tonight, we intend to give the workers of Sudbury the opportunity to join into the Canadian Labor Congress and the United Steelworkers of America.

"Cards will be available to the workers tomorrow. The liberation is on."

FIRE TEAR GAS

The meeting was delayed for more than an hour during which police fired a tear gas bomb up in a tiered section of the arena and one of the arena entrances.

REDS SET OFF MAJOR BLAST ON ARCTIC ISLE

Power Was Below 100-Megaton Level

WASHINGTON (AP)—Russia has triggered her fifth and sixth nuclear blasts and one of them packed a punch far greater than earlier shots in the current tests.

The Atomic Energy Commission said the first of Sunday's explosions in the atmosphere was "up the order of several megatons"—an explosive force equivalent to several million tons of TNT.

Although it was by far the largest blast since Russia resumed testing 11 days ago, the AEC gave the new yield from the 100-megaton level which Soviet Premier Khrushchev has boasted his country can reach.

The second nuclear device, fired later in the day on the same arctic island as the first, was believed to be "in the low to intermediate kiloton range."

Although it was by far the largest blast since Russia resumed testing 11 days ago, the AEC gave the new yield from the 100-megaton level which Soviet Premier Khrushchev has boasted his country can reach.

The second nuclear device, fired later in the day on the same arctic island as the first, was believed to be "in the low to intermediate kiloton range."

Dr. Felix Moos, director of the Biological Agency reported the air shock was felt in Japan for 15 minutes.

At the United Nations, diplomatic sources said President Kennedy plans to address the General Assembly Sept. 21, setting forth the U.S. stand for a nuclear test ban and disarmament under proper controls.

The four devotees tested before Sunday's doubleheader ranged from about the 20,000-ton equivalent of the bomb the United States set off at Hiroshima to something in the 150,000- to 200,000-ton class.

FIRED IN AIR

All Soviet nuclear blasts in this series have been fired in the atmosphere.

Because it was so much more powerful, the level of Sunday's tests presumably produced much more radioactive debris than the previous explosions.

This residue from nuclear tests in the atmosphere produces fallout that can contaminate the earth and damage both plant and animal life. As it becomes heavy enough.

U.S. experts say there is no danger from the fallout resulting from the four earlier tests, but Sunday's explosions probably would increase the possibility of deadly radiation.

The AEC said both of Sunday's blasts took place in the Novaya Zemlya area, an island archipelago in the Soviet Arctic.

Moscow radio said Sunday the Soviet first time of its resumption of tests.

Buried in a lengthy text of an interview with Soviet Premier Khrushchev by Cyrus L. Sulzberger of the New York Times, Khrushchev briefly mentioned the new tests. He said: "Now that we have detonated our bombs we shall continue the tests we have begun."

New Berlin Negotiations Predicted by Khrushchev

STALINGRAD (AP) — Premier Khrushchev chose Russia's bloodiest battleground of the Second World War to tell his people he sees "encouraging rays of hope" for settling the Berlin-German problem peacefully. He predicted "there will be negotiations."

The Soviet leader's declaration Sunday brought with it cheers from a crowd of 32,000 that included hundreds of veterans of the Battle of Stalingrad.

The premier said a nuclear war would create great destruction in Europe and Asia, but asserted that "imperialists" would be wiped out.

As Khrushchev spoke, a communique he signed jointly with Prime Minister Ulbricht of Italy was released in Moscow and New Delhi calling "for a peaceful solution of the German problem through negotiations between all concerned."

Ending his official visit to the Soviet Union, Nehru agreed with Khrushchev that general and complete disarmament under strict and effective international control was the most important question now confronting the world."

But while the accent was being placed on peace, the Soviet Union announced it will fire "more powerful and improved" multi - stake rockets into the Pacific area as well as the ginning Wednesday and continuing to Oct. 15.

The Russians have announced that these rockets could deliver super nuclear bombs with pinpoint accuracy to any part of the world. The Soviet news agency Tass warned foreign aircraft and ships a steer clear of the target area, about 1,000 miles southwest of Hawaii. This is the area used in previous Soviet long-range rocket tests.

The area is only 500 miles south of Johnston Atoll, which the United States uses as a naval base.

Khrushchev spoke of Soviet military might. But he made no mention of the weapon testings at the commissioning here of a new power plant, described as the world's largest capable of producing more than 3,700,000 horsepower.

Whatever else what he called rays of hope that war might be averted, Khrushchev said he detected a change in attitude of President de Gaulle of France and Chancellor Adenauer of West Germany toward talks with the Soviet Union and agreed and complete disarmament under strict and effective international control.

RECOVER BODIES OF MOST OF 83 CRASH VICTIMS

Plane Plunges Into River Shannon

SHANNON (Reuters) — High tidal waters on the River Shannon today hailed attempts to recover 19 bodies still in the wreckage of a United States-bound airliner which crashed here Sunday, killing all 83 aboard.

The high water drove recovery workers from the spot where the fuselage of the President Airline's DC-63 Theodore Roosevelt was submerged in thick fog within two miles of Shannon Airport after taking off after a refueling stop.

The plane was piloted by Capt. Ed Tonnesen of Los Angeles and a crew of three other Americans, Co - pilot Robert Randall, Flight Engineer Johnson and Engineer Alfred Kruger.

The 77 passengers were 63 Germans, eight Austrians, two Swiss and two Dutch.

In Duesseldorf, an official of the agricultural implement firm Mannesmann-Negner said the passengers were farmers and agricultural students invited to tour the United States by A. O. Smith of Milwaukee, an agricultural machine manufacturer.

The two stewardesses were Erika Urbas of Linz, Austria and Liz Jackson of Helsinki, Finland.

The disaster produced the biggest death toll in a plane crash in the British Isles. The previous worst was in March, 1950, when 80 died in Wales. It also was the worst disaster ever in the U.S. commercial plane overseas.

Only one person was seen coming from the plane, a woman of about 25 was pulled from the water into a launch but died in an emergency medical centre three hours later.

Relatives were arriving here today to identify the bodies. Many of the bodies were burned and mutilated but through the plane's windows others could be seen slumped forward, held by safety belts.

Local-Level Demands Bring Strike to General Motors Plants

DETROIT (AP)—United Auto Workers Union members began strikes at General Motors plants at 11 a.m. Monday after negotiations were that the giant automotive company might be shut down by Tuesday.

The UAW represents some 60,000 of the company's hourly workers remained deadlocked over numerous local-level issues. The national walkouts at key plants could make the entire company idle.

The big snag between negotiators of the UAW and GM was made up of local-level demands. Only 25 of 130 at-the-plant workers agreements have been completed.

Settlement of all local-level pacts is a necessary package, both GM and UAW agreed, to end the strike.

A new national wage package, initialed by the UAW and GM, is worth 12.04 cents hourly in take-home pay, was wrapped up last Wednesday and brought about extension of the strike deadline to 11 a.m. Monday.

Both sides were reported near agreement on the supplemental national-level package. This is the third one necessary before the company's wrapped up. One of the touchy things here was a union demand that GM adopt company-wide a 10-minute lunch coffee break for its 350,000 production workers.

The UAW reminded its locals across the country Sunday they have authority to strike when they have no at-the-plant working agreement. The UAW and GM Vice-President Louis Seaton said this amounted to an open invitation to wildcat walkouts. Wildcat strikes have been illegal since Wednesday, despite agreement on the national wage package.

Galveston Island, where Chief of Police C. L. Burns estimated only 15,000 of the 70,000 residents remained, was completely cut off from the mainland. Many coastal roads on the mainland were blocked by water from the Gulf of Mexico.

Many smaller towns were deserted. Only police officers remained to prevent looting. In Corpus Christi, where an estimated 100,000 residents were evacuated from their homes, National Guardsmen guarded the area to prevent looting.

Guardsmen and civilian workers had to use boats at times to get their own points to rescue residents who had insisted on staying in their homes.

Emergency measures were in effect in New Orleans. All schools were closed at Houston, 100 miles from the coast, and Sunday Mass was relaxed to permit purchases of needed supplies by residents.

In Town Full Hour and Did Not See Soul

HOUSTON (AP) — "It was the strangest feeling I've ever had. The whole town a full hour and didn't see a soul."

Ted Powers, an Associated Press photographer, said his trip to Freeport, threatened by hurricane Carla, was the toughest assignment he has had in the 17 years with the AP.

"I drove around as best I could for an hour and it didn't see anybody—not even a policeman," he said Saturday. "Then I saw a television repairman.

"I think I talked him out of going down there when I told him I was deserted," Powers said after he returned to Houston.

Freeport's 12,000 residents left and the city was evacuated even before Carla's advance workers Sunday afternoon and began force holding back the high tides of hurricane Carla broke.

"There was some hurricane flags flying downtown, and they were in tatters," Powers said.

"The flags were just pieces of cloth now. Here and there fallen signs and water blocked a lot of the streets. I honked my automobile horn but the wind was blowing so hard I couldn't hearyit inside the car."
